MEMORANDUM OF LAW

Celsius Network, LLC, ("Celsius") was a multi-billion dollar business that, among other things, mined cryptocurrency, was a depository for cryptocurrency (permitting customers to earn rewards or borrow against the cryptocoins), and engaged in institutional lending.¹ On July 13, 2022, Celsius and its affiliates filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.²

A few hours prior to the bankruptcy filing, Defendant Lyndon Perry made a post on the "@lporiginalg" twitter account comparing a statement Celsius had made about customers having unlimited access to their funds with a Reuters headline about Celsius pausing all transfers and withdrawals. Shortly thereafter, a collage about the company was posted by Mr. Perry,³ juxtaposing a Celsius employee, Jessica Khater, who was noted in a Forbes 30-under-30 piece about managing $300 million in bitcoin assets for Celsius, with a still from an interview with Ms. Khater, (where she was fully clothed) in a prelude to a pornographic film she appeared in, talking about studying business and marketing. Defendant commented "Same company, btw." Plaintiff MCM Group 22, LLC, claims to now hold the copyright to that pornographic film and filed this suit against Mr. Perry for alleged infringement of the work.⁴ The suit must be dismissed for failure to state a claim⁵ — Plaintiff does not own the copyright and, more important, the alleged infringement was fair use. Given the fair use issue here, and the way that Plaintiff is abusing copyright to suppress legitimate criticism of a multibillion dollar flop of a cryptocurrency firm, the Court should grant the Defendant its fees for defending this action as provided by 17 U.S.C. § 505.

N.Y., pet. filed Jul. 13, 2022).

³ Mr. Perry does not dispute it was made by him, and he even attested to such in this matter already. See ECF No. 17 at \P 3-4.

On July 13, 2022, Mr. Perry posted a tweet from his @lporiginalg twitter account. ECF No. 1, Complaint at ¶ 24 (citing https://twitter.com/lporiginalg/status/1536220472525803520). That tweet contained, in part, a still image from a video identified as the "Registered Work" in the Complaint. Id. at ¶¶ 24 & 25.6 The following day, Plaintiff filed for copyright registration of the video.

7 Id. at ¶ 13. In other words, even if there was infringement, it occurred after registration.

According to the copyright registration (ECF No. 1-1), which Plaintiff incorporated into the complaint (ECF No. 1 at ¶ 12), the untitled video was created in 2016 and bore an alternate title of "GDP 349." Its author was "BLL Media Inc." Plaintiff claims ownership "[B]y restitution order, then by written agreement." ECF No. 1-1. More specifically, Plaintiff states that the video was filmed in New York City in 2015 by the "founders and operators of the website

⁷ Plaintiff concedes that the timing of this registration and the original 2016 publication of the video (ECF No. 1-1) precludes recovery of statutory damages and/or attorneys' fees under 17 U.S.C. §§ 412, 504 & 505. See ECF No. 15. Plaintiff disclaims seeking such in the Complaint (id.), though the Complaint is ambiguous. To the extent the Complaint can be construed to include such, it should be dismissed. See Skoogfors v. Lycos, Inc., 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61926, *9 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 21, 2017)("As is the case with statutory damages, an award of attorneys' fees is only proper if the work was registered prior to the infringement or after infringement but within three months after initial publication. 17 U.S.C. § 412.")

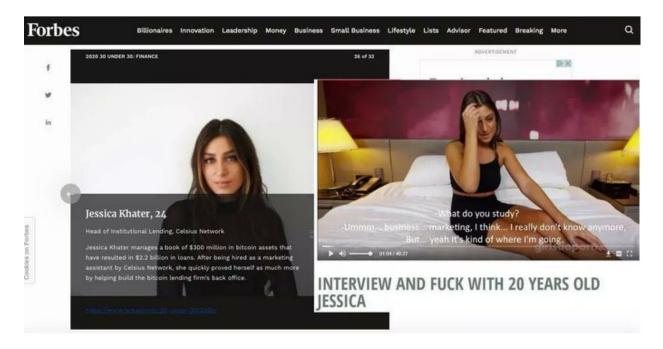

Gilrsdoporn.com and Girlsdotoys.com," which are referred to as "GDP". ECF No. 1 at ¶ 13. Plaintiff claims that it was assigned the rights relative to the video belonging to a Non-party Jane Doe, who was depicted in the video. ECF No. 1 at ¶¶ 11 & 15. Presumably, this is the "written agreement" referred to in the copyright registration. Compare id. with ECF No. 1-1. Plaintiff further claims that Doe, in turn, obtained the copyright in the video pursuant to court order. ECF No. 1 at ¶ 14, citing United States v. Ruben Andre Garcia (3), Case No. 19-cr-4488-JLS (S.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2021). Presumably, this is the "restitution order" identified in the copyright registration. Compare id. with ECF No. 1-1. Absent, however, in that order is anything suggesting how Mr. Garcia obtained the copyright when BLL Media was identified by Plaintiff as the authors.⁸

This is not the whole story. Notably, the Complaint does not even show the Court the alleged infringement.⁹ This is it:

⁹ The alleged infringement is a part of the Complaint under Rule 10(c), and it is subject to judicial notice. "In considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), a district court may consider the facts alleged in the complaint, documents attached to the complaint as exhibits, and documents incorporated by reference in the complaint." DiFolco v. MSNBC Cable L.L.C., 622 F.3d 104, 111 (2d Cir. 2010) (citing Chambers v. Time Warner, Inc., 282 F.3d 147 (2d Cir. 2002) and Hayden v. Cty. of Nassau, 180 F.3d 42, 54 (2d Cir. 1999)). "Where a document is not incorporated by reference, the court may never[the]less consider it where the complaint relies heavily upon its terms and effect, thereby rendering the document integral to the complaint." Gallagher v. Empire HealthChoice Assurance, Inc., 339 F. Supp. 3d 248, 254 (S.D.N.Y. 2018) (alteration in original) (quotation marks omitted). The Court may also consider "extrinsic materials" that are "either integral to [the] complaint or an appropriate subject for judicial notice." Glob. Network Commc'ns, Inc. v. City of New York, 458 F.3d 150, 156 (2d Cir. 2006). The alleged infringement is integral to the complaint. See Hirsch v. CBS Broad. Inc., 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 123468, *2 n.1 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2017); accord Tanksley v. Daniels, 902 F.3d 165, 172 (3d Cir. 2018)("The copyrighted and allegedly infringing works will necessarily be integral to an infringement complaint and are therefore properly considered under Rule 12(b)(6).").

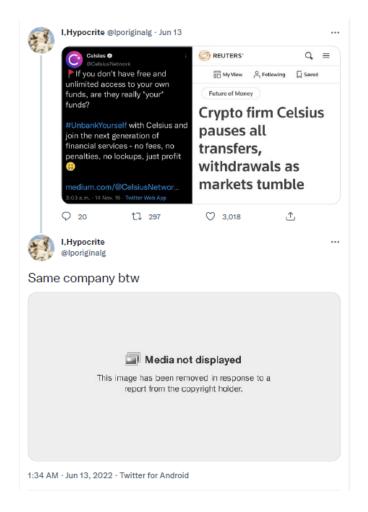

See Exhibit 7. See also Exhibit 3, Declaration of Lyndon Perry, at ¶ 2. Specifically, the alleged infringement (which is not even infringing) is of a single frame of the 46 minute and 27-second-long film, wherein a fully-clothed woman named Jessica is asked what she studies, and she responds "Ummm...business...marketing. I think... I really don't know anymore, but...yeah it's kind of where I'm going." And, that frame is superimposed on the appearance of Jessica Khater in the Forbes 30 Under 30 for 2020, highlighting her management of a book of $300 million in bitcoin assets for Celsius Network, which states:

Head of institutional lending at Celsius Network, Jessica Khater manages a book of $300 million in bitcoin assets that have resulted in $2.2 billion in loans. After being hired as a marketing assistant by Celsius Network, she quickly proved herself as much more by helping build the bitcoin lending firm's back office.

There is no question that the two images are of the same woman.

As discussed above, on July 13, 2022, Celsius and its affiliates filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. ¹⁰ See supra, n.2. Earlier that day, Mr. Perry made the tweet at issue:

¹⁰ "Judicial notice may be taken of public filings[.]" Kavowras v. N.Y. Times Co., 328 F.3d 50, 57 (2d Cir. 2003).

See Exhibit 3, Declaration of Lyndon Perry at ¶ 3. Notably, the tweet at issue is the second tweet in Mr. Perry's thread where he says "Same company btw" while posting the composite image (which has been removed by Twitter due to Plaintiff's actions). The first tweet in the thread juxtaposed a tweet by Celsius stating, in part, "If you don't have free and unlimited access to your own funds, are they really your funds?" with a Reuters article entitled "Crypto firm Celsius" pauses all transfers, withdrawals as markets tumble". Thus, the use of the still of Ms. Khater talking about wanting to work in business, alongside her Forbes appearance highlighting her work for Celsius, was part of a statement by Mr. Perry about Celsius, which had engaged in hypocrisy by not allowing customers to make withdrawals as promised. Plaintiff apparently does not like this commentary and wishes to suppress that commentary by misusing copyright law.

2.0 Legal Standard

"To survive a motion to dismiss [pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6)], a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." *Ashcroft v. Supp.2d 116, 118 (N.D.N.Y. 1998) (taking judicial notice of the fact that a particular article appeared on the front page of the New York Law Journal); Ganino v. Citizens Utilities Corp., 228 F.3d 154, 166-67 (2d Cir. 2000) (district court may take judicial notice of well-publicized stock prices without converting the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment).

entitlement to relief," Twombly, 550 U.S. at 558, or where a plaintiff has "not nudged [his] claims across the line from conceivable to plausible, the[] complaint must be dismissed." Id. at 570. Plaintiff's claims are not plausible.

3.0 Argument

Ms. Khater's assignee cannot bring a claim for infringement when her own claim to copyright ownership was invalid. And, even if that were not the case, Plaintiff knew that fair use required dismissal—going so far as to attempt, through conclusory allegations in the complaint and mere assertions that the issue was one that could not be resolved on a motion to dismiss to try to avoid the issue. See ECF No. 1 & 15. This is not a case about perpetuating whatever crimes the original producers of the video created. Ms. Khater appeared in a pornographic film, discussing wanting to study business. She cannot make that fact disappear by misusing copyright law. Plaintiff cannot abuse copyright law to remove First Amendment protected speech, enshrined in the fair use doctrine. This matter should be dismissed with prejudice and fees must be awarded to the defendant.

3.1 The Publication Was Fair Use

Although Plaintiff attempts to plead around fair use in the Complaint through conclusory allegations, the publication of the composite image of a single still frame of a 46 minute video in a discussion about Ms. Khater's employer meets every fair use factor.¹³

Under the Copyright Act, "the fair use of a copyrighted work, including such use by reproduction ... for purposes such as criticism, comment, [or] news reporting... is not an infringement of copyright." 17 U.S.C. § 107. There are four factors should be considered in determining whether the use of a work is fair use:

¹³ First Amendment protected speech is vindicated through the fair use doctrine. See S.A.R.L. Louis Feraud Int'l v. Viewfinder, Inc., 489 F.3d 474, 482 (2d Cir. 2007).

- (1) the purpose and character of the use, including whether such use is of a commercial nature or is for nonprofit educational purposes;
- (2) the nature of the copyrighted work;
- (3) the amount and substantiality of the portion used in relation to the copyrighted work as a whole; and
- (4) the effect of the use upon the potential market for or value of the copyrighted work.

Id. As these factors indicate, "the determination of fair use is an open-ended and context-sensitive inquiry." Blanch v. Koons, 467 F.3d 244, 251 (2d Cir. 2006). These factors are not viewed "in isolation, one from another. All are to be explored, and the results weighed together, in light of the purposes of copyright." Campbell v. Acuff-Rose Music, Inc., 510 U.S. 569, 578 (1994).

3.1.1 The Purpose and Character is Transformative

The first factor focuses on "whether the new work merely 'supersede[s] the objects' of the original creation or instead adds something new." Campbell, supra at 579 (quoting Folsom v. Marsh, 9 F. Cas. 342, 348 (C.C.D. Mass. 1841)) (internal citation omitted). "[T]he primary inquiry is whether the use 'communicates something new and different from the original or [otherwise] expands its utility,' that is, whether the use is 'transformative.'" Fox News Network, LLC v. Tveyes, Inc., 883 F.3d 169, 176 (2d Cir. 2018) (quoting Authors Guild v. Google, Inc., 804 F.3d 202, 214 (2d Cir. 2015)). "'Although . . . transformative use is not absolutely necessary for a finding of fair use, . . . [transformative] works . . . lie at the heart of [the fair use doctrine" Id. (quoting Campbell, 510 U.S. at 579). In this factor, courts also consider commercialism and bad faith. Fox News Network, 883 F.3d at 176. Notably, "the more transformative the work, the less will be the significance of the other factors, like commercialism, that may weigh against a finding of fair use." Campbell, 510 U.S. at 579. And, as to bad faith, "while the good or bad faith of a defendant generally should be considered, it generally contributes little to fair use analysis." NXIVM Corp. v. Ross Inst., 364 F.3d 471, 479 n.2 (2d Cir. 2004).

Here, the use was transformative. It juxtaposed, in a thread discussing Celsius's dubious business practices, Celsius's hiring Ms. Khater, and all that goes with her pornographic career (however limited it may have been). It was in the form of a collage, with the Forbes image, being the type of transformation that favors fair use. In Blanch v. Koons, an artist incorporated a photograph of feet wearing Gucci sandals into a collage "commenting on the 'commercial images . . . in our consumer culture." 467 F.3d 244, 248 (2d Cir. 2006). This was fair use in part because the collage was transformative. Id. at 252-53. The collage and the photo had "sharply different" purposes and the collage was intended to be a "commentary on the social and aesthetic consequences of mass media." Id. Here, the image was used as a commentary on Celsius, and it was not merely for masturbatory purposes, unlike the video at issue. "While courts have declined to find a transformative use when the defendant has 'done no more than find a new way to exploit the creative virtues of the original work,' . . . courts have found a secondary use to be transformative when it is 'plainly different from the original purpose for which [the copyrighted work was] created' — even where a secondary user has made an exact replication of a copyrighted image." Sarl Louis Feraud Int'l v. Viewfinder Inc., 627 F. Supp. 2d 123, 128-29 (S.D.N.Y. 2008) (citations omitted). Although Mr. Perry could have said "Celsius is the same company that hired Jessica Khater, who appeared in a pornographic video talking about her plans to work in business and marketing", the law is not so restrictive. Commentary about a video "might fairly display a screenshot or clip from that video to illustrate what all the fuss is about." Barcroft Media, Ltd. v. Coed Media Grp., LLC, 297 F. Supp. 3d 339, 352 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) citing Kali Konangataa v. ABC, U.S. Dist. LEXIS 95812 at *1 (S.D.N.Y. June 21, 2017). Thus, the use of the still was transformative. If this Court holds otherwise, it will be a very novel approach to this factor, at odds with these other decisions.

Plaintiff claims that Defendant's use was commercial, in order to obtain donations or pledges. ECF No. 1 at ¶ 34. There is nothing in the tweet itself seeking donations or pledges. See Exhibit 4. See also Exhibit 3 at ¶ 3. None of the methods for obtaining revenue identified in the Complaint (ECF No. 1 at ¶ 5) appear with the tweet. While Defendant acknowledges that, through a series of steps, someone seeing the tweet could, eventually, donate money to him, that is no more commercial than the fact that one could write a check to any artist or journalist who makes fair use of a work. Donations are not commercial activity as they "are not part of the trade and commerce engaged in by a merchant in the marketplace." In re Terrorist Attacks on September 11, 2001, 538 F.3d 71, 92 (2d Cir. 2008) (citation and quotation marks omitted). Even if it was, somehow, commercial, the Second Circuit has noted that "[t]he Supreme Court in Campbell rejected the notion that the commercial nature of the use could by itself be a dispositive consideration. The Campbell opinion observes that nearly all of the illustrative uses listed in the preamble paragraph of § 107, including news reporting, comment, criticism, teaching, scholarship, and research are generally conducted for profit and that Congress could not have intended a rule that commercial uses are presumptively unfair." NXIVM Corp. v. Ross Inst., 364 F.3d 471, 477-478 (2d Cir. 2004) (cleaned up). Mr. Perry was not selling his tweets. To the extent his use could even be characterized as commercial, it is of a kind recognized to be proper in NXIVM.

Neither is there any bad faith. Compare Rogers v. Koons, 960 F.2d 301, 309 (2d Cir. 1992) ("tearing the copyright mark off of a work suggests bad faith"). Here, there is no suggestion Defendant claimed the still was his own work or removed any authorship or copyright credit. In fact, the "girlsdoporn.com" watermark is visible on the still as part of the college in the tweet thread commentary. In fact, crediting the original source is part of the point of the discussion. A flop of a company hired a clueless porn participant for a key position and then it went out of business. "Bad faith" here would require hiding that fact, making the entire commentary pointless. Thus, in weighing these considerations, the transformative use, lack of bad faith, and mere stature as someone to whom donations could be made, the first factor cuts in favor of a fair use finding.

3.1.2 The Nature of the Work Favors Fair Use

Although Plaintiff claims the nature of the work is how it came to be (ECF No. 1 at ¶ 35), how it came to be, whether procured through fraud upon Ms. Khater or not, does not change what it is: a non-fiction pornographic film (as opposed to one with a creative storyline). See Exhibit 5 at 2-3. See also Exhibit 2 at ¶ 3. ("The site features sex videos of young women between the ages of 18 and 23. [GDP's] business is premised on the construct that the women in the videos are not professional porn stars but are amateur college-aged women filming pornography for the first and only time.") Under the second factor, whether the work was previously published and whether it is informational or creative is considered. See Byrne v. BBC, 132 F. Supp. 2d 229, 235 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) ("Previously published works . . . qualify for 'far less protection' against fair use."); Mattel Inc. v. Walking Mountain Prods., 353 F.3d 792, 803 (9th Cir. 2003) ("creative works are 'closer to the core of intended copyright protection' than informational and functional works."). Yet, "[t]his factor 'has rarely played a significant role in the determination of a fair use dispute." Fox News Network, 883 F.3d at 178 (quoting Authors Guild, 804 F.3d at 220). Here, the work is not creative—it is an interview and intercourse; in essence, it is a documentary, making it an informational and functional work. And, as Plaintiff is well aware, being the premise of the prior suit, the video was previously published. The fact that the original author of the work was found to be a terrible company makes no difference. Every one of Harvey Weinstein's victims who later appeared in one of his movies will not get to suppress the fact that they were in the films. The second factor supports a fair use finding.

3.1.3 Defendant Used an Insubstantial Amount of the Work

A single still is insubstantial and favors fair use. "The clear implication of the third factor is that a finding of fair use is more likely when small amounts, or less important passages, are copied than when the copying is extensive, or encompasses the most important parts of the original." Authors Guild v. Google, Inc., 804 F.3d 202, 221 (2d Cir. 2015). Here, the frame shows it was taken from a video 46 minutes and 27 seconds long. Assuming a standard frame rate of 30 frames per second, this means that it is 1/83,610 of the work. Faroudja Labs., Inc. v. Dwin Elecs., Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22987, *2-3 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 24, 1999); ProtoComm Corp. v. Fluent, Inc., 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18461, *4-5 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 23, 1994) ("a full motion movie quality video is generally recorded and displayed at the frame rate of thirty frames per second"). That is hardly a substantial portion of the work. And, it is well possible the work was shot and published at the higher-resolution 60 frames per second, making the still 1/167,220 of the work.

A video is not a group registration under 37 C.F.R. § 202.4—each frame is not a separate work. Moreover, this factor weighs less for a photograph "where all or most of the work often must be used in order to preserve any meaning at all — than a work such as a text or musical composition, where bits and pieces can be excerpted without losing all value." N. Jersey Media Group, Inc. v. Jeanine Pirro & Fox News Network, LLC, 74 F. Supp. 3d 605, 621 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 10, 2015) (quoting Fitzgerald v. CBS Broad., Inc., 491 F. Supp. 2d 177, 188 (D. Mass. 2007)). Here, Defendant would need to show the image of Ms. Khater, at the moment she was talking about her plans to work in business or marketing, and used nothing else.

Of course, Fair Use recognizes when the "heart of the work" is taken, it can vitiate against a finding of fair use. See Harper & Row, Publrs. v. Nation Enters., 471 U.S. 539, 566 (1985). In that case, The Nation took a small portion of a biography of President Ford and reproduced it. However, the court found that since it was the heart of the work, it was not fair use. In this case though, this is a pornographic movie. The "heart" of the work would be, well perhaps indelicate to describe here – but it certainly would at least be the nude or sex parts – not the pre-interview with the participant about business or marketing before the pornographic manifestations began. Thus, this factor heavily favors Defendant (as an infinitesimal fraction of the work) or is, at worst, neutral, as "no more [of the work] was taken than necessary." Infinity Broad. Corp. v. Kirkwood, 150 F.3d 104, 110 (2d Cir. 1998) (quoting Campbell, 510 U.S. at 589).

3.1.4 The Use Increases, Rather than Decreases, the Market Value

Plaintiff admits that the use "has the effect of increasing the public's demand for...the Registered Work[.]" ECF No. 1 at ¶ 36. The fourth factor "is 'undoubtedly the single most important element of fair use,' Fox News Network, 883 F.3d at 179 (quoting Harper & Row v. Nation at 566), and focuses on "whether the copy brings to the marketplace a competing substitute for the original, or its derivative, so as to deprive the rights holder of significant revenues because of the likelihood that potential purchasers may opt to acquire the copy in preference to the original." Id. (quoting Authors Guild, 804 F.3d at 223). This factor requires consideration of "not only the . . . market harm caused by the particular actions of the alleged infringer,' but also the market harm that would result from 'unrestricted and widespread conduct of the [same] sort." Id. (quoting Campbell, 510 U.S. at 590 (internal quotation marks and alteration omitted)). Here, there is no market harm at all. In fact, Plaintiff pleads as such.

In Sony Corp. of Am. v. Universal City Studios, Inc., 464 U.S. 417, 451 (1984), the Supreme Court stated that "[a] challenge to a noncommercial use of a copyrighted work requires proof either that the particular use is harmful, or that if it should become widespread, it would adversely affect the potential market for the copyrighted work." In Campbell, the Court clarified that this presumption of market harm for commercial uses only applies where the use of the work is not transformative. Campbell, 510 U.S. at 591 ("No 'presumption' or inference of market harm that might find support in Sony is applicable to a case involving something beyond mere duplication for commercial purposes."). Here, there is no presumption of market harm: The use was non-commercial and transformative and, Plaintiff admits there is no harm to the market.

While Ms. Khater and Plaintiff may not like it, the purpose of Copyright law is to increase the market value. "[T]he protection of privacy is not a function of the copyright law. . . . To the contrary, the copyright law offers a limited monopoly to encourage ultimate public access to the creative work of the author." Bond v. Blum, 317 F.3d 385, 395 (4th Cir. 2003). Thus, this fourth factor as well supports the conclusion that Defendant's use of the image was lawful, fair use.

3.2 In the Alternative, Even if the Use was not "Fair Use," the Plaintiff Does Not Own the Copyright

MCM Group, LLC, does not legally hold the copyright, notwithstanding its conclusory allegation, precluding it from making a claim. "Copyright ... is a creature of statute, and the only rights that exit under copyright law are those granted by statute." Silvers v. Sony Pictures Entm't, Inc., 402 F.3d 881, 883-84 (9th Cir. 2005); accord Stone v. Williams, 970 F.2d 1043, 1051 (2d Cir. 1992). Section 501(b) of the Copyright Act establishes who may sue for infringement of a copyright, authorizing:

The legal or beneficial owner of an exclusive right under a copyright ... to institute an action for any infringement of that particular right committed while he or she is the owner of it.

17 U.S.C. § 501(b); see also Russian Entm't Wholesale, Inc. v. Close-Up Intern., Inc., 482 F. App'x 602, 604 (2d Cir. 2012) ("[T]he legal or beneficial owner of an exclusive right under a copyright is entitled ... to institute an action for any infringement of that particular right committed while he or she is the owner of it." (emphasis in original)) (summary order). In the absence of ownership or an exclusive license, MCM Group 22 lacks authority to bring the instant claim. See John Wiley & Sons, Inc. v. DRK Photo, 998 F. Supp. 2d 262, 277 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 21, 2014).

Although Plaintiff argues that its copyright registration is presumptively valid under 17 U.S.C. § 410 (ECF No. 15 at 2), Plaintiff ignores the relevant text of that statute. Under 17 U.S.C § 410(c) a "certificate of a registration made before or within five years after first publication of the work shall constitute prima facie evidence of the validity of the copyright and of the facts stated in the certificate." (emphasis added). Typically, this means that the party challenging the validity of the copyright has the burden to prove the validity. See Hamil America Inc. v. GFI, 193 F.3d 92, 98 (2d Cir. 1999). Here, the registration was made more than five years after publication, as noted on the certificate. Thus, it lacks presumptive validity, and the burden has not shifted to Defendant. Moreover, even if it were timely, "the presumption of validity may be rebutted where other evidence in the record casts doubt on the question." Fonar Corp. v. Domenick, 105 F.3d 99, 104 (2d Cir. 1997). As set forth below, the record sufficiently would rebut that presumption.

3.2.1 The Purported Chain of Title is Broken

Although, as discussed below, title could not be transferred by court order, even if it could, Plaintiff lacks title to the copyright and the case must be dismissed. MCM Group 22, LLC, is not the author of the video. As noted above, it claims assignment from Ms. Khater, who claims she got it by a court order in the Garcia prosecution. That order purported to declare that the "models" who participated for GDP "hold[] superior right, title, and interest" in the videos of them and that they "shall have and recover all property that GDP took from them, including...copyrights." See Exhibit 1. BLL Media, Inc., is not mentioned; moreover, this was an order against Garcia, not BLL Media, and it does not appear that BLL Media was within the court's jurisdiction. The author of the video, as admitted by Plaintiff, is BLL Media, Inc. The court order against Garcia was "joint and several with all co-defendants and co-conspirators ordered to pay restitution for the same losses" who were identified as "Michael James Pratt, Matthew Isaac Wolfe, Theodore Wilfred Gyi, and Valerie Moser." See Exhibit 6. See also Exhibit 2 at ¶ 4. None of them were BLL Media, Inc. Thus, Ms. Khater never obtained any rights to the video from BLL Media, Inc., which remains the copyright owner.

In a prior filing with this Court (ECF No. 15), Plaintiff referred to a judgment in the matter of Jane Doe Nos. 1-22 v. GIRLSDOPORN.COM, Case No. 37-2016-00019027-CU-FR-CTL (San Diego Cty., Cal. Jan. 2, 2020) (hereinafter "GDP Order"), in which Garcia and BLL Media, Inc. were deemed alter egos. But, that mere declaration does not mean they were alter egos for all purposes—the declaration was as to finding joint liability. See Exhibit 5 at 174-78. That does not mean that every defendant in that California case, therefore, was legally indistinct from every other defendant—taken to its logical extreme it would mean that the spouse of one defendant is now the spouse of every defendant. See McLoughlin v. L. Bloom Sons Co., 206 Cal. App. 2d 848, 853 (1962) ("The alter ego doctrine is founded in equity and its application is not made to depend upon prior decisions involving factual situations which appear to be similar."); accord, County of Oneida v. Oneida Indian Nation, 470 U.S. 226, 266 (1985) ("Even if the counties are considered for some purposes to be the alter ego of the State..."). The GDP Order, therefore, does not establish that ¹⁴ Although not on the public docket, Mr. Perry will assume for purposes of this motion that Ms. Khater was one of the models.

Garcia was the copyright owner as an alter ego of BLL Media, even if they are alter egos for liability purposes. If Plaintiff is to show subject matter jurisdiction based on the restitution order, it must prove BLL Media and Garcia are alter egos for the purpose of who was the author of the video and, therefore, the copyright owner.

3.2.2 Neither Order Lawfully Effected Transfer of the Copyright

Neither the Garcia order nor the GDP order could transfer copyright from BLL Media to Ms. Khater.¹⁵ Neither order assessed whether what the order purported to do was proper under copyright law—it wasn't. And, neither Defendant nor this Court are bound by those orders.

To the extent either order purported to transfer copyright ownership to Ms. Khater, they are invalid. As set forth under 17 U.S.C. § 204, "A transfer of copyright ownership, other than by operation of law, is not valid unless an instrument of conveyance, or a note or memorandum of the transfer, is in writing and signed by the owner of the rights conveyed or such owner's duly authorized agent." Here, there was no signed conveyance by BLL Media (or Garcia) or its agent. Plaintiff pleads ownership by virtue of the Restitution Order (ECF No. 1 at ¶ 15) and otherwise argues that the GDP Order effected transfer (ECF No. 15 at 3). Transfers by "operation of law" tends to mean by corporate dissolution, mergers, bankruptcy, or death. See, e.g., Brooks v. Bates, 781 F. Supp. 202, 205 (S.D.N.Y. 1991). "Operation of law" does not mean by court order—such is a legally distinct term. Contrast 18 U.S.C. § 1204(b)(2)(B) (defining "parental rights" as "the right to physical custody of the child . . . whether arising by operation of law, court order, or legally binding agreement of the parties."); accord In re Rogers, 51 F. Supp. 930, 932 (S.D.N.Y. 1942) (noting transfer of title to rights "merely by operation of law" and "without any court order").

Plaintiff has asserted that the question of whether the transfer is "voluntary" is a fact question to be resolved (ECF No. 15 at 3), but voluntariness is not at issue. Thus, neither order constituted a valid assignment.

Similarly, to the extent either order purported to declare Ms. Khater was an author of the work, who would originally be entitled to copyright ownership, and void any transfer to BLL Media, it is ineffective. "Copyright in a work protected under [the Copyright Act] vests initially in the author or authors of the work." 17 U.S.C. § 201(a). "The authors of a joint work are co-owners of copyright in the work." Id. Ms. Khater, however, was not an author and copyright never vested in her such that she made any transfer.

"As a general rule, the author is the party who actually creates the work, that is, the person who translates an idea into a fixed, tangible expression entitled to copyright protection." Cmty. for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730, 737 (1989). A mere participant, like Ms. Khater, is not the one who "fixes" the work in the tangible medium, precluding a claim of authorship. Garcia v. Google, Inc., 786 F.3d 733, 743-744 (9th Cir. 2015). The Second Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with the holding in Garcia. 16 Casa Duse, LLC v. Merkin, 791 F.3d 247, 258-259 (2d Cir. 2015). Thus, even to the extent the Restitution Order and GDP Order voided Ms. Khater's agreement with BLL Media, she had not actually transferred any copyright interest to them because she did not have one to begin with. Thus, as Ms. Khater never had copyright and none was lawfully transferred to her, Plaintiff has no derivative rights as her assignee and this matter must be dismissed.

4.0 Defendant is Entitled to His Fees

Awarding fees to Mr. Perry satisfies the primary objective of the Copyright Act. The Copyright Act provides that a "court in its discretion may allow the recovery of full costs [and] a reasonable attorney's fee to the prevailing party." 17 U.S.C. § 505; see Fogerty v. Fantasy, Inc., 510 U.S. 517, 523 (1994). In Fogerty, the Supreme Court recognized that HN3 "The primary objective of the Copyright Act is to encourage the production of original literary, artistic, and musical expression for the good of the public." Id. at 524.

Because copyright law ultimately serves the purpose of enriching the general public through access to creative works, it is peculiarly important that the boundaries of copyright law be demarcated as clearly as possible. To that end, defendants who seek to advance a variety of meritorious copyright defenses should be encouraged to litigate them to the same extent that plaintiffs are encouraged to litigate meritorious claims of infringement. In the case before us, the successful defense of "The Old Man Down the Road" increased public exposure to a musical work that could, as a result, lead to further creative pieces. Thus a successful defense of a copyright infringement action may further the policies of the Copyright Act every bit as much as a successful prosecution of an infringement claim by the holder of a copyright.

Id. at 527. The Second Circuit has applied this standard in affirming the awarding of attorneys' fees and costs to successful defendants in an infringement action. Polsby v. St. Martin's Press, 8 Fed. App'x. 90, 92-93 (2d Cir. 2001); Bauer v. Yellen, 375 Fed. App'x. 154, 155-156 (2d Cir. 2010). Plaintiff chose to pursue this case, even after Defendant filed his pre-motion letter, knowing full well that fair use was a complete bar to the claim and the legal ownership of the copyright was tenuous. A failure to impose a penalty on plaintiffs for proceeding with such a meritless claim would simply "invite others to bring similarly unreasonable actions without fear of any consequences." Baker v. Urban Outfitters, Inc., 431 F. Supp. 2d 351, 359-60 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (quoting Earth Flag, Ltd. v. Alamo Flag Co., 154 F. Supp. 2d 663, 668 (S.D.N.Y. 2001). This is not even Ms. Khater, pro se, trying to erase her past, but a corporate entity, represented by counsel, filing suit as part of its business. In light of plaintiff's conduct and history, there must be consequences here. 16

5.0 Conclusion

Mr. Perry recognizes that Plaintiff is in the business of attempting to rehabilitate Ms. Khater's public image. It can do so, and should do so, without making frivolous copyright claims. Not only is there any absence of ownership of the copyright at issue, but the Complaint and the documents that the Court may take notice of or are otherwise integral to it demonstrate that the use of a single still was lawful, fair use. The Court should swiftly dismiss the case before the parties are forced to engage in costly, intrusive, and unnecessary discovery and, upon motion, award Defendant his fees.

RESTITUTION ORDER

REDACTED

Defendant Ruben Andre GARCIA appeared before the Court for sentencing on June 14, 2021, for sex trafficking by force, fraud, and coercion, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1591(a)(1) and (a)(2), and conspiracy to commit sex trafficking by force, fraud, and coercion, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1594(c). The Court sentenced GARCIA to 240 months custody per count to run concurrent on each count.

The United States has sought restitution for the victims of the offenses based upon 18 U.S.C. § 1593. Restitution is mandatory under Section 1593, and orders of restitution under Section 1593 are issued and enforced in accordance with Section 3664 and in the same manner as an order under Section 3663A. 18 U.S.C. § 1593(b)(2). The amount of loss and causation must be proven by the government by a preponderance of the evidence. United States v. Eyraud, 809 F.3d 462, 467 (9th Cir. 2015).

The Court held a restitution hearing on October 8, 2021, and December 10, 2021, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3664(d)(5). The government presented evidence of the losses incurred by the victims in its Motion Regarding Restitution and supporting materials. The government's evidence was not disputed by GARCIA.

Based upon all the files and records in this case, for which the Court takes judicial notice, and in consideration of the government's Motion Regarding Restitution, and supporting materials, the Court finds that the government has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that the restitution sought by the government is appropriate pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1593. The Court makes the following factual findings and orders the restitution set forth below.

FINDINGS OF FACT

- 1. On December 17, 2020, GARCIA pled guilty to counts one and seven of the indictment charging defendant with one count of conspiracy to commit sex trafficking, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1594(c), and one count of sex trafficking by force, fraud, or coercion, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1591(a)(1) and (2).
- 2. Beginning in approximately 2013 and continuing up to October 2019, GARCIA participated in a conspiracy with Michael James Pratt, Matthew Isaac Wolfe, Theodore Wilfred Gyi, Valerie Moser, and others, to recruit Victims 1-5, as identified in the Indictment, and others, to engage in commercial sex acts using force, fraud and coercion. Those sex acts were ultimately posted on Girlsdoporn.com (GDP) and girlsdotoys.com (GDT). GDP and GDT charged visitors a subscription fee to access the websites' content. The GDP and GDT websites generated millions of dollars in revenue for its owners.

- 3. Throughout the conspiracy, GDP and GDT received millions of views. To promote the websites, video content from both sites was posted on free porn sites such as pornhub.com, one of the world's most visited websites. The videos from GDP and GDT posted on pornhub.com were often viewed millions of times according to pornhub's view counters.
- 4. From approximately 2013 to October 2019, GARCIA was employed at GDP. GARCIA recruited women to appear in videos for GDP/GDT and appeared as the male actor in the videos for GDP. GARCIA was paid a commission for each woman that he recruited on top of an hourly rate for his employment.
- 5. To recruit victims to appear in videos for the websites, GARCIA lied to the victims and told them that the videos would never be posted on-line, that the videos would never be released in the United States, and that no one who knew the women would ever find out about the video, representations that Defendant and other members of the conspiracy knew were false. Hundreds of women from various cities throughout the United States and Canada were recruited to appear in videos based upon these material misrepresentations. GARCIA and his coconspirators illegally obtained the images and videos of the victims using force, fraud, and coercion.
- 6. There are hundreds of victims in this case who have been and continue to be victimized by the posting and viewing of the GDP and GDT images and videos. The victims are identified in the attached Exhibit A to this order, which shall remain under seal, except for redacted copies to be provided to individual victims identified therein who seek to enforce the terms of this order.

- 7. The victims in this case have incurred the losses set forth in the Government's Motion Regarding Restitution and supporting materials. The losses include medical expenses, counseling expenses, lost income, unused tuition, and legal fees. The victims will also incur expenses in the future, including for medical and psychological care, as set forth in the government's motion.
- 8. The gross income of the victims' services generated from the scheme, as defined by 18 U.S.C. § 1593(b)(3), was $16,922,798. This equates to $42,097 per victim identified in Attachment A.

RESTITUTION

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

- A. Return of the Rights to the GDP and GDT Videos and Images to Victims
- Defendant Ruben Andre GARCIA, aka "Jonathan," has no right to use, publish, or otherwise exploit GirlsDoPorn (GDP) or GirlsDoToys (GDT) images, likenesses, or videos;
- 2. All purported model releases and other agreements between GDP and/or GDT and its models purporting to give GDP and/or GDT the right to use, publish, or otherwise exploit its models' images, likenesses, or videos are void and unenforceable;
- 3. All transfers, licenses, or leases of the right to use, publish, or otherwise exploit the models' images, likenesses, or videos by GDP and/or GDT to any third parties are void;

- 4. Each model listed in Attachment A holds superior right, title, and interest in the images, likenesses, and videos depicting that model produced by GDP and/or GDT; and
- 5. Each model listed in Attachment A shall have and recover all property that GDP and/or GDT took from them, including images, likenesses, videos, and copyrights.

B. Return of the Gross Income from the Scheme to the Victims

Defendant Ruben Andre GARCIA, aka "Jonathan," is ordered to repay to the victims the gross income generated from the scheme in the amount of $42,097 per victim identified in Attachment A for a total of $16,922,798.

C. Restitution of Specified Victim Losses

Defendant Ruben Andre GARCIA, aka "Jonathan," is further ordered to pay restitution to the victims of this offense in the amounts set forth below:

| Victim | Total Restitution |

Having considered the pleadings, evidence presented, and arguments of counsel, and having assessed the credibility of the witnesses, the Court now submits this Proposed Statement of Decision.

I. STATEMENT OF DECISION

This is an action for fraud, concealment, false promise, misappropriation of likeness (both statutory and common law), and violation of Business and Professions Code sec. 17200 brought by Plaintiffs Jane Does 1 through 22 (collectively, Plaintiffs) against Defendants GirlsDoPorn.com, Michael Pratt, Matthew Wolfe, Andre Garcia, BLL Media, Inc., BLL Media Holdings, LLC, EG Publications, Inc., M1M Media, LLC, Merro Media, Inc., Merro Media Holdings, LLC, and Domi Publications, LLC (collectively, Defendants).

Jane Does 1-22 were represented by Edward Chapin, Esq. and Cara Van Dorn, Esq. of Sanford, Heisler & Sharp, LLP, John O'Brien, Esq. of Stokes O'Brien, LLP, and Brian Holm, Esq., of the Holm Law Group, PC.

Defendants GirlsDoPorn.com, Michael Pratt, Andre Garcia, Matthew Wolfe, BLL Media, Inc., BLL Media Holdings, LLC, EG Publications, Inc., MIM Media, LLC, Bubblegum Films, Inc., Merro Media, Inc. and Merro Media Holdings, LLC were represented by Aaron Sadock, Esq. and Bonnie McKnight, Esq. of Panakos Law, APC and Daniel Kaplan, Esq. of the Law Offices of Daniel Kaplan.

Defendant Domi Publications, LLC was represented by George Rikos, Esq. of the Law Offices of George Rikos.

Plaintiffs sought and received defaults against Clockwork Productions, Inc., Oh Well Media Limited, and Sidle Media Limited.

II. FINDINGS OF FACT

A. Summary and Overview of Defendants' Business Plan

Defendants run an online pornography business, including most notably a subscription website called GirlsDoPorn.com. The site features sex videos of young women between the ages of 18 and 23. Defendants' business is premised on the construct that the women in the videos are not professional porn stars but are amateur college-aged women filming pornography for the first and only time. Subscribers are meant to be left with the impression that the women in Defendants' videos are everyday women that they could encounter in their communities, campuses, and daily lives.

Defendants are aware that the models recruited for GirlsDoPorn do not intend to pursue a career in adult entertainment. The women are mostly students with careers ahead of them who have only even considered Defendants' solicitations to film a pornographic video due to some immediate and pressing financial need.

In accordance with this one-time-only amateur paradigm, Defendants' business is dependent on recruiting a constant stream of new models in order to generate fresh website content. The Court finds Plaintiffs have proven that Defendants use fraudulent practices to facilitate such recruitment. Defendants take considerable, calculated steps to falsely assure prospective models that their videos will never be posted online, come to light in the United States, or be seen by anyone who might know them. Defendants' assurances of privacy and security are reinforced by paid "references"—women hired who are or pose as previous models and (in accordance with a script) provide new recruits with false comfort that the experience is safe and enjoyable, and that the videos have never appeared online or been discovered by anyone in the models' lives.

Once a newly-recruited woman has flown to San Diego, she finds herself alone in a hotel room with two men about to shoot a pornographic video. At this point, Defendants have her sign documents containing dense and ambiguous legalese, which Defendants falsely describe as being the written version of what she has already agreed to. Defendants rush and pressure the woman to sign the documents quickly without reading them and engage in other deceptive, coercive, and threatening behavior to secure their signatures as described below. The Court finds these putative contracts invalid and unenforceable—part and parcel of Defendants' fraudulent scheme.

Defendants' representations are false. Contrary to their explicit promises that the videos will never appear online, Defendants publish the videos on their paid subscription website and many popular free "tube" sites such as Pornhub.com. They also use extensive affiliate marketing and other techniques to maximize web traffic to their sites. Plaintiffs believe that Defendants increase viewership of the videos by deliberately leaking and disseminating their true identities and personal information—including by sending the videos directly to the models' friends, family members, classmates, employers, and social media contacts. This is similar to a direct-marketing promotional device that makes the videos "go viral" in the models' communities. When the women inevitably learn what Defendants have done with their videos, many complain to Defendants, begging them to remove the videos from the internet. In response, Defendants usually simply ignore any such messages and block the complaining model.

Defendants' tactics have caused the videos to become common knowledge in Plaintiffs' communities and among their relations and peers—the very thing that Plaintiffs feared and that Defendants expressly assured them would not happen. As a result, Plaintiffs have suffered and continue to suffer far-reaching and often tragic consequences. Collectively, they have experienced severe harassment, emotional and psychological trauma, and reputational harm; lost jobs, academic and professional opportunities, and family and personal relationships; and had their lives derailed and uprooted. They have become pariahs in their communities. Several Plaintiffs have become suicidal. This Court finds that Plaintiffs' injuries are directly attributable to Defendants' fraudulent scheme and that Defendants' conduct warrants both compensatory and punitive damages, as well as equitable relief.

Defendants have sought to evade accountability for their actions by funneling the fruits of the enterprise to overseas companies. Defendant Michael Pratt declared bankruptcy.

Accordingly, the Court determines that each of the Defendants are jointly and severally liable to the Plaintiffs here and issues appropriate relief, as set forth below.

B. Defendants' Pornography Enterprise

i. The Websites

GirlsDoPorn.com ("GirlsDoPorn" or "GDP") is a pornography website featuring young women, ages 18 to 23, engaging in intercourse with a male actor. GDP's female models have never appeared in a pornographic video before and represent that they will not do so again. GDP publishes exclusive content featuring young female models who cannot be seen elsewhere. (Ex.

1576.1.)¹ Defendants recruit the women, produce the videos, and solely control the content that appears on GirlsDoPorn.com, and it is undisputed that pornographic videos and photographs of all Plaintiffs were published on GirlsDoPorn.com. GirlsDoPorn earns money by selling subscriptions to view the complete video content in the members-only section. As set forth below, the Court finds that Defendants own or control the rights to the GirlsDoPorn.com content, trademark, and domain name.

GirlsDoToys.com ("GirlsDoToys" or "GDT") is a pornographic website featuring young women in "solo" scenes (i.e., using sex toys). The women are usually the same as those who shoot boy-girl GDP videos because Defendants do not separately recruit women for solo videos. Defendants shoot, produce, edit, and publish the videos for GDT, and the website earns money through subscription sales. Defendants control all aspects of the website. As explained below, the Court finds that Defendants own or control the rights to the GirlsDoToys.com trademark and domain name, as well as the content on the site.

MomPOV,com ("MomPOV") is a pornographic website featuring "mature" women over 30 engaging in sexual intercourse with a male actor who is holding the camera. Defendants recruit the women, produce and edit the videos, and publish the videos on the website, which—like GDP—earns revenue by selling subscriptions. Prior to February 2015, MomPOV was operated alongside GirlsDoPorn and GirlsDoToys. Since February 2015, certain aspects of MomPOV were shifted into a separate entity created solely for that purpose.

ii. The Individual Defendants and their Agents

Defendant Michael Pratt, originally from New Zealand, conceived the idea for GirlsDoPorn.com in 2006 while he was living in Brisbane, Australia. (Deposition of Michael Pratt, Volume I, December 6, 2018 ["Pratt Depo. Vol. I"] at 14:5 – 15:6.) He moved to the United States in 2007 and launched the website in 2009. (Deposition of Michael Pratt, Volume III, taken May 6, 2019 ["Pratt Depo. Vol. III"] at 152:18 – 153:6.) He has owned and operated GirlsDoPorn through a series of different entities through the years but has always maintained ultimate control of the website as well as those individuals he hires to assist him in producing videos for his websites. (Pratt Depo Vol. I, at 60:21 – 61:4.) Pratt recruits models and has served as videographer, and then edits and publishes the videos online himself. (Pratt Depo Vol. 1 at 64:7 – 11; 185:11 – 21; 208:4 – 209:23). Pratt receives 100% of the profits made by GirlsDoPorn.com. (10/02/19 Trial Tr. 127:6 – 10.)

GirlsDoPorn's channel on Pornhub advertising: "Real amateur girls having sex on video for the very first time... You will not find these girls on any other website – all girls are 100% exclusive – this is the only and only time they do porn."

Pratt also co-founded the website MomPOV.com with Douglas Wiederhold in 2010, (Wiederhold Depo at 39:3 – 7, 124:19 – 22), and the website GirlsDoToys.com with Matthew Wolfe in 2014. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 110:19 – 22; Ex. 1052 [Letter of Intent].). Pratt was involved in the recruitment of and/or served as the videographer for Jane Does 3, 4, 5, 9, 11, 13, 14, 15, 18, 19, 20, and 22.² As videographer, Pratt often presented documents to models to sign and answered any questions they had surrounding the shoot.

Douglas Wiederhold (not a defendant) was hired by Pratt to serve as the male performer for GirlsDoPorn videos in 2007. (Deposition of Douglas Wiederhold, taken July 17, 2018 ["Wiederhold Depo"] at 106:9 – 22). In 2010, he and Pratt co-founded MomPOV.com. (Wiederhold Depo at 39:3 – 7, 124:19 – 22). Wiederhold also served as the male performer in MomPOV videos and generally handled operations of the website since its inception. He stopped shooting videos for GirlsDoPorn in or around 2012. (Id. at 49:25 – 50:5). Wiederhold did not interact personally with any of the Plaintiffs.

Defendant Matthew Wolfe, a childhood friend of Pratt from New Zealand, joined Pratt in the United States and began providing services for Pratt's pornography business in 2011. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 9:6 – 9.) Wolfe's duties include or have included payroll, bookkeeping, billing, technical assistance, recruiting, and videography. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 25:13 – 26:2, 134:7 – 8.) As videographer, he often answered questions posed by models and presented documents to them to sign. (Trial Tr. 08/22/19 at 37:24 – 38:4 and Deposition of Jane Doe 21 taken on May 4, 2019 at 107:20 – 111:19.) In 2011, Wolfe and Pratt purchased the domain GirlsDoToys.com and Wolfe has filmed many of the videos. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 110:19 – 22.) He was produced as the PMO for the entities that run GirlsDoPorn and GirlsDoToys in this case. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 88:1-7.) In his testimony, Pratt deferred to Wolfe as more knowledgeable on many issues relating to his businesses. (Pratt Depo Vol. 1 at 32:6 – 9). Wolfe was involved in the recruitment of and/or served as videographer for Jane Does 1, 2, 5, 7, 9, 10, 12, 14, 17, 21, and 22.³

Defendant Andre Garcia was hired by Pratt to serve as the male talent and "casting director" for GirlsDoPorn.com (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 54:1-3.) Garcia earns a commission for each model he recruits and is paid an hourly rate on top of those commissions. (Pratt Depo Vol. 3 at 151:8 – 11). As male talent, Garcia often presented the documents to models to sign and answered questions they posed surrounding the shoot. (Trial Tr. 09/10/19 at 136:7–16; 137:18 – 23; Trial Tr. 09/10/19 at 136:7 – 21.) Garcia is the male talent appearing in each of the Plaintiffs' videos and was involved in the recruitment process of or otherwise made representations to Jane Does 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 18, 19, 20, and 21.⁴

Theodore ("Teddy") Gyi worked as videographer for GirlsDoPorn and GirlsDoToys from November 2015 through April or May 2017. (8/29/19 Trial Tr. 73:10 – 22.) As part of his job, Gyi also assisted with chauffeuring women around San Diego and often presented documents to models to sign and answered questions they posed surrounding the shoot. (Trial Tr. 8/21/19 at 84:1-14) Wolfe and Pratt instructed Gyi on how to handle questions posed by models. (8/29/19 Trial Tr. 86:11 – 21). Gyi served as videographer for Jane Does 6, 8, 11, 13, 15, 18, 19, and 20.5

Valorie Moser worked for Pratt as an administrative assistant from March 2015 until 2018. (9/20/19 Trial Tr. 61:14 – 19.) She organized contracts, receipts, and expenses, and performed QuickBooks and payroll. (Id. at 62:24 – 63:4.) She also chauffeured models around San Diego and helped get models prepared for their shoot. (Trial Tr. 9/20/19 at 77:3 – 23.) In or around 2018, Pratt asked Moser to assist with recruiting certain women BLL Media had been unable to convince to shoot a video. (Trial Tr. 09/23/19 at 93:9-23). Pratt instructed Moser on what to say and what not to say when recruiting, and Moser took notes during that conversation. (Trial Tr. 09/20/19 at 89:15 – 91:15). Moser did not interact personally with any of the Plaintiffs.

Kevin Holloway, a now-deceased attorney out of Wichita, Kansas, assisted Pratt in forming the first entity that would eventually become the pornography enterprise at issue today. (Ex. 1660.1 [Articles of Incorporation for Clockwork Productions, Inc. filed November 29, 2006].) Holloway also incorporated entities in Vanuatu on Pratt's behalf. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 243:12 – 15 [KH set up BGF].) Pratt claims that Holloway owned of all of the videos produced for GirlsDoPorn and GirlsDoToys by way of these Vanuatu entities, ⁶ but, for the reasons stated below, the Court finds that Pratt owned and controlled these entities as well as the rights to the videos.

Reference Models. Defendants hired reference models to assist with recruiting by communicating with prospective models to assuage their objections and doubts about filming a pornographic video. (Pratt Depo. Vol. II, 188:19 – 22.) Pratt, Wolfe, and/or Garcia instruct reference models on what to say when they speak with prospective models. The reference models who communicated with Plaintiffs in this case include Kailyn Wright, Amberlyn Nored Clark, Alicia McKay, and Cat Wilkens.

Defendants hired other individuals to assist with their business operations, including Alex Martinez who provided DMCA takedown services for the Websites (Deposition of Alejandro Martinez taken on April 17, 2018 at 46:21 – 47:1); Alex Foster, who acts as a videographer for GirlsDoPorn and "any other productions" the Defendants may shoot, including GirlsDoToys (Pratt Depo Vol. 1 at 53:16 – 25); Cameron Brown, who performed DMCA copyright removal services for the company, like Mr. Martinez. (Pratt Depo Vol. 1 at 54:4 – 6); and Kevin Gibson who was a porn producer working for GirlsDoPorn alongside Mr. Pratt from at least November 2016 until October 2018 (Trial Tr. 10/29/19 at 40:25 – 41:12). Defendants hired Jamia McDonald, Kevin Gibson's then-girlfriend, to repeatedly harass Plaintiffs' counsel with phone calls every day for $300 a week. (Trial Tr. 10/29/19 at 47:24 – 48:16). None of these individuals personally interacted with the Plaintiffs in this case.

iii. The Entities

Defendants used more than a dozen entities to operate their three pornographic websites. Defendants admit to owning, either directly or indirectly, some of the entities, including BLL Media, Inc.; BLL Media Holdings, LLC; Domi Publications, LLC; M1M Media, Inc.; Merro Media, Inc.; Merro Media, Inc.; Merro Media Holdings, LLC; EG Publications, Inc.; UHD Productions, LLC; EBB Marketing, Inc.; and Hayst Holdings, Limited.

Defendants deny holding an ownership interest in several other related entities, including Clockwork Productions, Inc., Bubblegum Films, Inc., Oh Well Media, Ltd., Sidle Media Ltd., and Torque Asset Management, LLC. In fact, these are the entities that, at one time or another, have purported to hold the rights to the videos Defendants produce, the domain name of their websites, and the trademark of their brands—the entirety of Defendants' assets. Each of these entities exists under the laws of the Republic of Vanuatu—a tiny, remote island in the South Pacific.

The Court received no evidence of writings establishing the Vanuatu entities' separate and independent status. The Court received no evidence of consideration paid to Defendants by these entities in exchange for ownership rights to the videos and websites. Not only do Defendants claim that they do not own these entities, but they claim to have no knowledge of the person who does own them.

Taking into account each Party's ability to provide evidence (Cal. Code Evid. § 412; CACI No. 203 [Party Having Power to Produce Better Evidence]) and noting the absence of evidence supporting Defendants' theory, the Court finds: there are no contracts, no consideration, and no third-party owners, known to Defendants, because Defendants themselves own these entities.

As explained in detail below, the evidence at trial supports a finding that all entities are a single business enterprise. Therefore, the Court treats them as one.

C. Defendants' Deceptive and Unfair Business Practices

Over the course of a 99-day trial, the Court heard from 22 Plaintiffs (live and by deposition) who provided credible testimony. The Court also heard from seven non-plaintiff models who testified about one of the most humiliating and devastating experiences of their young lives. Plaintiffs further called four women Defendants hired as reference models; these witnesses admitted to lying to prospective models such as the Plaintiffs in this action even though, by telling the truth, they implicated themselves in a fraudulent scheme. Finally, Plaintiffs also called four of Defendants' former employees, whose testimony, in part, corroborated that of the Plaintiffs.

In contrast, only one individual Defendant, Wolfe, appeared live, and he provided guarded, and at times inconsistent testimony. Pratt, on the other hand, fled the country, ignoring a properly served notice to appear and an arrest warrant issued by this Court, opting instead to testify by deposition. In evaluating the evidence, the Court considers Defendants' failure to credibly explain or deny Plaintiffs' evidence against them. (CACI No. 205.)

iv. Defendants Use Deceptive Recruiting Practices

The success of Defendants' business turns on their ability to induce young women who would not otherwise consider filming pornography to fly to San Diego and shoot a pornographic video. Defendants' success in doing this is based on several practices: first, they drew women in through bait-and-switch advertisements for clothed modeling; second, they offered enough money to overcome the woman's general compunction against the idea of pornography; and third, they lied about a significant concern the women have—where and how the video will be distributed and who will be able to see it. Finally, by carefully concealing their own identities at every stage of the recruiting process, Defendants severely curtail the women's ability to investigate the truth of these misrepresentations, concealments, and to protect themselves against Defendants' fraudulent scheme.

1. Defendants Post Misleading Craigslist Advertisements Which Direct Recruits to Their Websites

Defendants post advertisements on Craigslist.com that purport to seek women for clothed modeling work in towns and cities all over the United States and Canada. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 120:2 – 14.) These facially benign ads offer to pay women ages 18 to 22 with little to no modeling experience a large sum of money—typically around $5,000—for photo and/or video shoots. (E.g., (8/27/19 Trial Tr. 12:3 – 10) [JD 6]; (8/29/19 Trial Tr. 183:17 – 21) [JD 17]; (9/9/19 Trial Tr. 212:19 – 24) [JD 19].) The ads also direct prospective models to Defendant-owned modeling websites such as www.BeginModeling.com, www.ModelingGigs.com, and www.ModelingWorks.com, which also appear to advertise clothed modeling work. (Ex. 1543.1) The websites contain an application form where prospective models can enter their names, ages, height, weight, location and contact information and attach photographs. (Ex. 1543.1.)

Neither the Craigslist ads nor these websites contain any indication that nudity or pornography is involved. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 143:26 – 144:19 [Wolfe testifying this is because Craigslist removes ads related to pornography].) Contrary to Defendants' explanation, the Court finds that Defendants deliberately used deceptive advertisements and websites to mislead women about the nature of the work; Defendants aimed to cast a wider net to attract a certain type of applicant—women who would not intentionally respond to a solicitation to appear in a pornographic video.⁷ This is consistent with Defendants' depiction of GDP models as making a one-time-only stint into pornography.

Women can apply for the purported modeling work through Craigslist by email or the application page on Defendants' modeling websites by submitting name, age, height, weight, location, email address, phone number, and pictures. (Ex. 1543.1) If the applicant meets Defendants' criteria, she will receive an email from Defendants. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 120:25 – 28.)

2. Defendants Send Deceptive Emails Designed to get the Woman on the Phone

Defendants use a few different stock emails to respond to applicants, but the one received by most of the Plaintiffs in this case is the stock email from "Jonathan." (E.g., Exs. 4.1; 121.2; 151; 217; 276; 612.)⁸ This email does not contain the word pornography but instead states "[t]his is a legitimate adult gig for an established Southern California company." (Ibid.)¹⁰

The stock email makes the "gig" sound fast, easy, and safe and begins assuaging women's concerns right off the bat: "None of your personal information will be given out in the video or afterwards, no names etc. are used in the video." (Ibid. [sic in original].) The email also represents, "We have shot over 200+ models, you can speak or Skype with as many as you want and talk to them about their experience with us." In reality, although Defendants have shot hundreds of models, they only permit a prospective model to speak with a few select "references"—some of whom are not actual previous GDP models but have been hired to give fraudulent testimonials. In they did not consider even nude modeling.

⁸ Defendants used a few other stock emails: one from "Mike" (Ex. 453.) and one from "Robb" (Ex. 277.)

any case, Defendants channel new recruits solely to particular references who have been instructed and paid to present Defendants' false narrative.

Although some Plaintiffs responded to this first email, each Plaintiff testified that the idea of filming a pornographic video triggered concerns about where the video would be distributed and who would be able to see it. Plaintiffs were all aware of the existence and proliferation of internet pornography but wanted to hear more about this particular offer because the email indicated that their identities would be protected and suggested that the other women who had shot a video did not regret it. (E.g., 10/1/19, Trial Tr. 13:10 – 17 [JD 3]; 9/10/19, Trial Tr. 120:3 – 5 [JD 11]; 8/22/19, Trial Tr. 18:5 – 20:19 [JD 12]; 9/24/19, Trial Tr. 12:10 – 14 [JD 16]; 9/16/19 Trial Tr. 12:14 – 22 [JD 20].) This job also offered notably high pay for what appeared to be very little work. Many Plaintiffs testified that, although they ordinarily would not consider doing pornography, this offer was uniquely enticing.

If women do not respond to this initial email, Defendants do not give up. Instead, they send a follow-up email sometimes increasing the amount of pay and offering clothed modeling and more detailed assurances. (Exs. 278; 618; 810.) Some Plaintiffs responded to this email specifically because of the offer to do clothed modeling. (E.g., (8/21/19 Trial Tr. 18:16 – 19:12) [JD 15]; (8/29/19 Trial Tr. 187:13 – 188:17) [JD 17].) In fact, clothed modeling has never been part of Defendants' business. The Court finds that Defendants make this offer with no plan or intention to fulfill it and include it in this email solely for the purpose of misleading women about the nature of the job in order to elicit a response from those who would not otherwise respond.

Several Plaintiffs testified they found this second email particularly persuasive. It provides more details about the types of girls who have done a shoot: "All the girls that I shoot are first times. I shoot cheerleaders, sorority girls, preppy college girls, IG [Instagram] models with 70k followers and models of that caliber." (Ibid.) Several Plaintiffs testified that these representations helped to lure them in because the type of girls described were relatable to them—Jane Doe 15 was on her collegiate cheerleading team; Jane Doe 13 was in a sorority. Plaintiffs also interpreted this statement to mean that these women (who led lives similar to their own) had not been negatively impacted by shooting the videos and had continued to lead their normal lives. (E.g., (8/21/19 Trial Tr. 23:22 – 24:2) [JD 15].)

¹¹ Indeed, many Plaintiffs testified they were in precarious financial situations and although some admitted this pressure impacted their decisions, all steadfastly stated that even given their financial situations they would not have done the video if they had known it would be widely published online and available in the United States. (See, e.g., Jane Doe 4, Jane Doe 5, Jane Doe 9, Jane Doe 19.)

¹² The legitimacy of this offer is buttressed by the additional statement, "Clothes form [sic] BCBG and Bebe are provided by us and you can keep them." (Exs. 278 [JD 6]; 340 [JD 8]; 618 [JD 13]; 720 [JD15]; 810 [JD17].) [JD 17 saying that she believed it because it included this statement about clothes ... we could maybe use (9/3/19 Trial Tr. 104:6-17).)

The follow-up email also says, "We have over 50 models that you can speak or Skype/Facetime with." Defendants even send pictures of recent models who look like ordinary women who are happy and safe. (Exs. 285; 618; 818.) Many Plaintiffs testified that these pictures were relatable and made them more comfortable. (E.g., (8/22/19 Trial Tr. 22:14 – 23:1, 27:4 – 16) [JD 12]; (10/15/19 Trial Tr. 75:2 – 14) [JD 14]; (Deposition of Jane Doe 22, January 1, 2019 ["Jane Doe 22 Depo."] at 152:4 – 7) [JD 22].) Defendants also send pictures of the hotel rooms, the sets, camera equipment, and the male performers, which Plaintiffs testified improved their comfort level because they felt that Defendants were being open and generous with information and because the images looked professional and legitimate. (E.g., JD 6 [8/27/19 Trial Tr. 34:4 – 10]; JD 14 [10/15/19 Trial Tr. 75:15 – 24].)

It should be noted that Defendants also present the experience as a glamorous opportunity to travel to Southern California and enjoy expensive amenities they could not ordinarily afford. One indicated that this depiction influenced her decision to respond to the ad [noting that it sounded fun to be "treated like a celebrity for a day"].) Other Plaintiffs testified that these representations assisted in convincing them that Defendants ran a legitimate, professional operation. (E.g., JDs 6, 17).

3. Defendants Falsely Promise More Pay than they Intend to Provide

The Court also finds that it is Defendants' business practice and strategy to offer as much money as needed to entice a recruit to San Diego for a shoot, but sometimes with no intention of actually following through. This often involved increasing the offers until a candidate agreed. For example, Valorie Moser testified that Pratt instructed her to "[m]ake an offer of a price that was high enough to get the model on a plane." (9/20/19 Trial Tr. 115:15 – 24 ["high-balled" or "exaggerated" amounts were frequently quoted].) Defendants used this strategy with multiple Plaintiffs. (E.g. Jane Doe 6, JD 8, JD 10, JD 15, JD 16, JD 21.) Jane Doe 6, in particular, did not reply to Jonathan's email until he increased the offer from $5,000 for two videos to $7,000 for one video. She testified that she would not have agreed to accept any less. (8/27/19 Trial Tr. 172:2 – 174:2.)

Defendants sometimes do not honor their promises regarding pay. Once a model has arrived at the hotel room in San Diego and has stripped down to begin filming, Defendants at times use a pretext (a supposed flaw in her appearance) to pay her less than the agreed-to amount. (E.g. Jane Does 10, 12, 13, 15, 19 and 20.) Defendants have never previously informed the model that her pay is not fixed but is contingent and subject to change. Some Plaintiffs would not have agreed to the videos had they known that Defendants claimed the unilateral discretion to slash their pay, often by thousands of dollars. However, by the time models have arrived in San Diego and filming is about to begin, they have no choice but to relent and proceed with the shoot. Defendants threaten them with consequences if they do not do so.

The Court finds that Defendants deliberately mislead some models by increasing or overstating the amount of pay offered with little intention to fulfill that promise.¹⁴

4. Defendants Misrepresent Facts and Make False Assurances on the Phone

Defendants' goal is to initiate a phone call with a prospective model as quickly as possible. (Exs. 277 [JD6]; 510 [JD 12]; 621 [JD 13]; 714 [JD 15]; 944 [JD 21]; 994 [JD 22].) When a model left Defendants' conduct is illustrated by the testimony of Jane Doe A, a third-party model who was recruited and shot her video during trial. (10/31/19 Trial Tr. 41:9-15, 42:11-24, 46:5-16, 55:1-20, 98:12-14.) Jonathan (Garcia) first offered her $6,000 for a boy-girl shoot and $2,000 for a solo shoot and slowly raised the amount until he had offered her $10,000—$6,000 for the boy-girl shoot and $4,000 for the solo. (10/31/19 Trial Tr. 127:28-129:2.) Defendants had already shut down the website where solo videos are posted, GirlsDoToys, and stopped filming such videos. (10/7/19 Trial Tr. 38:8-18; 11/25/19 Trial Tr. 177:1-9.) Garcia augmented Defendants' offer for the part of the shoot that he knew would not occur. Jane Doe A was not given a chance to shoot the solo scene when she traveled to San Diego and received $6,000 instead of the promised $10,000. (10/31/19 Trial Tr. 129:3-6, 61:23-26.)

asks questions by email or text, Defendants answer some questions in writing, ¹⁵ but if a prospective model asks about where the video will be distributed, Defendants always ask to discuss it over the phone. (Exs. 9.1 [JD1]; 218 [JD5]; 371.1 – 2, 372.7 [JD 9]; 725 [JD15]; 779.2 [JD 16].) The Court finds that Defendants deliberately avoid written communications about distribution with prospective models because Defendants misrepresent where and how the videos will be distributed. Defendants produced no written communications to the contrary. (CACI 203, 205.)

Based on consistent testimony at trial, the Court finds that, during the initial phone call between Defendants and prospective models, Defendants assure the women that the video will never be seen by anyone they know because it will only be distributed on DVD in a foreign country; it thus will never be available in the United States, and it will never be published online. While the details of Defendants' representations varied slightly, ¹⁶ the part of the message that mattered to the prospective models remained the same—"it's not going online and no one in the United States will find out." The specific destination represented simply made these material representations credible and believable to Plaintiffs.

Every Plaintiffs' significant concern (aside from her physical safety) was where the video would be distributed and who would be able to see it. Nearly every Plaintiff asked questions and expressed her concerns about distribution during the phone calls with Defendants. Some Plaintiffs testified they did not have a chance or need to ask questions because Defendants told them what they wanted to know as soon as they got on the phone. (E.g., JD 22 [Jane Doe 22 Depo. 150:12 – 151:18].) Some explained their particular situations and reasons that they were concerned about distribution of the video. (JD 1 [9/11/19 Trial Tr. 157:14 – 19], JD 9 [9/30/19 Trial Tr. 15:17 – 25], JD 12 [8/22/19 Trial Tr. 20:20 – 21:3], JD 15 [8/21/19 Trial Tr. 23:8 – 13].) Defendants assured each woman that they had done this many times before and the videos had never appeared online and no one in the United States had ever found out. As set forth in the Court's findings regarding the individual Plaintiffs (see below), Defendants had a ready answer for any questions asked. (See, e.g., (9/18/19 Trial Tr. 13:8-16) [JD 5] [Defendants said the private collector signed a contract]that he would not redistribute DVD]; (10/16/19 Trial Tr. 49:2-11) [JD 14] [Defendants said theDVD was encrypted and could not be copied]; (8/26/19 Trial Tr, 181:19 – 25) [JD 15] [Defendants said that if the video did somehow end up online, they had ways of taking it down].) A truthful answer to questions about distribution would have upset Defendants' scheme by revealing the true nature of the enterprise.

Nor was there any particular act of diligence that would have revealed the truth to Plaintiffs and other women ensnared in Defendants' scheme. Defendants' use of aliases and other business names and websites ensured that a prospective model who checked Defendants' reputations on the internet would not learn that they owned and operated a popular website called GirlsDoPorn and that their videos were strewn across dozens of other websites.¹⁷

Defendants argued that Plaintiffs did not do their due diligence because they did not obtain an explanation for how Defendants could guarantee that a video (once distributed in any medium) would not be uploaded onto the internet. However, Defendants' scheme was remarkably successful for a reason, and the sheer number of GDP models—numbering in the hundreds—attests to its effectiveness. Plaintiffs were young individuals with no experience in the pornography industry. Defendants, on the other hand, were significantly older and held themselves out as experienced professionals with knowledge of how the videos would actually be distributed and who would actually have access to them. Plaintiffs asked Defendants extensive questions regarding their concerns, and Defendants provided answers that placated those concerns and, to a person of

Plaintiffs' age, education, and experience, seemed quite reasonable. Plaintiffs had no ability to independently verify the information Defendants provided and little reason to do so. The record establishes that Plaintiffs relied upon Defendants' assurances, as Defendants knew and hoped they would.

Defendants affirmatively stated in no uncertain terms that they would not distribute the videos via the internet, but would target them exclusively for very limited DVD production in overseas locales. They then proceeded to do exactly the opposite, guaranteeing that the videos would be widely published on the internet and disseminated in Plaintiffs' communities. What might have conceivably transpired if the videos had instead been sold to a single private collector in Australia, for instance, is beside the point.

Defendants are persistent in their recruiting efforts. Several Plaintiffs testified that Defendants called and texted them multiple times a day every day. Jane Doe 20, for example, agreed to do the shoot and booked a flight, then got cold feet and backed out. She testified that Pratt called and texted her, comforted and convinced her until she finally relented. (09/16/19 Trial Tr. 19:16 – 27) [JD 20].

Defendants also use other means of communication to convince women to trust and believe them. Defendants offer to Facetime or Skype with women while they are at another shoot to show them around the set, introduce them to the model being filmed, and let them see the atmosphere. (JD 6 (8/27/19 Trial Tr. 44:23 – 45:3); JD 15 (8/21/19 Trial Tr. 62:14 – 63:13); JD 20 (9/16/19 Trial Tr. 16:16 – 17:5).) Several Plaintiffs testified that this communication made them more comfortable and increased their trust in Defendants; Jane Doe 6 testified that the photos Defendants sent of money, previous models, and the hotel rooms "looked like everything they were promising [her]," (08/27/19 Trial Tr. 34:4 – 10).

5. Defendants Pay Reference Models to Repeat their Fraudulent Misrepresentations

One of Defendants' most effective recruitment techniques was the use of reference models to speak to prospective models and bolster Defendants' misrepresentations. Knowing that their own assurances would only take them so far, Defendants hired women to speak with prospective models and provide a so-called "first-hand" account of their experience working with Defendants. (See 9/20/19 Trial Tr. 95:13 – 96:3 [Pratt asked Moser to assist in recruiting women with whom he had been unsuccessful because he thought "they would be more responsive to a female voice"].) In reality, this is yet another deception.

As mentioned above, Defendants state in their very first email to prospective models that there are hundreds of women who have shot videos with Defendants and would be happy to share their experiences. (Ex. 276.1.) Defendants typically mention the references again on the phone and then put the prospective model in touch with at least one reference.

Defendants use three types of reference women. The first type consist of women who have recently shot a video with Defendants and have not yet learned that the videos are released online. The second type consists of prior models who are in fact aware that the videos are published online. The third type consists of women who have never actually shot a video with Defendants but who are paid to say that they have. Reference women from each category testified at trial.

Amberlyn Clark was friends with Andre Garcia when he asked her to act as a reference to assist him in recruiting models in or around 2016. (8/20/19 Trial Tr. 147:10 - 16; 148:19 - 25.) Clark knew Garcia was an actor and recruiter for GirlsDoPorn.com when she agreed to act as a reference. (Id. at 149:1-13.) She has never filmed a video with Defendants. (Id. at 151:9-15.)

Clark testified that Garcia instructed her to tell prospective models that the videos "wouldn't be put online and that they would go to private collectors" located "[o]utside of the U.S." (Id. at 150:4-25.) He also instructed her to assure models that "no one would find out." (Id. at 158:2-7.) Clark admitted to acting as a reference for "just a handful" of women and that she was compensated based upon Defendants' attractiveness rating for each woman. (Id. at 157:1-5; 158:9-21.) Clark acted as a reference for at least two Plaintiffs, Jane Does 6 and 15.

Kailyn Wright was an unsuspecting reference at first but continued acting as a reference even after she learned the truth. 18 (Deposition of Kailyn Wright, May 13, 2019 ["Wright Depo."] at

¹⁸ Before she became a reference model, she testified that she shot a video with Defendants after seeking assurances that the video would not be published online and that she would not have agreed to shoot the video if she had known it would be released on websites such as Pornhub. (Wright Depo. 41:9 – 42:04.)

22:16-23:1.) She testified that Defendants paid her to talk to potential models and "make them feel comfortable and like, reassure them, like, it was fine and legit." (Id. at 14:5-8.) Defendants instructed Wright that, if a prospective model asked her where the videos would go, "to tell them it would not be going online and that it was going overseas to wealthier countries." (Id. at 15:20-16:3.) When asked why she told women that their videos would not be released online when she knew that this was not true, she stated, "Because that's what they told me to say. That's what they were paying me to say." (Id. at 23:4-10.)

Wright testified that when she was recruiting models for Defendants, she had a text message saved on her phone that she would send to the women. (Id. at 35:8 – 11.) She identified Exhibit 745, produced by Jane Doe 15, as the text message she sent to prospective models. (Id. at 37:9 – 15.) Wright was a reference for several Plaintiffs, including Jane Does 1, 15, 17, and 21.¹⁹

Taylor Rodgers also acted as a reference for prospective models, but she did so only prior to learning that her video had been posted online. (Deposition of Taylor Rodgers, April 13, 2019 ["Rodgers Depo."] at 33:12 – 34:02.) Rodgers shot two videos with Defendants based on Pratt's assurances that the video would "absolutely not" be online and was "only going to be distributed in Australia to some rich guy." (Id. at 22:7 – 23:6.) Prior to shooting the video, she received 3 to 4 references from Pratt and spoke with each one. (Id. at 16:10 – 17:13.)

After she filmed her first video, Pratt and Garcia offered to pay her to speak with prospective models and she agreed because, at that time, she believed that Defendants had told her the truth. (Id. at 33:19 – 34:13.) Pratt texted her "examples of what to say" and she "knew from talking to girls prior you're just trying to make the girl feel comfortable." (Id. at 34:6 – 16.) As instructed (and as she believed to be true), Rodgers told between five and seven women that "the videos would not be distributed anywhere except for to DVD to a guy in Australia." (Id. at 33:12 – 15; 36:24 – 37:6.) One of the prospective models she spoke to was Jane Doe 12.

Rodgers shot a second video before learning her first video was online. (Id. at 40:12 – 41:11.) After she learned that her video was online, Rodgers was "upset" that she had encouraged

27 28 women to shoot a video based on what turned out to be false information and stopped acting as a reference. (Id. at 49:14-17.)²⁰

Alicia McKay, another woman who shot a video with Defendants based on the same false statements, agreed to be a reference because she believed what they told her about distribution was true. (Deposition of Alicia McKay, Volume I, November 13, 2018 ["McKay Depo. Vol. I"] at 53:8 -54:14.)²¹ After she learned that the video was online, Pratt asked her to continue as a reference. (Id. at 63:20-64:7.) She asked what she was supposed to say when someone asked about distribution. Defendants instructed that she could be evasive and direct the prospective model to Garcia. (Id. at 65:13-67:17; 76:11-77:6.) A recording McKay made of her phone call with Garcia was played during trial. Garcia told her to talk to prospective models on the phone rather than by text. (72:3-13.) He said that she did not have to answer a lot of questions; she should just tell them "one, you're going to get paid; two, everything's paid for; three, it's legit - - you know, it's not a bunch of weirds, anything like that, and that's it." (72:19-73:2) If the women ask about where the video will go, "just try to get her on the phone" and explain that there are three different brands and "it depends on which ones you're doing. . . . don't ever use any names or anything like that because we [...] don't want to, you know, make it seem worse than it is." (73:4 – 73:17.) McKay acted as a reference for Jane Doe 6.²²

Several Plaintiffs testified that they were eager to speak to the reference(s), asked pointed questions about distribution, and likely would not have filmed their video if the references had not confirmed Defendants' representations about distribution. (JD 1, 5, 6, 12, 15, 20, 21, 22.) Some Plaintiffs stated that communicating with the references increased their trust in Defendants and solidified their decision to shoot the video. (JD 2, 3, 11, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19.) A few Plaintiffs were given or offered references but did not contact the references for a variety of reasons, but all stated that just being offered the references made Defendants' statements seem supported and legitimate.²³

²¹ Like Rodgers, after she learned the first video was online, McKay decided to do another because "I figured at that point I was kind of, for lack of a - - I was screwed at that point, for lack of a better word, and I didn't get the full compensation of funds, so I figured, you know what, it's leaked. I'm getting blown up by friends and family, so I might as well go and do it." (McKay Depo. 62:12 – 21.)

Defendants' methods of inducing women to believe their representations about the limited scope of distribution has been honed over nearly a decade. Prior to hiring reference women to cajole prospective models, Defendants directed women to a website called Bubblegumcasting.com where they could view testimonial videos of young women praising their experiences working with Defendants. While some Plaintiffs required more convincing than others, all Plaintiffs ultimately believed Defendants' promises about limited distribution of the videos.

Defendants push women to make a decision quickly. Several Plaintiffs recalled Jonathan pressuring them to let him book a flight to San Diego within the first few days, assuring them that they could always change their flight or cancel it. (E.g., 08/21/19 Trial Tr. 25:19 – 24 [Before Jane Doe 15 got off her first phone call with Garcia, he already booked her hotel and flight]. See also 10/15/19 Trial Tr. [Jane Doe 14 testified that she had not committed to the gig when Garcia booked her flight].) Several Plaintiffs testified that they still had not made up their minds at the time their flights were purchased. Still in their home state, hundreds or thousands of miles away from Defendants, some Plaintiffs felt they had not made a commitment and could still decide against shooting the video up until the time that they boarded the plane to San Diego. All Plaintiffs who flew boarded the plane in reliance on Defendants' assurances.

ii. Once the Women Arrive in San Diego, Defendants Give them NoOpportunity to Learn the Truth and Little Choice in Completing the Shoot

Upon arriving in San Diego, women are picked up from the airport by one or more of the Defendants or one of their employees, such as videographer Theodore "Teddy" Gyi or makeup

²³ Jane Doe 4 "didn't want anyone else to know that [she] was doing it." (08/28/19 Trial Tr. 88:15-16.) Jane Doe 8 believed Defendants given "they were providing the references and... all of this information." (Deposition of Jane Doe 8, May 11, 2018 ["Jane Doe 8 Depo."] at 79:19-20.) Jane Doe 9 did not call because she did not think the Defendants "were going to give [her] someone to call and... have artist Riva Yousif. Defendants and their employees are friendly and make the woman feel comfortable. (Jane Doe 3 testified that her "fight or flight system" calmed down after talking to Pratt and Garcia in the car to the hotel, 2019/10/01 Trial Tr. 20:19 – 27; Jane Doe 6 depicted Riva as a "motherly figure," 2019/08/19 Trial Tr. 49:8 – 9.) Sometimes they go straight to the hotel to check the woman in; other times, they take the woman shopping or out to eat. Sometimes they go to one of the Defendants' apartments to socialize before the shoot.

Many women continued to ask questions to confirm what they were told over the phone; they receive the same answers and assurances, often from a different person than they spoke with on the phone. Other women were already fully convinced by Defendants' representations and did not feel a need to ask further questions. Defendants' employees know how to answer questions about distribution: they should confirm the video will not be online, they should never mention GirlsDoPorn.com, and they should reassure models that everything will be fine. (08/29/19 Trial Tr. 86:3 – 9 [Teddy Gyi testified that he "was told to tell [women] that there was no videos [sic] posted online"]. 09/20/19 Trial Tr. 68:18 – 22; 170:14 – 171:3 [Val Moser testified that she "was asked to" sign an NDA; Moser also testified that Michael Pratt instructed her not to disclose distribution to models per her NDA].) The Court finds that Pratt, Wolfe, and Garcia all knowingly gave false information to multiple Plaintiffs in San Diego. Gyi and Yousif also participated in the scheme by misrepresenting or concealing facts as instructed by Defendants.

The shoots take place in a hotel room (often the same hotel room where the model stayed or will stay) in San Diego, either that day or the following. In the hotel room, the videographer (Pratt, Wolfe, or Gyi) sets up the lights and camera equipment, and the model's hair and makeup are done by a professional makeup artist (usually Yousif). Some women reported a pleasant, relaxed atmosphere in the hotel room prior to the shoot. Typically, everyone engaged in small talk; if the model posed further questions about distribution of the videos, Defendants continued to answer with the same responses.

1. Defendants Offer Women Drugs and/or Alcohol Before the Shoot

More often than not, Garcia offers alcohol and/or marijuana to the model, regardless of her age, before the shoot and encourages her to drink or smoke in order to calm her nerves and loosen up. Approximately half of the Plaintiffs accepted the offer and six Plaintiffs reported feeling significantly intoxicated prior to the shoot.

Of the 28 models who testified at trial, Defendants offered alcohol or marijuana to 7 who were underage. This includes McKay, who was 19 years old when Garcia offered her alcohol and marijuana prior to the shoot. (McKay Depo. 23:24 – 24:15; 42:17 – 22; 50:3 – 14.)

Only Jane Does 4 and 16 claim that they were so thoroughly intoxicated that they cannot recall portions of the evening during which the videos were shot. Both show signs of intoxication in their videos. Jane Does 1, 8, 15, 17, and 18 testified that they felt moderate symptoms of intoxication. For most of the Plaintiffs, the alcohol or marijuana served to diminish their defenses and make them less alert.²⁴

2. Defendants Attempt to Show Apparent Consent

Defendants are aware of the fact that women who agree to shoot a pornographic video based on the promise that it will not be published online will be very upset when Defendants post the video online. In preparation, Defendants had Plaintiffs sign documents just before the filming occurred.

a. Defendants Surprise Women with Documents to Sign Moments Before the Shoot

Just before filming, Defendants present women with at least one document to sign.

Defendants do not provide the documents to the model before she arrives at the shoot—even if she asks whether there are any papers to sign—and purposely wait until minutes before the shoot begins to inform the model that she is expected to sign documents immediately so that filming can begin.

(E.g., Jane Doe 5 emailed Garcia asking "Is there any contracting involved," which was ignored, 09/18/19 Trial Tr. 12:1 – 13:19. Jane Doe 5 testified that she did not know she would be handed documents until right before filming, Id. 22:9 – 21.) This delay is not for lack of opportunity. Many women testified that they spent hours with Defendants and their employees (eating, driving around, shopping, or socializing in the hotel room or one of the Defendants' apartments) prior to Defendants' presenting the documents for them to sign. (E.g., 08/27/19 Trial Tr. 49:22 – 50:4; 51:3 – 8; 54:4 – 8; 54:16 – 56:20 [Yousif drove Jane Doe 6 around San Diego, purchased her food, and dropped her off at her hotel. After spending a night there, she spent time socializing in Garcia's apartment with another model and then played video games there. Next, Jane Doe 6 went shopping with Yousif, returned to Garcia's apartment, got her hair and makeup done, took nude photographs, then went to the hotel to film].) By the time the documents are presented, many women have consumed alcohol and/or marijuana at Defendants' behest; Defendants urge them to do so in order to relax, lower their inhibitions, and enable them to go through with the shoot.

Although Defendants testified to the contrary, the credible evidence at trial indicated that they do not permit women much uninterrupted time to read or review the documents before signing them. Defendants consistently discourage the models from reading, and they rush and/or distract the models while they are completing the documents. (Jane Does 1, 2, 3, 5, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22.) Some women testified that Garcia, Wolfe, and/or Pratt became irritable and aggressive when they asked questions about the documents or requested time to read them. Others testified that they were badgered to sign hastily and did not feel that they had the option of asking for more time. The Court finds that Defendants used these tactics to reduce the likelihood that women would read and understand what they were signing.

When handing the documents to a model, the Defendants briefly explain the purpose and content of what she is being asked to sign. These representations are false and designed to induce the women to sign without further question. In some instances, Defendants actually tell the model that the documents state that the video will not be released online or in the United States and that her name and privacy will be fully protected. Sometimes, Defendants represent that the documents were "just to prove that [she is] 18," (08/28/19 Trial Tr. 93:9), or to show Defendants were "not forcing [her] to do this," (09/10/19 Trial Tr. 136:14). In other instances, Defendants are vague, saying, "This is just about the basic agreements, everything we spoke about," (09/09/19 Trial Tr. 51:4 – 5), or "just kind of a formality." (08/22/19 Trial Tr. 37:16.)

Defendants know that these representations about the documents are false. They are designed to build on and reinforce Defendants' prior statements and promises that the videos would not be released online, would only be on DVD overseas, and would never be seen by anyone in America. The Court finds that these representations are deliberate efforts to deceive models about the content and purpose of the documents in order to induce the women to sign. By presenting the documents as consonant with and merely memorializing previous conversations and agreements, Defendants also seek to prevent models from recognizing that these are critical legal documents by which they will be purporting to give up their rights for the first time.

These false representations are effective because, even if read carefully, the documents themselves do not directly contradict Defendants' specific, express promises about how the videos will be used; they do not clearly indicate that the videos will be published online on GirlsDoPorn.com (which is never identified), as well as dozens of free tube sites, and marketed broadly on affiliate websites. Instead, the documents contain broad, vague releases couched in disorganized, complicated legalese. In essence, upon presenting the documents, Defendants profess to be cutting through the dense legal language and explaining its purported practical import and effect: It means only that Defendants will sell the videos on DVD to overseas clients—as they have repeatedly stated and agreed.

The "Artists Agreement and Release 2257 Declaration" ("2257 Declaration") is a document containing the model's name, date of birth, and driver's license or passport information that federal law requires both the "model" and the "producer" to sign under penalty of perjury after the producer examines the picture identification of the model to ensure that the model is over the age of eighteen. All Plaintiffs signed a 2257 Declaration for each of their videos.

On the reverse side of the 2257 Declaration is the Model/Talent Release, 25 a one-page document containing seven paragraphs of small font with no portions highlighted or set off from the rest of the text in any way to signal importance. The very first sentence of the document contains 140 words of prolix legalese:

For and in consideration of my engagement as a model by Clockwork Productions Inc on behalf of BLL Media Inc., hereafter referred to as the photographer, on terms or fee hereafter stated, I hereby give the photographer, his legal representatives and assigns, those for whom the photographer is acting, and those acting with his permission, or his employees, the right and permission to copyright and/or use, reuse and/or publish and republish videos, films, photographs, pictures or portraits of me, or in which I may be distorted in character, or form, in conjunction with my own fictitious name, on reproduction thereof in color, or black and white made through any media by the photographer at his studio, or elsewhere, for any purposes whatsoever, including the right to sub license such rights; including the use of any printed matter in conjunction therewith.

(E.g., Ex. 633.) This sentence is a grammatical labyrinth, which misspells the names of both entities, and expressly grants many rights that Defendants have never used or ever considered using. For example, the sentence specifically covers "photographs, pictures or portraits," reproductions "in black and white," and "printed material." It does not, however, mention GirlsDoPorn.com, nor the words "internet," "online," or "website." It is thus designed to obscure what will actually be done with the videos and to encourage continued reliance on Defendants' repeated representations, promises, and testimonials from hired "references."

Paragraph 3 contains another sentence that Defendants rely upon to support their claim that the models consented to online distribution:

You and your subsidiaries, successors, licensees and assignees may copyright, use and reuse, publish distribute, edit, excerpt, exhibit and otherwise exploit my name real or fictitious or any other name provided and created by Clockwork Productions Inc on behalf of BLL Media Inc, likeness, performance, voice, pictures, and statements, including those of me nude or semi-nude (collectively, my "Appearance"), for any and all uses, in whole or in part, in any and all media and manners, for the Program or any other program, throughout the world in perpetuity, without limitations, including in connection with the advertising, exploitation and publicizing of the Program or any other program.

(Ex. 633.) Defendants point to the phrase "... in any and all media... throughout the world in perpetuity..." to show that Plaintiffs should have known where the video would be published. But rather than conveying useful information to the model, this sentence merely obscures the true nature and character of where the video will be distributed.

Finally, Defendants argue that the text of the Model/Talent Release precludes the claims now before the Court, based upon the following:

I hereby release and discharge you and your successors, licensees and assignees, from any and all claims, demands, or causes of action that I may have, whether for libel, violation of my right of privacy or publicity, or any other matter arising out of or in any manner connected with use of my Appearance or the exercise of the rights granted herein.

(Ex. 633.) The models testified that, even at the time of trial (years later and after consulting with attorneys), they found these statements confusing and incomprehensible. Moreover, as set forth below, this type of exculpatory waiver is illegal and void in light of Defendants' fraud.

Many models also signed a second document called "Model/Talent Release and Independent Contractor Agreement" (hereinafter "IC Agreement"). There are several iterations of this document in the record, ²⁶ but most Plaintiffs signed the version that, on the first page, contains "Recitals" that state:

WHEREAS, BMI has undertaken the design and development of an adult-oriented content; and

WHEREAS, videos, photographs, and any other media that includes nude and semi-nude images of Models, may comprise a significant portion of the content; and

WHEREAS, Model, voluntarily, is willing to create exclusive video and/or photographic content (both adult-oriented and otherwise, collectively "Adult Content") for BMI under a "work made for hire" arrangement as that term is defined by the United States Copyright laws; and

WHEREAS, Model understands that BMI shall own all world-wide intellectual property rights, copyright, trademark, services mark, patents, in and to all of the videos/photos taken of the Model, and any and all other content created for BMI for any other BMI purposes;

²⁶ Another version of the IC Agreement contains Recitals that come closer to effective disclosure of Defendants' website and intention to post the videos online: "WHEREAS, BMI has undertaken the design and development of a website ("website"); and WHEREAS, videos, photographs, and any other media that includes images of Models will comprise a signification portion of the website content . . ." This version of the IC Agreement was signed by only one Plaintiff, Jane Doe 16, who testified that she was so intoxicated prior to, during, and after the shoot that she does not recall signing the documents or any of the representations made to her about the documents.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing and the mutual promises contained herein, and for other good and valuable consideration, the receipt and adequacy of which is hereby acknowledged, it is hereby agreed as follows:

(Ex. 25.) The IC Agreement goes on to list twenty-one numbered and detailed terms, some containing several subparts, covering eight pages in all. It is not until the bottom of the second page, in Paragraph 7 entitled "Model Representations and Warrantees" that the document references the internet, stating, "Model represents and warrants that she has not modeled for any other online Website and agrees hereafter not to model for any other online Website or other form of adult publication. Model acknowledges that BMI shall have the exclusive rights to Model's likeness for online purposes or for any other purposes." Defendants argue that models can deduce from these two sentences that BMI runs a website and plans to use her video "for online purposes." But Defendants have repeatedly professed otherwise and bury this "disclosure" in a lengthy legalistic document that models are not permitted to read and digest. The import of the section is a restriction on the model's outside activities, not a representation regarding Defendants' use of the videos. The Court accordingly finds that the IC Agreement also fails to adequately disclose Defendants' website and pre-designed intention to publish the videos online.

b. Defendants Film Women Reading a Verbal Script

Immediately before filming, Defendants hand women a sheet of paper (the "Script") and instruct them to read it for the camera. Women rarely have a moment to skim the Script before the camera is rolling and they are told to read. This Script says:

I {real name} am doing this scene for BLL Media of my own free will and I am of sound mind and body. I am not under the influence of drugs or any mind altering substances.

| I know the pictures and footage filmed today on | | | [date] will be used in the |
|---|--------------|--|----------------------------|
| scene name | [first name] | | |

After this scene is filmed I know I have released all rights whatsoever to the footage.

Anything contained in the footage may be used however BLL Media chooses.

| | All other model agreements are stated in the model release, I willingly signed to do |
| this sc | ene. |

(Ex. 754.) Some women read without comprehending, think little of it and do not ask any questions (such as Jane Does 1, 2, 4 – 8, 12, 15, 19, 20, and 21). Some women do ask questions, at which point Defendants simply continue to misrepresent, giving a flippant explanation such as "so that we know that [you're] sober" (08/27/19 Trial Tr. 68:13 – 14); for "testing the sound and the levels on the camera" (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 89:2); for "giving [us] permission to film [you]," (09/30/19 Trial Tr. 25:3); or even "to cover [our] butts" (10/16/19 Trial Tr. 65:24).

Some women are confused by the Script because they are saying that they are "not under the influence of alcohol or any other mind-altering substance," but they have just consumed alcohol and/or marijuana provided to them by Defendants and in Defendants' presence prior to reading. These women conclude, quite understandably, that the Script is of little import. (See Jane Doe 15's testimony: "everybody... in the room knew that I wasn't [of sound mind] because we had just smoked," 08/21/19 Trial Tr. 88:21 – 22.)

Most Plaintiffs testified that the Script did not raise any red flags. For those who testified that they did find the Script puzzling or concerning, they also testified that Defendants' explanation and continued assurances assuaged their doubts and put their minds at ease. (E.g., Jane Doe 10 testified she had no questions about the script because Defendants told her it was "the same thing I was signing in the documents." 10/08/19 Trial Tr. 68:28.)

The Court finds that by misrepresenting the purpose and meaning of the Script, Defendants continued to conceal material facts about the video's intended online destination, including the name of the website(s) on which it would appear.

c. Defendants Conduct a Staged Interview

Prior to beginning the sexual portion of the video, Defendants place the women on the bed and conduct an interview to "personalize" her for the audience. Defendants do not tell women about the interview before they travel to San Diego. The interview consists of Defendants asking the women personal questions about their sexual histories and preferences. Defendants instruct models to act "flirty and perky" and often give them scripted lines to repeat in response to certain questions, (Jane Doe 18 Depo. 144:21). Nearly every woman says she is "excited to shoot, but nervous" when asked how she is feeling (09/11/19 Trial Tr. 179:2). If Defendants do not like a woman's answer to a particular question, they stop filming, coach her on what to say (or not say) and re-shoot the scene. (E.g., Jane Doe 10 testified that Defendants instructed her on what to say, and they would stop and start the interview portion to make sure she got it right, 10/08/19 Trial Tr. 70:28 – 71:7.)

Some women are uncomfortable answering truthfully so they make up answers that they think Defendants will like or they just use the answers Defendants suggest. (E.g., Jane Does 1, 2, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 22.) Other women just go ahead and answer highly personal questions because they believe that no one in the United States will ever see the video. (E.g., Jane Does 3, 5.) Several Plaintiffs testified that they would not have agreed to the interview or answered many of the questions if they had known that Defendants planned to post it on the internet.

At trial, Defendants used these interviews as evidence to rebut some Plaintiffs' claims that they were frightened or wanted to leave, but could not do so. However, video of a woman acting outwardly "happy and flirty" in a staged interview is not persuasive evidence of the woman's actual state of mind. Defendants manipulated the interviews by coaching women on what to say and how to act and by carefully editing the video afterwards. Women needed to comply if they were to be paid.

It is not disputed that some Plaintiffs were fully taken in by Defendants' ruse, were not frightened, and felt quite comfortable with the experience as a whole. Video of these women cheerfully answering questions she believes no one will ever see does not necessarily undermine her fraud claim and in fact, shows how thoroughly she believed Defendants.

3. Defendants Use Coercive Tactics if Necessary

After the interview, the sexual portion of the video begins. Based on a stipulation among the Parties, the Court will not address this portion of the shoot except to note that it typically takes much longer than the advertised thirty minutes, often several times as long. Moreover, the woman's entire body, including her face, is fully visible to the viewer throughout, while the male actor's face is never in the frame. Andre Garcia was the male actor in all of Plaintiffs' videos. Defendants presented no evidence they informed any Plaintiff only her face (and not Garcia's) would be in the frame.

Further, the Court does consider the testimony of several Plaintiffs that, at some point during the shoot, they asked to stop, but Defendants would not permit them to leave until they had the footage they wanted. This fact is important because Defendants argued repeatedly that Plaintiffs "chose" to be in San Diego, "chose" to sign the documents, and "chose" to go through with the shoot.

Defendants' argument ignores the obvious implicit power dynamic invariably present in the room: The women are alone in a hotel room with two men they barely know who, although friendly at first, become aggressive and agitated if the women express hesitation or a desire to leave. Several Plaintiffs testified that they had second thoughts prior to or during the shoot but felt they were not in a position to try to leave.

Plaintiffs were also acutely aware of the risks of leaving the shoot. First, Defendants held and controlled Plaintiffs' plane tickets home and most Plaintiffs could not afford to purchase a ticket home or pay for a hotel room. Second, aware that Defendants had nude pictures and, in some cases, pornographic video of them, Plaintiffs did not want to do anything to rock the boat for fear that Defendants might retaliate. Furthermore, many women did not want anyone to know what they were doing and therefore had not told anyone and did not want to call anyone for help.

In fact, ten Plaintiffs reported that they asked or tried to leave at some point before or during the shoot, but Defendants insisted that they complete the shoot because the Defendants had already spent the time and money to get the woman there and to get set up. When Jane Doe 16 asked not to go through with the video shoot, Defendants threatened her to pay the cost of her plane ticket and hotel room—a cost that she could not afford. (09/24/19 Trial Tr. 24:9 – 18.) This testimony shows what happens when a woman tries to withdraw her consent. The Court's finds that, once in the hotel room, Plaintiffs lacked had any feasible means of egress until Defendants declared that the shoot was completed and released them.

4. Defendants Encourage Women to do a Solo Video

After the shoot involving sexual intercourse with Garcia, Defendants ask women to film a "solo" video (i.e., using a sex toy). Defendants tell women that the solo video will be distributed in the same limited manner as the first video. Continuing to believe Defendants' representations, many Plaintiffs proceed to film a solo video.

All Plaintiffs who shot more than one video with Defendants did so before their first video was published online. Plaintiffs had no way to discover that Defendants had lied to them before their videos appeared online. That some women shot more than one video does not mean that they were not defrauded. To the contrary, it is consistent with their testimony that they were deceived into filming the videos.

iii. Defendants Widely Distribute the Videos for Financial Gain Regardless of the Consequences to the Models

Defendants have never sold their pornographic videos on DVD format. (10/3/19 Trial. Tr. 150:5 – 10; 10/2/19 Trial Tr. 109:6 – 17 [Wolfe admitting that, as far as he knows, all pornographic videos Pratt and his companies have produced have only been distributed on the internet].) Contrary to their many representations, Defendants published Plaintiffs' videos on the internet. On top of this, Defendants used an aggressive marketing strategy to encourage as many people as possible to view the videos. Defendants publish the boy-girl videos on GirlsDoPorn.com and the solo videos on GirlsDoToys.com. The full-length videos are published only in the "members' area" of Defendants' subscription websites; these can only be accessed by purchasing a subscription. However, Defendants also post still images from the shoot and short clips from the video on the website's publicly accessible homepage as an advertisement to entice people to purchase a subscription. Videos and images of each Plaintiff appeared on the publicly available homepage.

Defendants Post Clips of the Videos on Popular Free "Tube" Websites

Once a video is posted on their subscription websites, Defendants embark on an aggressive advertising campaign to maximize the number of people who see or learn about the video, visit their website, and purchase a subscription. This effort includes making clips of the videos available on popular free "tube" sites, affiliate marketing, and ensuring that people who personally know the female model learn about the video—piquing their curiosity and making it "go viral."

In order to advertise for their subscription sites, Defendants post clips of their videos, including Plaintiffs' videos, on free "tube" sites, which are popular and heavily trafficked. During the relevant time period, Defendants had dedicated channels on numerous tube sites, including Pornhub.com, XVideos.com, and XnXX.com, among others. (See, e.g., Exs. 1579; 1582.7; 1585; 1736.) The GirlsDoPorn channels on free tube sites contain mostly 5- to 7-minute clips of videos filmed by Defendants, along with advertisements for and links to Defendants' subscription websites. (See, e.g., Exs. 1579; 1582.7; 1585; 1736.) Pratt and Wolfe both testified that Pratt personally posts all the videos to the GirlsDoPorn channels on the tube sites. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 209:10 – 23; 10/2/19 Trial Tr. 151:13 – 153:16.) Pratt also writes the captions posted on the tube sites. (Pratt Depo Vol. II, 427:19 – 21; 432:10 – 22.)

Free tube sites are popular, and Defendants' channels on these sites receive an enormous amount of traffic. The GirlsDoPorn channel on Pornhub is a popular channel on Pornhub, with more than 700,000 subscribers and more than 600 million views. (Ex. 1576.1.) All or nearly all of the Plaintiffs' videos were, at some point, available for free on GDP's Pornhub channel. (See Exs. 1576, 1736.) According to the view-counter on Pornhub, Plaintiffs' videos have been viewed anywhere from a few hundred thousand times to thirty-five million times.²⁷ (Ex. 1576.) Each Plaintiff's video was, at some point, available for free on public, non-subscription sites. (See Exs. 1576, 1581, 1582, 1583.)

2. Defendants Intentionally "Dox" (Publicly "Out") Their Models or Permit and Encourage Internet "Trolls" to Do So

Each Plaintiff has proven that after her video(s) were placed online, they spread throughout her social circles, including friends, family, co-workers, employers, teachers, and classmates. As a result, most Plaintiffs experienced merciless harassment. The Court finds that Defendants knew at the time they recruited each and every Plaintiff that this result was inevitable. The Court further finds that Defendants deliberately profited from the videos being leaked to Plaintiffs' personal circles and communities. At best, Defendants knowingly stood by while this happened, in order to increase website traffic and corresponding profits, while falsely assuring models that this nightmare scenario could never occur. At worst, Defendants encouraged and facilitated this outing process and even participated directly.

The spread of Plaintiffs' videos throughout their social circles does not happen by chance; it is the foreordained outcome of a deliberate campaign by online "trolls" to identify and humiliate women who appear in pornographic videos. Stemming from a perverse fascination with (and perhaps distain for) women who appear in pornography, anonymous internet users ("trolls") congregate on online forums such as PornWikiLeaks.com (Ex. 1735 [full list by episode number]), NameThatPorn.com (Ex. 1702 ["The List"]), and 8chan.net (Ex. 480), to identify these women by name and glean personal information about them. The trolls share the information they find—including a model's name, biographical information, links to her social media accounts, and other contact information—on the forum, ²⁸ and then the harassment begins. Armed with the woman's social media and contact information, some trolls spend their time sending links to her video to people connected to her on social media. Other trolls contact the models personally to attack, bully, and shame them, or to comment on their videos and proposition them.

Defendants admit they have been aware of such lists for years. (Pratt Depo. Vol. II, 350:21 – 351:18; 10/2/2019 Trial Tr. 131:10 – 132:17). In fact, Defendants have something of a cult following on these forums. Numerous websites and forums exist for the sole purpose of outing and doxing GDP models. (See, e.g., Ex. 178 [Instagram account called "GirlsDoPornRealName"]; Pratt Depo. Vol. II 351:25 – 352.2 [Pratt discussing "real IDs, maybe Girls Do Porn or just something dot blog spot"].) At one time, PornWikiLeaks hosted a forum called, "Girlsdoporn.com GDP Girls Do Porn Exposed real names and personal family info." (Ex. 1658.) Pratt knew about this forum and the information about GDP models that was posted there. (Pratt Depo. Vol. II 354:22 – 356:10 [Pratt acknowledged seeing "their real names, social medias, pictures of the videos," knew the name of the forum, and the subtitle claiming the information came from him].) Defendants actually owned the PornWikiLeaks forum at the time Plaintiffs' information was posted there.

The Court notes that Plaintiffs need not show that Defendants personally leaked the names or participated in the harassment, although there is evidence that they did. It is enough that Defendants knew that Plaintiffs' names would be leaked, that the videos would be sent to many of the people they knew, and that they would be harassed. The Court has little doubt of Defendants' actual knowledge of these eventualities. Dozens of prior models complained to Defendants about their names being leaked in connection with the videos and about being harassed as a result—the earliest in the record is dated July 1, 2013. (Ex. 208.167 [email from Jane Doe 4 to jordan@girlsdoporn.com complaining about harassment and being lied to about distribution].) Pratt was certainly aware of PornWikiLeaks in particular in February 2015 when he purchased a domain called PornWikiLeaks.org. (Ex. 1744)

Despite this knowledge, Defendants never informed prospective models of the doxing lists and complaints of harassment. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 132:15 – 134:10 [Wolfe testifying that he knew about the lists and found them concerning but never told a model about them].) In fact, Defendants' business model depended on convincing models that these consequences—well-known to Defendants—were not within the realm of possibility. Defendants therefore continued to include the same misrepresentation in their initial recruitment email -- None of your personal information will be given out in the video or afterwards, no names etc. are used in the video."—as late as May 22, 2019. (Ex. 5400.2 [Garcia's email to Jane Doe A].)

Defendants immediately benefitted from doxxing of their models. Publication and dissemination of the models' names and personal information increased views and traffic to Defendants' tube channels, increased name ID for their brand, and boosted subscription sales.

The PornWikiLeaks forum specifically dedicated to identifying the women who appear on GDP at one point contained a prominent banner that read, "... real names and personal family info Right from the owner of Girlsdoporn.com ... he Exposes real names and personal family info of the closet whores he films." (Ex. 1658.4 [screenshot from July 29, 2015].) This banner, published on a site owned by Defendants, provides the most straightforward and plausible explanation of how GDP models' information was routinely made available. At minimum, Defendants knowingly permitted the banner to remain, encouraging members of the forum to continue their activities and attribute them to Defendants. Defendants offer no alternative explanation.

GDP model names were released in a manner that strongly suggests that Pratt was involved. internet archival history records show that on numerous occasions, multiple models were "outed" on the forum on the same day, with posts including names, pictures, social media accounts, email addresses, and other personal information.²⁹ (See, e.g., Ex.658.4, .7, .12, .15, .26, .29, .32, .35 [eight models outed on July 27, 2015]; Ex. 1658.46, .49, .62, .65, .69, .72, .75, .78, .82, .223, .225 [eleven models outed on Sept. 17, 2015]; Ex. 68.88, .91, .94, .97, .100, .103, .182, .185, .188, .190, .193, .196, .198, .202 [fourteen models outed on Sept. 18, 2015].) The coordinated mass releases indicate that Defendants themselves were controlling the flow of leaked information; again, Defendants offer no alternative explanation.

Defendants recognized the traffic and notoriety their websites received on the PornWikiLeaks forum and sought to maximize the benefit they received from it. Records from GoDaddy show that the domain name PornWikiLeaks.com was transferred into Pratt's account as of November 12, 2015. (Exs. 1744.551 – 552, 1744.978.) Defendants claim that Pratt purchased PornWikiLeaks so that he could take down the names of GDP models posted there. However, the internet archival data for PornWikiLeaks belies this purported explanation. After the transfer, the GDP doxxing pages were actively maintained for nearly seven months, until eight days after this lawsuit was filed. (Ex. 1577.157; Ex. 1658.280–287.)

All of this evidence points to the conclusion that Pratt owned and controlled PornWikiLeaks for at least seven months during which time he could have removed the GDP forum but chose not to. Instead, he continued to enjoy the financial benefit that PornWikiLeaks provided to his pornography business and only sought to clean up the website after Plaintiffs filed their lawsuit.

Defendants failed to offer a credible alternative explanation.

One particular piece of evidence confirms the likelihood, if not a reasonable certainty, that Pratt himself posted information about GDP models on PornWikiLeaks. The name and episode number of M.F., a third-party model who testified by deposition, were posted on the forum on July 31, 2015, along with similar information regarding several other GDP models. (Ex. 1658.18.) That post also included one semi-nude and three nude pictures of M.F. (Ex. 1658.18 – 23.) M.F. testified that she took those pictures in her college dorm room at Pratt's request, and then sent them to Pratt and to no one else. No one else but Pratt could have had access to these photos because she deleted them within one week. (Deposition of M.F. taken on April 1, 2019 at 13:7 – 25; 14:20 – 15:8.)

Defendants' ownership and control of PornWikiLeaks is not an isolated incident but part of a pattern that shows that Defendants' business practices include exploiting models' real names for private gain. After first testifying that GirlsDoPorn has never used models' real names to market its website, Wolfe admitted that he owned multiple domain names containing a prior model's name. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 150:23 – 153:18; see also Ex. 1744.557 [showing Pratt owned a domain name containing the same model's name].)³⁰

In sum, the Court finds that Defendants not only disseminated Plaintiffs' videos online but went a step further to widely publish Plaintiffs' identities as it suited their interests.

3. Defendants Ignore Models' Complaints or Threaten Legal Action

When models eventually learn that their videos are published online and widely available to anyone in the United States, they often complain to Defendants. Of the twenty-two Plaintiffs, twelve presented documentary evidence that they attempted to contact Defendants after finding their videos online. (Ex. 208.167 [JD4], Ex. 1729 [JD6], Ex. 473, 474 [JD11].) Several Plaintiffs testified that they attempted to contact Defendants but did not have a written record.

When Defendants received these complaints and requests, they responded in a number of ways. Several Plaintiffs testified that their complaints were ignored and their phone numbers blocked. (e.g. Jane Does 1 (Trial Tr. 09/11/19 at 211:24 – 212:22) and 9 (Trial Tr. 09/30/19 at 34:15 – 22).) According to testimony, Pratt, Wolfe, and Garcia actually instructed their employees to block models' phone numbers as soon as the shoot was done. (Wright Depo. 24:22, 24:25 – 25:5; Trial Tr. 09/20/19 at 122:2 – 25.)

Reference model Kailyn Wright testified that Defendants told her that if any of the models contacted her to complain, she should block the model's phone number and not respond. (Wright Depo. 24:22 – 25:05.) Garcia is recorded telling McKay to "add them [prospective models] online for a little bit and then un-follow or block after they shoot." (McKay Depo. 75:11 – 17.)

If Defendants did respond to a complaint personally, they often did so in a threatening manner. (Ex. 923 [Jane Doe 5]; Ex, 886 [Jane Doe 19]; and Ex. 924 [Jane Doe 20].) For example, when Taylor Rodgers learned her videos were online, she called and texted both Pratt and Garcia, accusing them of lying to her. (Rodgers Depo. 43:7 – 18.) Pratt responded by text, saying, "you don't know what we are capable of, we have your social security number." He threatened to report her to the IRS and take other unspecified actions. (Id. at 44:1 – 15.) As Rodgers' video continued to spread, her name became attached to it and people in her town obtained her phone number. Rogers then contacted Pratt again. (Id. at 47:8 – 25.) This time, he confirmed that her name should not be attached to the video and said he would try to get it removed. This never happened. (Id. at 48:2 – 11.)

In some instances, Defendants appeared to be willing to help the women solve the problem of public disclosure but never actually took any action. (Ex. 923 [JD20], Ex. 789 [JD16], Ex. 5405 [JDA].) In other cases, Defendants referred complaints to Panakos Law, which sent the women cease and desist letters threatening legal action. (Ex. 49 [JD1], 837 [JD 17], Ex. 1740.15 – 16.)

Defendants also threaten legal action if a prior model attempts to tell her story as a warning to others. For example, Jane Doe 17 posted advertisements in the "gigs" section on Craigslist that unmasked Defendants as GirlsDoPorn and warned women not to respond. (Ex. 836.) Panakos Law quickly removed the posts and dispatched a cease and desist letter to Jane Doe 17 that contained semi-nude pictures of Jane Doe 17. (Trial Tr. 09/03/19 at 79:13 – 25, referring to Ex. 837.)

Whenever a model contacts a website to attempt to remove a video, Defendants respond by sending the signed documents and asserting that the model is making a false claim. (E.g., Doe 8 Depo. 42:7 – 43:25.) However, when models request a copy of the documents they signed at the shoot, Defendants ignore the request or refuse to honor it. (Exs. 43, 58 [JD1], Ex. 253 [JD5]; Ex. 758 [JD15].)

4. Defendants Profit Handsomely from their Fraudulent Scheme

Pratt estimated that, shortly before this lawsuit was filed, GirlsDoPorn generated $2.5 million per year, and GirlsDoToys generated approximately $18,000 per year. He also estimated that he has approximately 200 unpublished videos on hand and that each video has a fair market value of between $30,000 and $40,000. (Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 56:10-16, 62:1-10.) The rights to trademarks and domain names also have intrinsic values.

The Court finds that Domi was not forthcoming in producing financial information during discovery, so the revenue and value of Domi cannot be estimated. However, Pratt admits that he received a salary of approximately $4,000 per week, or $19,000 to $20,000 per month, from Domi.³² A portion of Defendants' revenue came from their own affiliate site, Forum.DoPorn.com, which Pratt estimated brought in $2,500 per week.³³

The Parties stipulated that Defendants received a total of 1,025,831.50 in profits from the use of the twenty-two Plaintiffs' videos. (11/4/2019 Trial Tr. 40:15-19.) Thus, it is undisputed that Defendants derived 46,628.70 from the use of each Plaintiff's video(s).

Plaintiffs' financial expert Robert Taylor offered opinions on two matters. First, he was asked to project the economic benefit of Pratt's library of unpublished videos. He testified that he estimated the "present value of the economic benefit that will inure to Mr. Pratt from what I have been informed is a library of in excess of 200 previously unuploaded or unviewed videos" to be $4,672,194. (11/4/19 Trial Tr. 45:7 – 14.)

³¹ (Pratt Depo. Vol. II, 399:22-400:6.) As of May 2019, Pratt estimated that he received approximately $150,000 per month from subscription sales processed by CCBill. (Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 76:25-77:17.)

³² (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 254:20-255:5; Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 101:2-101-7.)

³³ (Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 122:24-125:9; 127:5-127:9.)

Second, Taylor was asked to estimate the net worth of Pratt's entire non-Domi enterprise. Taylor testified that this net worth analysis was based on incomplete and outdated evidence. Taylor testified that he would have preferred to receive "much more current data" to use in his analysis to permit the "most accurate assessment." (11/4/19 Trial Tr. 50:24 – 51:25.) In his opinion, performing the analysis with the data he had "wouldn't be as accurate or precise as if [he] had the information as of current." (Id. at 52:1-9.) But he gave the most accurate estimate he could based on the information Defendants provided.

To do so, Taylor started with the projected income above and added the net tangible assets of BLL Media, Inc. and Merro Media, which he extracted from the respective balance sheets for each entity as of December 31, 2018. (Id. at 49:19 – 17.) BLL Media's net assets were worth $1,009,593. (Ex. 5317; Ex. 1677.1247 – 1248 [Total Equity].)³⁴ Merro Media's net assets were worth $204,805. (Ex. 5317; Ex. 1677.1273 – 1274 [Total Equity].) Taylor also added the value of other assets, including Pratt's home in Rancho Santa Fe and Pratt's Lamborghini. (Id. at 48:18 – 49:10.) According to Pratt's bankruptcy schedule, his home netted $507,545 and his car netted $93,082. (Ex. 5317.) The sum of these amounts is $6,487,219.

Based on the evidence, the Court accepts Taylor's analysis and finds that Defendants' non-Domi pornography enterprise is worth an estimated $6,487,219.

5. Defendants' Conduct After Plaintiffs' Brought this Lawsuit

a. Defendants Retaliated Against Plaintiffs

Shortly after Jane Doe 1 retained counsel in an effort to obtain a copy of the documents she signed and get her videos removed from the internet, the Court finds Defendants leveled significant harassment against her. Jane Doe 1's GDP sex video was suddenly and immediately sent to dozens of students, professors, and administrators at her law school, (Exs. 60, 63, 90 - 92, 97.)

³⁴ Taylor explained that, "The net tangible assets are the amounts that are reported on the balance sheet at the end of 2018. The present value of the projected income is projecting future income from an existing library of videos, and it's just taking that future income and determining the present value of it. They are two separate time periods. One currently exists on a balance sheet, or at least it's reported on a balance sheet, and the other one is future income. They are separate." (11/4/19 Trial Tr. 50:8-17.)

While Defendants deny they had anything to do with this harassment, the record indicates that it is more likely than not that they were behind the harassment. Shortly after Jane Doe 1 contacted Defendants, an article appeared on a popular gossip website, which focused on the fact that she was a law student and maliciously impugned her character and intelligence. (Ex. 77.) This article contains one telltale detail suggesting that Defendants are behind it—the unfounded accusation that Jane Doe 1 "escorts in Vegas over the summer." (Id.) Jane Doe 1 testified that this is something Garcia asked her to say during the interview prior to her video but she refused and said she was a hotel receptionist. (Trial Tr. 09/11/19 at 191:16 – 192:11). She said that no one had ever accused her of such a thing before and that she believed the comment in the article could only have come from Garcia or Wolfe. (Trial Tr. 09/11/19 at 236:1 – 11.)

The Court finds that Pratt, disguised as "Taylor Ann Fairchild," personally took action to spread Jane Doe 1's video to important people in her life, including her employer (Ex. 99), her college soccer coach (Ex. 115), and her sister (Ex. 97). The same Ann Fairchild account also contacted Jane Doe 21's mother revealing the video. (Ex. 963.)

b. Defendants Attempted to Tamper with Witnesses

Two witnesses have testified that Defendants or someone on their behalf have offered them money to either refuse to speak with Plaintiffs' counsel or to engage with Plaintiffs' counsel to learn information for Defendants. After the lawsuit was filed, Defendants, through employee Kevin Gibson, offered to pay reference woman Alicia McKay $10,000 in exchange for any information she could provide about or from the Plaintiffs' attorneys. (McKay Depo. 90:19 – 91:22; 96:23 – 97:10.

Reference woman Amberlyn Clark also testified that Garcia offered her approximately $1,000 to "compensate [her] for [her] troubles of having to deal with this" and to "not talk to anyone who had been contacting [her]." (8/20/19 Trial Tr. 167:22 – 169:6.)

| С. | Defendants Attempted to Harass and Intimidate Plaintiffs |
| | Counsel |

Defendants have also taken highly unethical actions against Plaintiffs' counsel either in hopes of intimidating them or simply to punish them. Plaintiffs offered numerous articles that have been published online that contain outrageous accusations about Plaintiffs' counsel. (Ex. 1704.) The testimony of Witness Jamia McDonald strongly suggested Pratt was responsible. (10/29/19 Trial Tr. 49:24 – 50:17 [discussing Ex. 1722.1].) Some of these false articles were posted on two websites that Pratt owned and controlled at one point, suggesting that he had a hand in publishing them or at least had the ability to remove them. (Ex. 1704 [adultfyi.com] and Ex. 1744.978 [PornWikiLeaks.com].)

Ms. McDonald also testified that she was hired by Gibson to call both Plaintiffs' attorneys as many times a day as possible, at all hours, in order to pester them and subsume their time. (Trial Tr. 10/29/19 at 47:16-27). She received $300 per week for doing so. (Id. at 48:2-16).

d. Defendants Do Not Improve Their Business Practices in Response to this Lawsuit but Instead, Adjust their Scheme So
They Can to Continue to Recruit New Models

In the face of a lawsuit by twenty-two previous models and despite reference women and former employees coming forward to testify, Defendants have done nothing to change their business practices to solve any of the problems raised by the Plaintiffs. Wolfe testified that GirlsDoPorn.com is still not disclosed anywhere in their documents. (Trial Tr. 10/02/19 at 94:10 – 95:15, 96:9.)

The testimony of Jane Doe A made clear that Garcia is still using the same recruiting practices that are at the core of this lawsuit. (Trial Tr. 10/31/19 at 36:15 – 37:14; 41:5 – 14.) As of May 2, 2019, Garcia was still sending the same initial stock email. (Ex. 5400). Defendants created a new modeling website, CaliforniaModeling.com, that looks similar to BeginModeling.com (Ex. 5409), which may not be as useful as a recruiting tool because it has been discussed by name in this lawsuit.

iv. Individual Plaintiff Factual Findings

Having considered the testimony and credibility of each witness, as well as the evidence, the Court finds the following facts:

Jane Doe 1

In July 2015, Jane Doe 1, clerking part-time at a law firm in Nevada, after completing her first year of law school, was in need of additional money to cover her expenses, so she applied for modeling jobs on Craigslist. (9/11/19 Trial Tr. 147:25 – 148:21.) After responding to Defendants' ad, she received Jonathan's stock email. Jane Doe 1 exchanged emails and texts with Jonathan before speaking to him on the phone. (See Ex. 5; Ex. 9.1 [Jane Doe 1 asked by text, "where does the footage end up?" Jonathan responded, ". . . I rather me explain everything to you over the phone. It's more professional and easier."].)

Over the phone, Jonathan told Jane Doe 1 that the video "was just for this one guy in Australia on one DVD that couldn't be copied. He wouldn't know my name, I wouldn't know his. It was just all going to be confidential. There was going to be, like, documents that represented this, that no one else could see it, it would never be online, and my name would never be attached to it." (9/11/19 Trial Tr. 157:5 – 10.) Jonathan asked her to send him "nude photos for approval by the owner," which he assured her would be kept "completely confidential," so she complied. (Id. at 163:4 – 18.)

Jane Doe 1 believed Jonathan because she specifically told him she was in law school and he said he shared her concerns about confidentiality, saying "I can't have my friends or family knowing anything either." (Id. at 157:23-25; 210:8-16.) He told her "he had shot models before for this collector, and they had never had any issues, and no one ever found out about it." (Id. at 158:1-5.)

Jane Doe 1 also spoke with reference model Kailyn Wright via FaceTime prior to traveling to San Diego. Wright's reassurances had a "massive impact" on her decision to do the shoot. (Id. at 168:8 – 10.) Upon arriving in San Diego, Jane Doe 1 continued seek and receive assurances about confidentiality and distribution from both Jonathan (whom she identified as Garcia) and Ben (whom she identified as Wolfe), the videographer. (Id. at 170:17 – 173:8.)

In the hotel room, Jonathan encouraged Jane Doe 1 to consume alcohol to calm her nerves, and she "felt the effects of the alcohol" by the time she was handed the documents to sign. (Id. at 174.5 - 10.) Ben also distracted her by filming her and asking her questions while she attempted to review and sign the documents. (Id. at 183.18 - 22.) She asked for time to read the documents but was told there was no time. (Id. at 180.17 - 181.24 [when she asked questions, Jonathan "asked me to cooperate and not be so difficult"].) She asked for a copy of the documents and was told she would receive one later, but she never did. (Id. at 182.3 - 9.)

She read the script without asking questions because she believed she knew how the video would be used. (Id. at 190:13 – 191:7 ["I knew I wasn't of sound mind and body, that I had been drinking, but they knew that as well because Jonathan was drinking with me."].)

Jane Doe 1 was convinced by Jonathan's continual need to seek the approval of "the owner" by text or phone prior to and during the shoot, by Ben's Australian accent, and by both Jonathan and Ben's repeated assurances. (Id. at 172:20 – 173:8, 174:11 – 179:3.) Believing the ruse, Jane Doe 1 shot three videos with Defendants and even agreed to act as a reference before she learned that Defendants released her video online in October 2015. (Id. at 200:13 – 201:24)

Jane Doe 1 learned her videos were online in October 2015 when she received a call from her boyfriend, followed by a link. (Id. at 210:20 – 211:14.) She immediately called Jonathan, then Ben, multiple times but neither answered, so she texted saying it was an emergency but never received a response. (Ex. 9.28, 9.32 – 33.) A few days later, when she tried to call again and found the number had been disconnected, she realized that they were part of the scheme. (9/11/19 Trial Tr. 212:11 – 22.) Jane Doe 1 also texted reference model Kailyn Wright, who quickly confirmed her suspicions. (Ex. 44.1.)

³⁶ In describing the effects she felt, Jane Doe 1 stated, "I struggled changing between outfits. When the collector/owner was picking out my outfit, I stumbled. When I got up from the desk, at one point I just got really light-headed and a bit dizzy. There was another point where, when I used the restroom, I wiped and I missed throwing it into the toilet." (Sept. 11, 2019 Trial Tr. 188:18-24.) Filling out the documents was "a little bit difficult" because she felt "intoxicated at that point." (Id. at 183:16-21.)

³⁷ Jonathan and Ben instructed Jane Doe 1 on how to answer the questions. She mostly responded as they requested, with one exception: they asked her to say she was an escort in Las Vegas. She refused because "it was illegal, and there were a million other things we could come up with for creating the story." (9/11/19 Trial Tr. 191:12 – 193:2.)

She sent an email to an address she found on the GirlsDoPorn website (Ex. 47), but this time she received a response—a cease and desist letter from Panakos Law threatening to seek a restraining order. (Ex. 49.) At this point, Jane Doe 1 retained Mr. O'Brien, who contacted Mr. Sadock on October 28, 2015 requesting copies of the agreements at issue, (Ex. 43.1 – 2.), which were not produced at that time.

Within days, students, professors, and deans at her law school began receiving calls and emails referencing or containing links to her video. (Exs. 60 [11/12/15]; 63; 1653.97; 1653.250 [11/18/15]; 1653.249 [11/22/15]; 90, 91, 93 [all 12/12/15].) Approximately 60 emails of this type were sent to her law school. (Ex. 1653.303 – 307; 9/11/19 Trial Tr. 221:14 – 22.) When Jane Doe 1 received a threatening phone call, she began to fear for her safety and so reached out to her dean for assistance and filed a police report. (Ex. 1653.120; 9/11/19 Trial Tr. 228:2 – 15.)

On November 20, 2015, Jane Doe 1 received a message from someone forwarding her an article about her from TheDirty.com, a popular gossip website, which was also forwarded to her law school. (Ex. 77.2 – 14; 1653.250.) This article, viciously attacked Jane Doe 1 and, importantly, contained an accusation that she "escorts in Vegas over the summer." (Ex. 77.2.) This detail led Jane Doe 1 to believe that the article came from either Garcia or Wolfe, who were the only two people in the room when Garcia encouraged her to say on the video that she was an escort in Vegas. (9/11/19 Trial Tr. 236:1 – 11.)

In or around the end of December 2015, the Court finds that Pratt, disguised as "Ann Fairchild," began reaching out to important people in Jane Doe 1's life and informing them about the video.³⁸ He sent an email disclosing the video to the law firm where she was working (Ex. 99) and to her college soccer coach (Ex. 115), as well as a Facebook message to her sister. (Ex. 97.)

³⁸ Plaintiffs' cyber security expert Charles DeBarber concluded that the probability that the Ann Fairchild account was operated by anyone other than Michael Pratt was "way past lottery odds." (9/26/19 Trial Tr. 74:13 − 75:6.) He testified that after sending "honeypots" (emails that contain a mechanism that creates an auto-response when opened) to mike BLL-media.com and to the Ann Fairchild account and receiving responses to both including IP address and VPN information, "there was no other reasonable conclusion but the same person behind that BLL Media [account] was the same as Ann Fairchild." (Id. at 60:2 − 61:23.) Given that the two "pings" had "the same IP address for that VPN and the same user-agent string [which roughly identifies the type of device] within six minutes," there was no other reasonable conclusion. (Id. at 60:4 − 7; 62: 2 − 13.)

Jane Doe 1 believes that the communications disclosing the video to her law school, employer, former coach, and sister came from Defendants or someone acting on their behalf as a form of retaliation for her decision to retain an attorney and take action.

On November 10, 2015, Jane Doe 1 learned about PornWikiLeaks from Kailyn Wright. (Ex. 44.7 - 9.)³⁹ She visited the forum but did not see any information about herself until November 26, 2015—well after the first emails were sent to her law school and after the article in The Dirty appeared. (Ex. 112.1.) Within days, pictures and links to her social media, law school website, modeling profile on ModelMayhem.com, the article on TheDirty, her college soccer team website, and her current employer were posted on the forum. (Ex. 112.1 – 9.)

The release of the video had and continues to have a significant impact on Jane Doe 1, perhaps more so because of her chosen career path. As a result of the messages to her law school, Jane Doe 1, who was previously very active in law school, stopped participating in school events and activities, and began to hate school. (9/12/19 Trial Tr. 14:3 – 7, 20:4 – 17.) She struggled to focus in class; she had to have a friend walk her to class because she frequently threw up on the way to class due to the anxiety of being seen in public. (Id. at 70:21 – 71:4.) Although she completed law school and passed the bar exam, Jane Doe 1 no longer wishes to be an attorney because of the impact the video has had on her reputation. (Id. at 73:1 – 9.) Jane Doe 1 testified that she used to want to be a mother, but now she feels that she cannot because she would not want to put a child through what she is going through. (9/12/19 Trial Tr. 76:7 – 15.)

Jane Doe 1 experienced fear and paranoia after receiving a threatening phone call in which a male voice called her a disgrace and stated her address and where she walked her dog. (Id. at 69:11 – 19 [at the time she happened to live in the same apartment building as at least one of the defendants].) She has severe anxiety and depression for which she has been prescribed multiple medications. (Id. at 67:5 – 10; 9/17/19 Trial Tr. 118:16 – 25.) She has twice attempted suicide: first, by taking a bottle of pills within a month or two after the video appeared online, and second, in

³⁹ Jane Doe 1 used PornWikiLeaks to contact other models filmed by Defendants as research for her own case. She told them her story, informed them she was filing a lawsuit, and let them know that they could likely join if they wanted. If these women responded, she referred them to her attorneys. (9/12/19 Trial Tr. 38:10-39:25; 40:1-3 [nobody encouraged her to recruit plaintiffs for the lawsuit].)

2018, when she attempted to load her boyfriend's pistol, but it discharged accidentally and lodged a bullet into the floor. (9/12/19 Trial Tr. 76:16 - 77:15.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 1 to be credible.

Jane Doe 2

After responding to a Craigslist ad for modeling in early 2015, Jane Doe 2 received Jonathan's stock email. ⁴⁰ Jane Doe 2 testified that when she spoke on the phone with Jonathan, "I asked him numerous times if anyone I know would know, if it was private, and he reassured me many times that I had nothing to worry about." (9/25/19 Trial Tr. 56:22 – 24.) Jonathan told Jane Doe 2 the video would be distributed on DVDs overseas; he never mentioned online distribution or GirlsDoPorn.com. (Id. at 57:2 – 12.) She was told the video was for a "private buyer." (Id. at 110:15 – 18.) Jonathan asked her for nude photographs, so she took and sent some pictures without showing her face. (Id. at 24:14 – 16.)

Jane Doe 2 received contact information for three reference models. (Id. at 59:1-6.) She spoke to one of the references who assured her "I didn't have to worry about it in terms of my concern of where the videos would go and who would see it and my privacy." (Id. at 58:8-11.) She did not contact the other two references, but was reassured by the fact that he had provided so many. (Id. at 59:8.)

In person, when Jane Doe 2 asked both Jonathan (whom she identified as Garcia) and Isaac (whom she identified as Wolfe), the videographer, about distribution of the video, "[t]hey said not to worry about it and that we already talked about it." (Id. at 67:15-25; 118:3-24.) Prior to the shoot and prior to receiving the paperwork, Jane Doe 2 inhaled Garcia's second-hand marijuana smoke. (Id. at 64:13-17.) However, she believes she was not intoxicated. (Id. at 119:16-21.)

When Garcia presented her with the documents to sign, Jane Doe 2 attempted to read them but "they were not very clear to fully read and understand." (Id. at 65:10-11.) She testified that she asked for time to read the Model/Talent Release, but "[t]hey rushed me and told me that we already went over it and to sign it." (Id. at 124:11-24; see also 123:2-8.) Jane Doe 2 asked about the script when Isaac/Wolfe handed her the paper, but he simply instructed her to read it into the camera. (Id. at 66:2 – 11.)

Based on Defendants' representations, Jane Doe 2 filmed two videos, both of which Defendants later published online. (Id. at 69:22 – 70:1.) Garcia reached out asking her to do a third video but she did not respond. (Ex. 149.) Jane Doe 2 testified definitively that she would not have filmed the videos if she had known that Defendants owned and operated a website and that the video would be public. (9/25/19 Trial Tr. 96:24 – 97:13.)

When she learned that the video was online from her boyfriend at the time, Jane Doe 2 was "scared and anxious." (Id. at 69:22-70:22.) Soon thereafter, she learned that everyone at her job knew about the video and people were gossiping, so she stopped going to work without giving notice. (Id. at 94:14-17.) Many people from her high school who learned about the video called her derogatory names and she lost friends as a result. (Id. at 93:24-94:6; Ex. 138 [harassment from someone she believed to be a friend].) Her family found out about the video, and even they have lost friends as a result. (9/25/19 Trial Tr. 13-21.)

Jane Doe 2 received harassment through social media, including "many unwanted pictures of random guys and their private areas." (Id. at 87:14 – 88:23; Exs. 147, 148, 150.) People have used the video to blackmail her, threatening to spread the video to her friends, family, and boyfriend if she did not do something for them. (9/25/19 Trial Tr. 87:3 – 9.)

Jane Doe 2 attempted to change her appearance because she was afraid of going out in public and being recognized. (Id. at 95:22 - 96:4.) She testified that she isolated herself ("I went to work or school and would just come straight home, nothing else") and avoided all interactions. (Id. at 94:21 - 95:6.) She has experienced severe anxiety and panic attacks, which still occur today. (Id. at 95:2 - 6.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 2 to be credible.

Jane Doe 3 was 19 years old and attending college in San Diego when she received an email from Defendants in the fall of 2013 saying they saw her profile on Explore Talent and asking her to fill out an application on BeginModeling.com. (10/1/19 Trial Tr. 10:20 - 11:2.) Thereafter, she received the stock email from Jonathan. (Ex. 151.) She did not respond until March 2014 when she became behind on her rent and was in danger of eviction. (Id. at 13:10-17.) When Jane Doe 3 and Jonathan spoke on the phone, he told her "that it was going to be exclusively on DVD in South America, and that my name would never be associated with it. . . . He assured me that it would not be on the Internet." (Id. at 15:9-23.)

Jane Doe 3 exchanged text messages with the reference model, who confirmed that the video was "completely anonymous" and a comfortable experience. (Id. at 18:20 – 24.) She testified that this communication "helped solidify my decision" and made Jonathan seem more trustworthy. (Id. at 18:25 – 19:5.) Jane Doe 3 met Jonathan (whom she identified as Garcia) and Ben (whom she identified as Pratt) at an apartment on Market Street before they drove together to a hotel to shoot the video. (Id. at 19:25 – 21:7 [explaining that although she was scared at first, she became comfortable with Defendants while chatting in the car on the way to the hotel].)

In the hotel room prior to the shoot, Jane Doe 3 asked Pratt about distribution twice, specifically whether it was still going to be distributed as a DVD in South America; he assured her that "it's definitely going to be" and told her not to worry about it. (Id. at 21:22 – 28.) Jane Doe 3 trusted Defendants because "they offered up a lot of information. They reassured me on multiple occasions it wasn't going to be online." (Id. at 61:11 – 17.)

When Ben gave Jane Doe 3 the documents to sign, he told her it "was basically just going over everything we agree upon" and told her she could pick a stage name. (Id. at 22:13 - 16; 24:2 - 3 [writing "Marie" as a stage name].) While she was signing, Pratt distracted her by filming and interviewing her, asking personal questions. (Id. at 22:23 - 23:8.) She skimmed the document but found it confusing; she signed based on Defendants' repeated representations. (Id. at 23:24 - 24:1.) She asked for a copy of the documents she signed, and Pratt said he would mail her a copy but never did. (Id. at 24:19 - 23.) Jane Doe 3 was never asked to read a script.

During the interview on the bed, Pratt asked Jane Doe 3 about past sexual experiences and relationships. (Id. at 25:3 – 4.) Believing no one she knew would ever see the video, she shared personal information about herself as well as other people that she would not have shared if she had known the video was destined for the internet. (Id. at 25:1 – 24.) Jane Doe 3 testified she would not have shot the video if she had known it would be online. (Id. at 77:26 – 28.)

Jane Doe 3 learned that her video was online in July 2014 when her manager pulled her aside while she was at work and told her that a video of her was "going around." (Id. at 27:15 – 22.) She was humiliated and had what she would later learn was her first panic attack. (Id. at 27:24 – 28:11.) She withdrew from the group of co-workers with whom she socialized frequently. (Id. at 28:15 – 20.) Soon thereafter, her friends from school began to discover the video. (Id. at 29:4 – 30:9.)

A friend of a friend attempted to blackmail her into having sex with him by threatening to spread the video if she did not accept his advances. (Ex. 172; 10/1/19 Trial Tr. at 30:12 – 33:6 [she was so frightened by this that she locked her front door and her bedroom door].) Jane Doe 3 and her boyfriend at the time eventually broke up because of the video; "He would constantly bring it up and we were really never able to move on from that." (10/1/19 Trial Tr. 34:16 – 19.)

She ultimately moved to Florida "for a fresh start" and because San Diego was "tainted" for her after the video came out. (Id. at 35:2-8.)

Jane Doe 3, her friends, family members (E.g., Ex. 175, 5426 [harassment received by mother]; Ex. 5424 – 5425 [friends being harassed], and current boyfriend are all harassed on social media. (10/1/19 Trial Tr. 36:11 – 14; 40:15 – 24; see, e.g., Exs. 162 – 166, 170, 173, 174.) Now, more than five years later, she still receives comments and messages and she is still impacted emotionally by them. (10/1/19 Trial Tr. 36:15 – 18; 41:21 – 24; 39:17 – 26 [most recently, people from her hometown learned about the video]; 50: 2 – 4; Ex. 5318.)

Jane Doe 3 believes the release of the video has impacted her long-term mental health. She continues to experience acute anxiety that more people will learn about the video, along with elevated anxiety generally; she now has panic attacks, which she never had before the video was released. (10/1/19 Trial Tr. 57:10 – 58:8.) She is concerned that her 13-year-old brother or his friends will discover the video; she is concerned the video will affect her ability to go to medical school, and she "can't even think about a family." (Id. at 59:4 – 13.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 3 to be credible.

|-----|---|
| 2 | Jane Doe 4 was a 20-year-old unemployed student living in North Carolina when she saw a |
| 3 | Craigslist ad for modeling that directed her to "BubblegumCasting.com." (Aug. 28, 2019 Trial Tr. |
| 4 | 79:1 – 18.) On the website, Jane Doe 4 saw and watched three videos depicting "just girls in |
| 5 | regular tank tops. They seemed very happy." (Id. at 80:20 - 81:6.) Prior to flying to San Diego, |
| 6 | Jane Doe 4 communicated with Garcia and Pratt by email, text, phone call, and FaceTime. (Id. at |
| 7 | 85:6 – 20.) Pratt and Garcia told her "it was only going to be sent to a DVD store in Australia, my |
| 8 | name wouldn't be attached, no one would ever know They said it wouldn't go on the internet." |
| 9 | (Id. at $86:2-18$.) Speaking with Garcia and Pratt over FaceTime made her feel more comfortable. |
| 10 | (Id. at 85:19 – 86:22 [she asked again about distribution and they reassured her].) |
| 11 | Defendants offered Jane Doe 4 contact information for a reference model but she did not |

Defendants offered Jane Doe 4 contact information for a reference model but she did not contact her because she "didn't want anyone else to know that I was doing it. . . . Just the offer made me feel a little bit more comfortable." (Id. at 88:9 – 18.)

When Jane Doe 4 asked about distribution again in the car after arriving in San Diego, Defendants continued to reassure her. (Id. at 89:25 – 90:5 ["They told me the same thing they kept telling me, Australia and no one would ever know, don't worry."].) Upon arriving in the hotel room, Pratt gave Jane Doe 4 approximately 5 to 6 alcoholic beverages from the minibar, which she testified made her feel "dizzy, lightheaded, especially when I sat down." (Id. at 91:15 – 92:12.)

Defendants put a stack of money and a piece of paper on the desk for Jane Doe 4 to sign; she counted the money, which was $2,000, the amount she was promised. (Id. at 92:23 – 94:20.) When she asked why she needed to sign anything, "They told me just to prove that I was 18, just reiterated what they already told me about distribution." (Id. at 93:2 – 12.) She attempted to read the documents, but she found it difficult in her intoxicated state. (Id. at 93:15 – 94:6.) She does not recall reading the script into the camera, and she appeared intoxicated in the video. (Id. at 94:21 – 95:2.)

After the sexual portion concluded, Defendants left abruptly and, feeling upset, Jane Doe 4 left the room. When she returned, most of the money they had given her was gone—there was an envelope of money, which contained a few $20s and a stack of $1s, totaling $400. (100:21 –

101:21.) Since Pratt was the only person with a key to the room to her knowledge, she believes he took the money. (101:22 - 102:4.)

Jane Doe 4 discovered the video had been released online about two months after the shoot, in late June 2013, when her friend informed her that the video was circulating through her college campus and a neighboring campus. (103:7 – 104:14; 111:19 – 112:7 [she ultimately learned that hundreds or maybe a thousand people at these schools knew about the video].) Jane Doe 4 immediately sent an email to GirlsDoPorn begging them to take it down, saying "I never authorized it to be put online. I was told it would be sent to a DVD in Australia only," and asking for her contract. (Ex. 208.168.) She described the harassment and her desperation; she threatened legal action, but she never received a response. (Id.)

Jane Doe 4 was forced to transfer to a school in another state to find a "fresh start." (112:8 – 12.) Upon starting school in Florida, Jane Doe 4 joined a sorority, but she was kicked out three weeks later because someone found the video. (Id. at 114:4 – 22; Ex. 208.54 – 56.) The video spread quickly, and she soon received text and social media messages about it, especially on the school's message board. (Ex. 208.59 – 76, 208.169.) One of her roommates posted a tweet saying, "MY ROOMMATE IS A PORNSTAR" and played the video over the speakers in the house so that Jane Doe 4 would hear it. (8/28/19 Trial Tr. 114:23 – 117:13 [she felt betrayed because she thought this was a friend].) Someone vandalized her car by painting male genitalia on the windows. (Ex. 208.57 – 58.)

Soon, people from her hometown in New Jersey discovered the video when someone posted it on her high school's Facebook page. (Id. at 112:15 – 23.) Both her immediate and extended family found out. When her mother and father found out, she felt as if she "completely failed them as a daughter. . . . that was my worst nightmare." (Id. at 113:1 – 16.) Although her parents have been very supportive, her extended family has not been so forgiving—she no longer has much of a relationship with her extended family and avoids family gatherings. (Id. at 113:17 – 21; 135:9 – 16.)

of me." (Id. at 134:2 – 15.) The video has impacted her romantic relationships. The person she was dating at the time the video was released was harassed and ridiculed her as a result. Another boyfriend broke up with her specifically because he and his family learned about the video. (Id. at 138:14-23.)

After the video was released in Florida, Jane Doe 4 was ridiculed for her body, so she started making herself vomit to lose weight. (Id. at 136:15 – 23.) Jane Doe 4 testified that, emotionally, she is "not the same person at all anymore." She has experienced debilitating anxiety, depression, paranoia, fear, and anger as a result of the video. She has trouble focusing and trusting people. She has cried "thousands" of times over the video and has not had a full night's sleep since it was released. (Id. at 135:17 – 136:9.) She has sought medical treatment from her primary doctor, a psychiatrist, and a therapist regarding her symptoms. (Id. at 136:24 – 137:6.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 4 to be credible.

Jane Doe 5 was 17 years-old⁴¹ and living alone in Florida when she first communicated with Defendants about doing a pornographic video after responding to a modeling ad on Craigslist. (9/18/19 Trial Tr. 8:19 – 9:1.) In an email, Jane Doe 5 asked Jonathan whether he could provide "any clips or anything from the company's work" and whether there was "any contracting involved." (Id. at 12:13 – 13:5; Ex. 218.) Jonathan responded, "I can go over everything with precise detail. It's more direct and professional, is there a number I can reach you at?" (9/18/19 Trial Tr. 12:22 – 13:2; Ex. 218.)

When she spoke with him on the phone, Jonathan explained that "the video was for a private collector" located in Australia and no one else would ever see it. 9/18/19 Trial Tr. 13:12-22.) He further stated that "the video would be sent in a sealed envelope and he [the collector] was legally contracted not to redistribute or produce the video we were making." (Id. at 13:13-16.) Jonathan told her that her name and information would never be released, which made her feel confident. (Id.

at 14:11-15.) Jonathan told her it would not be on the internet, and he never mentioned GirlsDoPorn.com. (Id. at 14:24-15:2.)

Jane Doe 5 spoke with a reference model named Hailey who assured her "that everything was safe, that they weren't scammers . . . most importantly that it never got back to her, it never went online, and no one ever found out about it." (Id. at 16:19-17:6.)

Although she was only 17 at the time, Defendants asked her to send nude pictures of herself. (Id. at 16:5-14.) Defendants booked Jane Doe 5's flight so that she arrived in San Diego on her 18^{th} birthday. (Id. at 19:2-11.)

Once in San Diego, Garcia invited Jane Doe 5 out to a club with his friends to celebrate her birthday with dancing and drinking. (Id. at 19:12-20.)⁴² The following day, Pratt purchased a birthday cake to use in the video to emphasize her age. (Id. at 20:17-21:5 ["He said the private collector really liked how young I was and wanted to make like a scene with it to show that I was just turning 18."].)

In the hotel room, Pratt instructed Jane Doe 5 to read the script into the camera, explaining that "it was just something saying that I was sober and not under the influence of drugs or alcohol." (Id. at 22:5 – 8.) Pratt also gave her documents to sign and began rushing her. Jane Doe 5 testified, "I told them I was sorry, I just wanted to make sure I knew what I was signing. And Michael told me it was - - what I just read pretty much, that it was just me saying I was sober and not under the influence." (Id. at 22:12 – 21.) Garcia and Jane Doe 5 smoked marijuana together both the night before and after the shoot finished. (Id. at 20:6; 25:6 – 7.)

Believing Defendants representations, Jane Doe 5 filmed two videos (the first with Garcia and Pratt as videographer, the second with Wolfe as videographer) and, before her videos were released online, was paid to act as a reference for 3 to 4 prospective models. (Id. at 26:3 – 20.) After filming with Defendants but before Defendants released her video online, Jane Doe 5 participated in an adult film produced by Reality Kings as a background actor; she took off her clothes but did not engage in any sexual acts—because she knew that video was going to be released online and she "didn't want that to be on the Internet." (Id. at 28:13 - 29:17.)⁴³

⁴² Jane Doe 5 believes that Garcia purchased her alcoholic beverages. He told her that "it was fine" for her to drink but "to not drink too much because the private collector didn't want me to be hungover or have glazed-over eyes in the video. And that Michael was going to be upset if he found out that we went out." (Id. at 19:21-20:3.)

Jane Doe 5 was considering doing a third shoot when her boyfriend advised her to obtain a copy of the documents she signed. (Id. at 34:5–35:17.) She asked Pratt via text for a copy of her documents, and, rather than complying, Pratt asked, "Whats the deal your trying to fuck us over or something?" [sic] and never sent her the documents. (Ex. 253.)

Shortly thereafter, she learned her video was online on several free porn sites, and she was devastated to find that her name was listed in the comments and people she knew were commenting. (Ex. 243.) Jane Doe 5 saw her name and links to all of her social media published on PornWikiLeaks along with her episode number. (Ex. 241.) She started "getting bombarded with harassment." Angry and upset, she sent Pratt and Garcia a text sarcastically thanking them for putting her whole video on Pornhub and informing them that she was "being harassed by [her] entire hometown." (Ex. 238.)

Jane Doe 5's social media was flooded with comments from strangers and people she knew: "They were all just sending me nasty things, soliciting, trying to solicit sex from me, sending me links and pictures and videos. Someone made a Facebook page with pictures of me with ejaculate on my face as the profile picture and where they would have discussions about the video, share their collages that they were making." (9/18/19 Trial Tr. 43:25 – 44:14; e.g., Ex. 251, 249, 246.)

Her family learned about the video and refused to talk to her. (9/18/19 Trial Tr. 39:4 – 8.)

Her mother received a Facebook message from a woman who sent a screenshot of Jane Doe 5 having intercourse with Garcia and commented in Spanish, "Your daughter is a slut." (Id. at 45:21 – 46:11; Ex. 268.) Her mother was "livid. At first she was saying the same mean things that people on the Internet were saying." (9/18/19 Trial Tr. 50:21 – 51:13 [someone left a note on her mother's car at the church referencing the video].) Jane Doe 5's younger sister (who was 12 – 14 years old at the time) was approached about the video many times, harassed and solicited for sex on Facebook. (Id. at 51:21 - 52:5.)

Jane Doe 5 received harassing messages from an ex-boyfriend threatening to send the video to her mother (Ex. 254) and to her father on Christmas day. (Ex. 250, 255.) Her father later received links to her video from multiple people. $(9/18/19 \, \text{Trial Tr.} 50:5 - 16.)$ Even though she changed her phone number due to harassment from the video, people have still found it and called to harass her as recently as two weeks before she testified at trial. (Id. at 59:6-18.)

The release of the video has had a profound impact on her mental health. Prior to the release, she had never experienced anxiety or had a panic attack. Since the video, she experiences anxiety daily and has suffered more than ten panic attacks. She has become very depressed and isolated herself from her friends and family. She was prescribed a sedative because she struggles to sleep at night. (Id. at 59:19-60:20.)

Since the video's release, she has sought medical treatment numerous times, been on Zoloft, Celexa, beta blockers, and Trazodone, but had to stop taking antidepressants because they interfered with her work. People tell her she has developed a very unhealthy drinking habit.

Overall, the video has done significant damage to her interpersonal relationships and professional life. (Id. at 60:22 – 61:12.)

She has many concerns about the future—what will happen when she gets married, whether she should have children, whether it is possible for her to still have a successful career in academia. (Id. at 61:13-22.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 5 to be credible.

Jane Doe 6

Jane Doe 6 was 18 years old, finishing her freshman year of college in Louisiana, working 15 to 20 hours per week, and living paycheck-to-paycheck when she responded to Defendants' Craigslist ad for modeling in May 2016. (9/27/19Trial Tr. 10:5 – 17.) When she first received Jonathan's stock email offering $5,000, she did not respond. (Id. at 18:9 – 15 [Ex. 276].) When Jonathan increased the offer twice to $7,000 (apparently for one shoot with the option of doing a second) and told her she could bring a friend, she responded. (Id. at 26:3 – 29:7 [Ex. 278, 284].)

The offer to let her bring a friend and to let her "talk to as many girls as possible" made her feel more comfortable. (Id. at 26:21-29:18.)

Over the phone, Jonathan explained that the video would only be sold on DVD in Australia, "it would never reach the Internet," and her "name would never be attached in any type of way." (Id. at 31:11 – 32:5.) When Jonathan sent her pictures, "it looked like everything he was promising me. I mean, they had nice cars. The hotel rooms looked very nice. It looked very professional. The girls looked happy. They had their money in their hand, smiling. They looked safe." (Id. at 34:4 – 13 [Ex. 285].)

Although Jane Doe 6 thought Jonathan seemed trustworthy, she had not made up her mind to do the video until she spoke with two reference models on the phone. (Id. at 38:17 – 20.) The first, Amberlyn [Nored Clark], reassured Jane Doe 6 that Defendants were truthful and that they did in fact send the video on DVDs to Australia, that "she's shot with them before and she's never had a problem. . . . And she said that no one ever found out about it." (Id. at 42:16 – 43:1.) The second reference also reassured her that the video "does not go on the Internet whatsoever." (Id. at 43:3 – 12.) Jane Doe 6 decided to do the video after speaking with the references "[b]ecause they seemed really genuine and [...] they assured me that they have never had problems with it, and [...] it felt really good hearing that from another woman that has filmed with them that they have never gotten harassment or it does not go on the Internet. So it was a lot of reassurance." (Id. at 43:13 – 23.)

Upon arriving in San Diego, Jane Doe 6 continued to seek assurance. When Reva Yousif picked her up from the airport, Jane Doe 6 told her she was "really nervous about being there" and "having second thoughts." (Id. at 49:2-4.) Ms. Yousif was "reassuring me that everything is going to be okay; just make your money, like no one is ever going to know about it. And I kind of thought of her as a motherly figure, like she was very comforting and very sweet, and I really liked her." (Id. at 49:5-10.)

On the day of the shoot, Garcia offered Jane Doe 6 marijuana, but she refused. (Id. at 57:1 – 8.) In the hotel room, cameraman Teddy Gyi and Garcia had Jane Doe 6 perform a "strip tease" before asking her to sign any documents or read the script; she did both wearing a robe, after getting fully naked on camera. (Id. at 60:4 – 15; 67:9 – 20.)

Upon receiving the documents, Jane Doe 6 tried to read the documents but found them confusing; "Teddy was paraphrasing every section of it for me so that I could understand. . . . He said that this paragraph just means that no names are going to be used and everything is kept confidential. This paragraph means that we have - - like this gives us the right to put it on DVD format to Australia." (Id. at 62:15 – 25.) Jane Doe 6 believed Teddy because he was, at that point, the fifth person to assure her of the things she had been promised. (Id. at 63:7 – 13.) While she filled out the documents, Teddy filmed her and asked her questions, which was distracting. (Id. at 63:18 – 64:18.) Teddy also asked her to read a script into the camera, which was, he explained, to show that she was sober, no one had forced her to be there, and that it meant she was letting them distribute the video on DVD in Australia. (Id. at 68:7 – 15; 70:5 – 24.)

Based on the representations of Defendants and their agents, Jane Doe 6 filmed one video. After filming, Garcia again reassured her that no one would find out about the video when she continued expressing concerns. (Id. at 73:13 – 25 ["He was like, 'I've done hundreds, and no one knows who I am. Everything is okay. You will be fine.""].) Jane Doe 6 testified that no one ever mentioned GirlsDoPorn.com or indicated the video would be online; she stated definitively that she would not have done the video if anyone had. (Id. at 58:9 – 14.)

Jane Doe 6 learned her video was online in early August 2016 when someone from her high school texted her some pictures from her video. She was distraught and immediately started looking for ways to remove it. (Id. at 87:8 – 22.) She quickly discovered her video on many free websites, including Pornhub, and sent emails to all of the websites she could find, begging them to take her video down. (Id. at 97:12 – 24 [e.g., Exs. 312, 313, 315, 316, 317].)

She did not try to contact Jonathan after the video was released because she was afraid of him and did not trust him. (Id. at 144:23 – 145:4.) Instead, she contacted the email address listed on GirlsDoPorn.com, begging them to remove the video and offering to purchase the rights because she was lied to, and the video was ruining her life to the point of being suicidal. (Id. at 156:6 – 158:18 [Ex. 1729].) The responses she received were vague, taunting, and unhelpful. (Id.)

People from her high school, elementary, middle school, coworkers, and regulars at her work all found out about the video. (Id. at 114:25-115:3) Working as a waitress, customers and coworkers both confronted her about the video and watched it in her presence; ultimately, she was forced to quit. (Id. at 117:12 - 18:16, 118:23 - 120:7.) Jane Doe 6 did not return to college that fall because she was not mentally stable enough to do so, which she attributes entirely to the video's release online. (Id. at 121:17 - 23.)⁴⁴

Jane Doe 6's mother learned about the video when her friend's husband showed her a clip of the video. (Id. at 177:2-11.) Nearly one year after the video was released, people from the town where she went to high school started finding out, and she received another wave of harassment. (Id. at 134:13-22 [e.g., Exs. 307, 308, 309, 314].) The video also affected her relationship with her boyfriend of seven years. He still holds it over her head and brings it up in every argument, saying that nothing he did could be as bad as the video. (Id. at 162:4-14.)

The release of the video online has changed her life significantly. She feels like she has been in hiding—she cannot connect with or trust people; she avoids public settings because if someone recognizes her from the video, she immediately has a panic attack. (Id. at 159:5 – 11.) She has engaged in self-harm and attempted suicide by overdosing on depression medication shortly after she discovered her video online. When the attempt failed, she became angry with herself. (Id. at 159:12 – 16.) Once, she went to the hospital to try to get help such as prescription medication, but the staff tried to admit her into a mental hospital instead. (Id. at 160:10 – 13.)

She has sought medical treatment for her emotional distress. She was finally able to see a therapist when she got health insurance approximately a year ago. (Id. at 159:25 – 160:8.) She has been prescribed four different medications for depression, one to help her sleep, another one for anxiety. (Id. at 160:19 – 24.) These measures have helped, but she continues to have suicidal thoughts to this day.

The Court finds Jane Doe 6 to be credible.

Jane Doe 7

Jane Doe 7's case is unique in that, prior to arriving in San Diego for the shoot, her communications with Defendants occurred through her friend, Lindsay, rather than directly.

⁴⁴ After filming, she learned about another girl at her college who had a similar experience. She saw the horrific treatment she received, and decided she could not handle that. (Id. at 120:14 – 121:16.)

(Deposition of Jane Doe 7, June 17, 2018 ("Doe 7 Depo. Vol. I") 26:1 – 10.) She never saw a Craigslist ad or an email from Defendants; instead, Lindsay spoke to Defendants and convinced Jane Doe 7 to accompany her from Texas to San Diego for what she was told would be "nude modeling to make money," based on representations Defendants made to Lindsay. (Id. at 69:2 – 8.) Jane Doe 7 also "didn't find out it was actually, like, filming pornography till I got there." (Id. at 69:21 – 24.)

Jane Doe 7 testified that Lindsay "said verbatim what [Defendants] told her. It was going to be Australia only and not in the United States and not online." (Id. at 70:16 – 25.) Lindsay told Jane Doe 7 that this was the information "Matt" gave her. (Id. at 71:21 – 72:2.) Jane Doe 7 testified that she and Lindsay took approximately one week to decide whether or not to do the shoot and that Lindsay "was in contact with him [Matt] every day" during that time and that he "made it sound very reassuring." (Id. at 72:12 – 73:3 ["I asked her to ask them repeatedly, and she said they kept assuring her that nothing bad was going to happen, and it was only going to be in Australia."].)

Soon after Lindsay and Jane Doe 7 arrived in San Diego, Defendants began making representations—for the first time, directly to Jane Doe 7—regarding a DVD being released in Australia. (Id. at 84:18 – 85:2.) She remembers specifically telling Defendants, "If anything was released in the United States or online or anything was accessible to, like, my family or friends, that it would completely ruin my life." (Id. at 85:16 – 20.) When Jane Doe 7 expressed her concerns about anonymity to Wolfe and Garcia on multiple occasions, they both verbally assured her, "You have nothing to worry about. It's not going to be online. It's not going to be in the US." (Id. at 86:8 – 19.)

Upon arriving in the hotel room and learning that the shoot involved pornography, Jane Doe 7 became scared and, although no one threatened her, felt she was unable to leave. (Id. at 83:3-21; see also 75:10-76:13 ["of course, I was freaking out, but I didn't really have a choice."].)

When Wolfe gave Jane Doe 7 documents to sign, Defendants did not give her a chance to read them and rushed her to sign, saying, "This is what we've already talked about. You already know what's going to happen." (Id. at 80:8 - 81:2 ["they were rushing me because Lindsay was next, and they had to get two people in in one day."].) Jane Doe 7 requested time to review them, but Wolfe said no. (Deposition of Jane Doe 7, August 8, 2018 ["Doe 7 Depo. Vol. II."] 315:6 – 13.) She asked Wolfe one final time to confirm the video would only be sold in Australia, to which he responded, "Yes, yes, yes. Just sign, sign, sign." (Doe 7 Depo. Vol. I, 89:4 – 13.) When she read the script into the camera, she was not concerned because she considered it in the context of the representations already made to her. (Doe 7 Depo. Vol. II, 320:13 – 25.)

Jane Doe 7 testified that if she had known the video would be published online, she would not have gone through with it but "would have taken off running." (Id. at 327:9 – 14.)

During the shoot, Jane Doe 7 began bleeding and experiencing pain. She testified, that she went in the bathroom, locked the door, and "I told them I didn't want to do it anymore," but they knocked on the door and told her, "We already paid you $2,000. You have to come out here and do it. The bleeding will stop as soon as you start intercourse again." (Doe 7 Depo. Vol. I, 154:1 – 9.) She eventually finished the video.

Jane Doe 7 learned that her video was posted online from a friend who confronted her about it. (Id. at 27:13-16.)⁴⁵ The same day, she called Wolfe and asked him about distribution, but he hung up on her. (Id. at 26:12-20; Doe 7 Depo. Vol. II, 253:19-254:3.) She googled Bubblegum Casting, found an email address, and sent an email asking that the video be removed because she did not know it would be online. (Ex. 332.)

Everyone at her job found out about the video, which she knows "[b]ecause they make fun of me every single day I go to work." (Doe 7 Depo. Vol. I, 33:20 – 34:13.) She has been bullied by "too many people to count." (Id. at 137:11 – 13.) She continues to be harassed and bullied at work. (Doe 7 Depo. Vol. II, 213:14 – 24.)

The video has impacted her personal relationships. Her boyfriend at the time came home from work crying one night, saying "I found out something about your past, and it's disgusting." (Doe 7 Depo. Vol. I, 35:1-10.) She attributes their breakup to the video being published online: "He never really got over [the video], over the fact that people knew about that and that people were talking about it." (Id. at 36:6-37:4.)

 $^{^{45}}$ Jane Doe 7 cannot bear to search for her video online but has been told by friends that it is on many websites. (Vol. II, 257:24-258:2; 260:18-19.)

While Jane Doe 7 acknowledges that she has a history of anxiety, she testified that it has gotten "progressively worse throughout 2015 to 2018." (Id. at 59:9-18.) In the last three to four years, she has been "[a]fraid to leave my house; afraid that people are talking about me constantly; no one wanting to be with me, date me; afraid of not getting a job." (Id. at 61:23-62:7.)

In December 2017, she stopped going to college because her anxiety and depression, which she attributes to the video, made it too difficult. (Id. at 47:9-20.) Even leaving her house, driving, and going to work are very difficult. (Doe 7 Depo. Vol. II, 184:16-21.) She has always wanted to go to graduate school but can't imagine that happening now. (Doe 7 Depo. Vol. I, 124:4-11.)

Jane Doe 7 testified that she has tried to change her appearance as much as possible, including her hair, her teeth, her lips, and her tattoos, to avoid people recognizing her. (Id. at 67:19 - 68:12.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 7 to be credible.

Jane Doe 8

Jane Doe 8 was attending graduate school in San Diego when she found Defendants' ad on Craigslist looking for a job to supplement her student loans and the money she earned babysitting. (Deposition of Jane Doe 8, June 11, 2018 ["Doe 8 Depo."] at 22:19 – 23:6.) Despite receiving a scholarship, she needed more money to cover basic living expenses such as rent and food. (Id. 65:24 – 66:20.) In April 2016, Jane Doe 8 responded to the ad for modeling by email.

When Jonathan sent his stock email offering $4,500 for two adult shoots (Ex. 338), Jane Doe 8 did not respond because she had no interest in making an adult video. (Doe 8 Depo. 68:24 – 69:9.) Jonathan increased the offer twice, but she still did not respond. (Ex. 340.) By July 2016, Jane Doe 8's financial situation had become "desperate," so she finally responded. (Id. at 73:1 – 5; 105:6 – 9.) When she and Jonathan (whom she believed to be Garcia) spoke on the phone for 45 minutes to 1 hour, he explained "the videos would not be online in the United States, they would only be on DVDs overseas." (Id. at 74:25 – 76:22 ["He told me that they were putting together a [...] collection of videos that would take years to be put together, so by the time mine came out it would be years later."].) He said she would be "all done up so [she] wouldn't be recognizable" and that "the references would be able to confirm any worries and fears that [she] might have, that they

[PROPOSED] STATEMENT OF DECISION

114:12-15.) When Garcia presented her with the documents, saying "this is everything we talked about on the phone, . . . nothing to be worried about, it's just protocol," Jane Doe 8 "clarified that that meant nothing goes online." (Id. at 131:20-25.)

Even after carefully reading the Model/Talent Release at the deposition, Jane Doe 8 stated, "nothing in here is striking me as going against what they had said, you know, even when it says we can use it as we so please, or [...] saying we can use it however they feel fit I figured that meant what we had discussed, being the video -- or the DVDs overseas." (Id. at 115:15 – 21.) She explained, "had it said this video will appear online on their website then yes, but there is nothing like that that I'm seeing in this contract, per my understanding of it." (Id. at 116:16 – 20; 118:4 – 19 ["it's a very long run-on sentence, so I don't a hundred percent know what some of the words in it mean either," such as perpetuity, successors, licensees, and assignees].)

Reading the verbal script, Jane Doe 8 believed she was still operating under the same agreement that they had reassured her repeatedly about. (Id. at 135:8 – 136:5.) She asked Garcia if she should still read the portion about alcohol if she had been drinking, and they said yes. (Id. at 136:11 – 13.) During the interview, Garcia instructed her to "act excited, flirty, and fun"; she had to stop and reshoot several answers he did not like. (Id. at 138:17 – 18; 140:7 – 142:20.)

Jane Doe 8 returned for a second shoot as nothing occurred at the first shoot gave her concerns. (Id. at 159:3-15.) She brought alcohol and, as Defendants arrived two hours late, had six to seven drinks while waiting for them. (Id. at $160:11-161:24;^{47}$ 162:24-163:1 [estimating her intoxication level was "an eight out of ten"].) Again, Garcia offered her marijuana, and she declined. (Id. at 165:23-166:10.) Garcia represented that the documents were as the same as last time and rushed her to sign them. (Id. at 168:1-19.) The videographer (whom she identified as Gyi) asked her to "pretend to sign a document on camera." (Id. at 132:4-11.) In the video, her eyes are half open and she shows signs of inebriation.

When Defendants first released her video online, Jane Doe 8 "contemplated ending [her] life multiple times but then [she] thought that [she] couldn't even do that because the headlines would probably have something to do with the videos." (Id. at 206:18 – 25 [describing herself as "very depressed"].) The week after the video was released, she called and texted a suicide hotline; three years later, she still suffers from suicidal ideation. (Id. at 208:10 – 18.)

Jane Doe 8 has received limited harassment because as soon as she started receiving messages mentioning the video from high school and college acquaintances, she "immediately blocked 90 percent of [her] phone contacts and deactivated [her] social media." (Id. at 48:7 – 49:3; 50:3 – 12 [explaining why the harassment stopped quickly].)⁴⁸ Neither her parents nor her current employer know about the video, but she experiences severe anxiety that they will. (Id. at 230:10 – 13.)

In an effort to remove the video from two websites (GirlsDoPorn.com and "a Tinypost website"), Jane Doe 8 sent DMCA take-down requests and listed as the reason "[t]hat it was not supposed to be online, that it was against what I believed to be what was happening. . . . I believed that when I created the video it was never to be seen online, and that's not what happened." (Id. at 42:7 – 43:18.) The DMCA eventually replied that "the owners of the website wouldn't take the video down because [she] didn't have rights to it." (Id. at 43:19 – 25.)

In addition to depression that she experiences multiple times per week, Jane Doe 8 has isolated herself and stopped being social. (Id. at 229:3-19.) She describes how her emotional distress from the video has manifested:

I live in fear just because of this, I would say about every day of my family finding out, of my employer finding out, of [...] friends that don't know yet finding out in my social circle being even further diminished, I've lost friends that I've had for years, you know, every time my parents' phone rings and [...] they sound confused on the phone I think that it must be something related to this, or if they send me a text that I need to call them, that's where my thoughts go first, anytime my boss calls me into her office I think oh God, someone must have known, even at work sometimes if parents [in her therapy practice] are looking at me a little differently I think oh they must know.

(Id. at 207:1 - 15.)

⁴⁸ Garcia has attempted to connect with Jane Doe 8 on Instagram twice. (Ex. 360.)

Jane Doe 8 commented that she believed Defendants, in part, based on her "belief that no one would have a company that was [de]frauding people and if they did that they -- they would have been caught." (Id. at 208:4-9.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 8 to be credible.

Jane Doe 9

When Jane Doe 9 responded to Defendants' Craigslist ad in February 2014, she "was struggling financially and didn't feel like [she] had many options." (10/30/19 Trial Tr. 8:13 – 19 [father had just had a double lung transplant, so she did not want to ask her parents for help].) In response, Jane Doe 9 received an email from BubblegumCasting.com offering $2,500 to shoot a 25minute adult video. (Ex.371.) This early iteration of the stock email stated, "NO names or personal information is used in our videos or given out to any third parties period" and contained a link to BubblegumCasting.com "for references from previous models who have worked with us." (Id.) When she visited the website, she saw videos of models wearing Bubblegum Casting shirts "talking about how comfortable they were." (10/30/19 Trial Tr. 14:9-17.)

Jane Doe 9 responded asking "where this would go once it's finished, in terms of a site, and if other sites could borrow or use the film for their sites? I would really want it to be as confidential as possible." (Ex. 371) She testified at trial that she asked this question to ascertain whether it was going to be online, and stated that, if so, she would no longer be interested. (10/30/19 Trial Tr. 11:13-18.

Once on the phone with "Matt" (whom she identified as Pratt), she "told him that [she] was trying to become a teacher, so [she] needed it to be confidential." (Id. at 15:21-25.) Matt said it would be "discreet and professional" and the video "would be distributed on DVD overseas if I chose to take that option." (Id. at 15:28 – 16:6.) She told Matt, "that would be the only way that I would be comfortable doing it. And that I would never want my name to be attached to it.... He said that was completely understandable, most of the girls request the same thing, and that with it going overseas I have little to no risk of that ever happening." (Id. at 16:8-15; 17:16-19 [DVDs distributed specifically to Australia].) After a few follow-up calls for reassurance, Jane Doe 9 agreed to do the shoot.

At the airport en route to San Diego, Jane Doe 9 felt nervous and called Matt for reassurance. He offered to connect her with reference models, but she opted against it because she did not think it would be helpful. (Id. at 139:27 – 140:3 ["I don't feel like they were going to give me someone to call and they were going to have negative things to say about the experience."].) Ultimately, she agreed to film because she believed Matt was telling her the truth, that "Idlistribution was going to be overseas to Australia, and my name was never going to be attached to it. I was certain of that or else I would not have flown here." (Id. at 17:10 – 19.)

Pratt picked Jane Doe 9 up from the airport, and they drove to pick up Garcia and then continued on to a hotel. As she prepared for the shoot, Pratt set up; he "took a chair that he didn't want in the scene and pushed it against the door of the hotel room," (Id. at 20:6 – 10 [noting she felt somewhat trapped].)⁴⁹

Once she had finished her hair and makeup, Matt hurried her to sign the model release agreement, explaining there was no need to read the document because "it was just giving them permission to film me, and that it was just a summary of the things we had talked about." (Id. at 24:18 – 25:16.) When she skimmed the document, it was "very dense," but she did not see anything that caused her concern, so, trusting Matt, she signed it. (Id. at 26:8 – 27:21 ["I had no reason to believe that five minutes before I'm going to do this that the game would be changed on me."].) When she asked what to write for her "stage name," Matt said she should just write her real name "because it was not going to be necessary to have a stage name. [The video] wasn't going to be released so there was no reason for [her] to create one." (Id. at 28:3-8.)

Next, Matt handed her the script, asked her to read it into the camera, quickly explaining that she was just giving them permission to film her, and pressed "play." (Id. at 28:12 – 29:9) [noting she had no time to process the meaning of what she read].) As soon as she finished the script, Matt coached her through the interview, then they began filming. (Id. at 29:19-30:22.)

After the shoot, Matt took Jane Doe 9 back to his apartment for the solo shoot. Once there, she was asked to repeat the same process of signing documents and reading the script, which she did. (Id. at 31:21 – 33:3 [noting that nothing had happened to cause her concern].)

Jane Doe 9 then returned home to Texas, and approximately one month later, learned the video was online when a high school acquaintance sent her a link to the video. (Id. at 33:4 – 22.) She immediately felt "[h]umiliated. Betrayed. Deceived. Like [her] life was being ruined in that moment." (Id. at 34:6 – 9.) She clicked on the link and saw, not only was her video online, but her name was already associated with it. (Id. at 34:11 – 14.) She immediately called the phone number she had for Matt, but it went straight to voicemail. She continued calling until her number was blocked. (Id. at 34:15 – 25.) Jane Doe 9 then went to the Bubblegum Casting website looking for contact information but found none. (Id. at 35: 1– 4.)

She endured severe harassment in the months that followed: people called her and left messages or contacted her on social media calling her offensive names. (Id. at 35:26-36:2.) Someone sent a link to her video to people in her hometown (a small town in Washington), and her parents soon found out about it. (Id. at 36:3-15.)

When Jane Doe 9 found a post on PornWikiLeaks containing her picture and quotes about her teaching philosophy from her professional LinkedIn page, she felt "humiliated" and "exploited." (Id. at 36:17 – 23; 37:18 – 27; Ex. 382.2.) She also found posts on multiple websites identifying her by name. (Exs. 386.1; 387.1.)

Shortly thereafter, Jane Doe 9 was dismissed from her teaching job because the faculty and students at her school had found an article about her on TheDirty.com. (Id. at 39:20 – 28, 40:9 – 22.) When the principal at the school where she worked sent her a copy of the article, which contained her picture and name, the name of her school, and a caption stating she had "no business working with school children unless she wants to teach them about the fine art of having sex on camera," she felt "like the problem was only worsening instead of resolving." (Ex. 392; Doe 9 Depo. 41:12 – 42:1.) Upon learning this article was the first search result on Google, she "immediately panicked" and knew that she would have to seek legal counsel to resolve this growing problem. (Id. at 42:19 – 43:12.)

Jane Doe 9 also learned that the principals and human resources personnel at her school received anonymous emails about the video, saying she should not be working with students. (Id. at 43:15 – 19; see, e.g., Ex. 393.) Jane Doe 9 also received threatening emails through her publicly accessible school email about the video, signaling "that they knew what was going on with the school district." (Doe 9 Depo. 44:16 – 28.) Her text messages with the principal at the school show her distressed and desperate state of mind. (Exs. 388; 390.)

In the aftermath of losing her job, Jane Doe 9 she began experiencing anxiety and panic attacks so severe that she had to be hospitalized for "anxiety and panic disorder" and prescribed Lorazepam. (Doe 9 Depo. 49: 1-20.)⁵⁰ She hired an attorney who was able to negotiate a resolution in which she would receive pay through the end of her contract. (Id. at 49:23 - 50:7.)

Jane Doe 9 moved to a new city because of the video and found another job in her chosen field in the new city the following year. (Id. at 50:10 - 51:8.) The faculty and staff at her new school have not yet learned about the video but she is "fearful every day" that they will, (Id. at 51:11 – 52:7 ["I'm afraid of losing my job every day. I'm fearful that, you know, if I get called down to the office and I don't know what for, I am fearful that the exact same thing is going to happen to me all over again."].)

Immediately after finding the video on GirlsDoPorn, Jane Doe 9 quickly sought ways to remove the video, using the Google Removal Tool with no luck. (Id. at 35:10-23.) She also sought "help from reputation websites, where they delete or suppress your information through a Google tool," but none of these efforts have yielded much success. (Id. at 52:8-27.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 9 to be credible.

Jane Doe 10

In July 2015, Jane Doe 10, a San Diego resident at that time, met Defendants through her friend Kaitlyn McLain who, having shot two videos, told her "[t]hat no one would ever see it. No one has seen hers. She had done one a month or two previous to the [second] one [...] and that it was easy money. It was fast. And no one would ever see it." (10/7/19 Trial Tr. 113:12-24.)

Based on those assurances and trusting her friend, Jane Doe 10 agreed to talk to "Jonathan." (Id.) After exchanging a few texts, Jonathan called her to explain that she could shoot one video for $5,000 and that the video would go on DVD to Australia. (Id. at 125:21-27.) She asked whether anyone would ever see the video in the United States, and Jonathan replied, "No, that it was going to be on a DVD that couldn't be replicated. It was for a buyer living in Australia, a single guy." (Id. at 126:3-10.)

She was willing to send Jonathan nude pictures because he told her that he "needed to show the buyer pictures of me to . . . see if the guy was interested." (127:2 – 12 [she trusted Jonathan because her "good friend had already done two shoots, and she had had no problems, and I trust her."].) Jane Doe 10 testified that if McLain had told her video was published on the internet, she would not have even spoken to Jonathan; but, based on McLain's and Jonathan's assurances, she agreed to do the shoot. (Id. at 128:9 – 12.) Once the buyer had approved her pictures, they set up a shoot. (Exs. 412, 415, 416.)⁵¹

Jane Doe 10 had previously done exotic dancing and "camming," which she described as "a face-to-face interaction with another person [via] a live feed, and someone chooses to talk to you, and basically you choose whether or not you're clothed. You have control over the whole thing." (10/7/19 Trial Tr. 128:26 – 129:9.) Importantly, she testified that she had never interacted with someone in the United States on the cam site; "[y]ou can block certain IP addresses with the company that I worked with. So I blocked United States and England as well." (Id. at 129:10 – 16; 130:10 – 11 [she did camming for about one month].) Jane Doe 10 worked as an exotic dancer several years prior to shooting the video. She testified that, to her knowledge, no one in her life was aware that she had stripped or done camming. (Id. at 130:12 – 131:26 [first time she disclosed either fact to anyone was in deposition].)

⁵¹ One of Jonathan's emails stated $4,000 instead of $5,000, so Jane Doe 10 clarified with him and confirmed that she would receive $5,000. He assured her that she would. (139:8-17 [discussing Ex. 412].)

On the day of the shoot, Jane Doe 10 met Defendants at a hotel downtown. (Id. at 141:9 – 16.) She met the male talent who was introduced to her as Dre (Garcia), and Riva did her makeup while Wolfe set up the camera equipment and lights. She asked numerous times to make sure the video would not be available in the United States and "the three people that were there told me and confirmed with me that no one would ever see it. It was going to Australia." (Id. at 126:14 – 21 [not yet realizing that Garcia and Jonathan were the same person, she believed she confirmed what McLain told her with four different people].) All three reassured her.

Jane Doe 10 was nervous, so while Riva was doing her makeup, Riva comforted her saying, "Oh, don't worry honey. He's going to love it. You're going to do great," which Jane Doe 10 took to be a reference to the private collector in Australia. (Id. at 154:3 – 13.) She also expressed to Wolfe her concern about someone she knows seeing the video, but he reassured her that would not happen (Id. at 154:16 – 4 [she trusted Wolfe more because "his accent seemed to tie that the video was going to Australia."].) Garcia offered her marijuana; she does not recall whether she accepted. (Id. at 155:8 – 18.)

Despite promising to pay $5,000, on the day of the shoot, after sending pictures to "the private buyer," Defendants said he would only pay $2,500 because she "looked old" and had bruises on her body. (Id. at 157:1-17.)

When Defendants gave her documents to sign, Wolfe and Garcia told her "it was just a contract between me and the buyer, just confidentiality stuff." (Id. at 159:16 – 25.) Defendants filmed and interviewed Jane Doe 10 while she filled out the documents. Defendants instructed her to "talk to the private collector," lie about her age, and disclose information about her sexual history, which she found distracting. (Id. at 158:4 – 21 [noting she would not have answered the questions if she had known the video would be online].) After signing, Jane Doe 10 was instructed to read a script into the camera; she was told "it was just the same thing I had signed, just reading aloud." (Id. at 160:11 – 25.)

Thereafter, the sexual portion of the shoot commenced. She asked to leave several times because the shoot had dragged on for many hours. She asked to leave so that she could get some food with a plan to leave and not return. (Id. at 183:6-9.) Although no one overtly tried to intimidate her, they would not let her leave. (Id. at 181:27-182:15.)

After the shoot, Jane Doe 10 learned that Garcia and Jonathan are the same person when she received a text from Jonathan's number that was obviously written by Garcia. (Id. at 137:23 – 138:7; Ex. 414.1, 414.5.)

Jane Doe 10 learned her video was online when Jane Doe 1 contacted her as part of her investigation of this case. (10/7/19 Trial Tr. 163:9 - 13.) She "was kind of in a state of panic" and when she began searching the internet, she went on Facebook and found her video posted on her mother's page. (Id. at 163:15 - 22 [she quickly flagged it and had the video removed].) To her knowledge, her father is not aware of the video, though she worries he will find out. She is not sure whether her mother knows but she cannot bring herself to talk to her about it, especially because her mother is "very religious." (Id. at 163:20 - 164:11.)

Jane Doe 10's name, Facebook account, and a picture of her with her mother were all posted on PornWikiLeaks. (Ex. 431.) Links to her video spread across her social media, and she received many messages that she found harassing. (E.g., Exs. 445 [message from a stranger using her name to create a sexual pun; shows attempt to call her]; Ex. 446, Ex. 448.) Someone used a screenshot from Jane Doe 10's video to make an inappropriate meme, which Jane Doe 10 saw spread around numerous websites. (Ex. 442.1; 10/7/19 Trial Tr. 176:1 – 12.) She testified that being "contacted by strangers constantly" and being the target of inappropriate comments impacts her emotional state. (10/7/19 Trial Tr. 177:18 – 23.)

Shortly after she arrived at the hotel, Jane Doe 10 noticed that she had begun menstruating, so she asked to reschedule the shoot. Garcia said there was no need, that they had dealt with this before and would just use a sponge. When she resisted, Garcia said they had already spent the money on the shoot and would lose money if they cancelled now. (Id. at 141:25-142:16.) Describing the shoot, she recalled, "several times in the middle of the shoot that while we were having sex, blood would start coming out. And they would have to stop like mid-shoot, like mid-filming to clean up." (Id. at 143:14-21.) She also testified that she recently watched the video footage produced by Defendants and saw no scenes where blood is visible that she believes they filmed. (Id. at 143:24-144:3.)

The video's release online has impacted her romantic relationships. Jane Doe 10 testified that two boyfriends had "talked down to [her]" or "[held] it over [her] head." (Id. at 180:17 – 181:2.) One previous boyfriend "wied to get [her] to sleep with him by threatening to release [her] video to more people if [she] didn't sleep with him." (Id. at 181:3 – 8.)

Jane Doe 10 is still being harassed today. She now works as a manager overseeing several employees. She was recently contacted by a previous employee who sent her a screenshot of the video and commented on it. (Id. at 195:12-20.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 10 to be credible.

Jane Doe 11

In March 2016, Jane Doe 11 was finishing her last year of college in Tennessee when she responded by email to a Craigslist ad for modeling, hoping to earn spending money. (9/10/19 Trial Tr. 117:3 – 14.) She received a response from Mike@ModelingWork.com, offering $5,000 for a shoot lasting 30 minutes of "regular sex" and promised "nothing weird, kinky [sic] or strange happening." (Ex. 453.) The email advertised, "We have several channels of distribution depending on the level of anonymity you wish to attain." (Ex. 453.1.) Jane Doe 11 noted that the email said, "None of your personal information is released or included in any part of the video or after to keep your identity as private as possible." (Ex. 453.2.) While she was "[d]efinitely not" interested in a career in pornography, based on the promise of anonymity, Jane Doe 11 was interested in learning more. (9/10/19 Trial Tr. 120:6 – 121:4.)

Jane Doe 11 next spoke on the phone with "Mike," a man with an Australian accent whom she later identified as Pratt. (Id. at 121:13 – 25.) In addition to explaining the logistics, Pratt told her "it would be not online. It would be distributed DVD in Australia. And that there were reference models that I could speak to, that he could provide me with." (Id. at 123:13 – 17.) She asked questions to ensure she would remain anonymous and the video would not be online anywhere; Pratt assured her of both. (Id. at 123:18 – 25.) He called and texted nearly every day until she agreed to do the shoot. (Id. at 122:21 – 23.)

Pratt requested that she send nude pictures, and as he assured her he would keep them confidential, she obliged. (Id. at 124:11 – 18.) Still unsure, Jane Doe 11 obtained the names and contact information for two reference women, who she contacted via text to ask about their experiences shooting with Pratt. (Id. at 125:2 - 126:3.) The first reference told Jane Doe 11:

[S]he's done it before, I had nothing to worry about, it wouldn't be online. They treat you so well, they treat you like a princess. If you want a Starbucks, you can get a Starbucks. She said it's never - she's not had any issues. No one she knows has ever found out. [...] She just kept on telling me it's only a DVD in Australia. She has not had any issues. She then went on to even give me her Instagram. I looked her up. She seemed like a normal girl, nothing unusual to me.

(Id. at 128:17 – 129:4.) The second reference again confirmed that the video would not go online, that she had not had any issues; she offered to Facetime and talk, but Jane Doe 11 declined because she did not want the reference to see her face. (Id. at 129:15 – 24.) She testified that texting with the reference woman and getting to see her social media was impactful because she was "just looking normal and like she is still continuing to live her life after doing a video." (Id. at 130:3 – 9.) Based on these assurances, she flew to San Diego to shoot a video.

Upon arriving in San Diego, Jane Doe 11 was picked up from the airport by Pratt and "Teddy" Gyi, the videographer. Pratt and Teddy both reassured her that it would not go online, she had nothing to worry about, and it would be quick and easy. (Id. at 131:1 – 132:12.) In the hotel room, Teddy offered Jane Doe 11 alcohol, which she declined. (Id. at 132:24 – 133:2.)

While Riva did her hair and makeup, Garcia (not the model she chose) arrived. He drank all of the alcohol in the minibar, took some pills, which he told her were Viagra and Molly and smoked marijuana. (Id. at 133:19.) Riva reassured Jane Doe 11 that she had done makeup for many girls who all had good experiences and that she did not need to worry. (Id. at 134:24 – 135:5.) Garcia also confirmed the video would not be online. (Id. at 135:20 – 23.)

When Garcia handed her documents to sign, he emphasized they were in a hurry because her makeup took so long, then flipped through the pages quickly, pointing out different parts, saying "This is where it says not online. . . . Here's were not forcing you to do this. Your free will. Everything that I have told you is just in this document." (Id. at 136:7 – 16.) By this time, Jane Doe 11 estimated that she had been reassured about the scope of distribution more than thirty times.

(Id. at 137:7-9.) She trusted what he told her about the documents and because he was "berating" her to hurry, she signed them quickly without reading. (Id. at 137:10-138:1.)

Defendants paid Jane Doe 11 $5,000 and handed her a piece of paper to read to the camera, explaining, "Again, this is just to show we don't have a gun pointed at your head that we're forcing you to have sex on camera." (Id. at 138:6 – 19.) Trusting them, she did as they asked. For the interview, they instructed her to act flirty and happy and asked sexual questions. Because she believed that no one she knew would see it, she answered them. (Id. at 139:1 – 12.)

On May 1, 2016, in the middle of final exams, Jane Doe 11 learned her video was online when a friend texted her a screen shot of the video. (Id. at 173:9 – 174:2.) Panicking, she quickly tried to justify what she had done, explaining to her friend, "They said it would only be in Australia" and "I only did it for money." (Ex. 471.6 – 471.7.) She was so distraught that her friends were concerned that she may attempt to harm herself, so they stayed with her through the night and took her to the school counseling service the next day. (9/10/19 Trial Tr. at 175:3 – 18 [recalls feeling and expressing that she "didn't want to be alive"]; 178:4 – 25.)

The video spread like wildfire. In fact, Jane Doe 11 learned from the student council president that "everyone was watching it in the library, so much so that the Internet essentially crashed and the school had to shut it down." (Id. at 179:10 – 16.) The student council president also informed her that "the administration actually had to watch the video. They all congregated in a room to watch it to I guess make sure I didn't say the university name in the video." (Id. at 180:10 – 13.)

The following morning, Jane Doe 11 took action to get the video removed from the internet. She started by sending Pratt an email stating, "This is not spam but a life or death situation. Please contact me[....] Please. I beg of you[.]" (Ex. 473.) When he did not respond, she sent another email that evening:

Please. I beg of you. I need the video down. My whole school found it, and the quicker it's down the easier it will be and my parents will be less likely to pursue legal action to get it taken down. This may even be in the media and be completely terrible for me. My future is already ruined and I see no reason to live. Please help me. Help me

(Ex. 474.) When she still received no response, Jane Doe 11 contacted an attorney who sent a detailed demand letter to Pratt two days later. (Ex. 476.)

Ultimately, the Defendants offered to take the video down for $15,000, but she decided not to accept the offer because the video had spread to so many other websites that paying to remove it from only one would not accomplish much. (9/11/19 Trial Tr. 8:1-11.) Further, she did not trust Defendants to adhere to the agreement. (Id. at 8:12-20.) After declining, Jane Doe 11 tried hiring another service to help her remove online content, which only worked for a day before everything she paid to remove had returned. (Id. at 9:21-10:4.)

Jane Doe 11 testified that she was devastated to see her video on many websites, including most notably, Pornhub.com, which described her in derogatory, vulgar language and displayed that the video had more than 9 million views. (Exs. 496; 1576.2.) Soon, she learned that her name and personal information had been connected to her video and posted on numerous forums, along with links to her Facebook profile. (E.g., Exs. 489; 480.) These anonymous users also posted her brother's, sister's, and church's Facebook profiles, saying "Let's all harass them. Let's send it to her family, send it to her pastor. Let's ruin her life. She should kill herself. What a slut." Such comments made her question her desire to live. (9/11/19 Trial Tr. 20:13 – 21:12 [describing the basis for her belief that someone did send the video to her pastor].)

When she returned to school for summer classes, another student sent her nude pictures of himself and attempted to break into her dorm room, which frightened her enough to call campus police. (Id. at 25:16 – 25.) After deactivating her social media for a stretch of time in order to avoid harassment, she eventually reactivated her accounts. Even using the most stringent privacy settings, she still received what she estimates to be one hundred harassing messages. (E.g., Ex. 482.)⁵³

The release of the video also impacted Jane Doe 11's personal relationships. Although her family has been very supportive, her boyfriend at the time was not. Shortly after the video was released, she drove to meet him at his apartment. When she arrived, he was sitting on his couch with a glass of water and a 9-millimeter handgun. (9/11/19 Trial Tr. 27:15-21.) When she walked into the room, he became hysterical, pointed the gun at her and then at himself, threatening to kill himself and saying it would be her fault. (Id. at 27:23-28:7.)

Jane Doe 11 testified that the video being released online has had a huge impact on her emotionally: "...I'm sitting here four years later, and it still kills me inside. I have gone through major depression. I wanted to kill myself. I have isolated myself. I was afraid to show my face anywhere. It's consumed my brain." (Id. at 29:19 – 24.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 11 to be credible.

In January 2015, when Jane Doe 12 had just turned 20 years old, was a college student, and living in Florida, she found an advertisement on Craigslist for modeling, which lead her to Defendants. (8/22/19 Trial Tr. 14:24 – 15:5.) The advertisement did not mention pornography. (Id.) She was on Craigslist looking for jobs because she needed money for school and living expenses; she was struggling a lot financially, and her family could not help her. (Id. at 14:17 – 23, 15:6 – 8, 101:9 – 14.) She had approximately $50 in her bank account. (Id. 15:9 – 13.)

After responding to the Craigslist advertisement, Jane Doe 12 received a canned email reply from Jonathan, who she identified at trial as defendant Garcia. (Id. 14:12 – 16; Trial Ex. 5301.) The email stated to her that Defendants were "an established Southern California company," stated "[n]one of [her] personal information [would] be given out in the video or afterwards," and offered her $6,000 total ($5,000 for a male/female adult video and $1,000 for a solo video). (Trial Tr. 17:18 – 18:22; Trial Ex. 504.) The email stated Defendants had shot over 200 models, and that Jane Doe 12 could speak with any of them. (Id.)

Jane Doe 12 had some reservations, and wanted to know more about the job, including where it would go, and who would see it. (Id. 20:20-21:3.) She emailed defendant Garcia for more details and said she wished to speak with Defendants' prior models. (Id. 21:4-6.) Garcia emailed back that he would explain it all on the phone, and would put Jane Doe 12 in contact with prior models. (Id. 21:20-25.) He also sent her photos of what he said were prior models, with money and looking happy. (Id. 27:7-16; Trial Ex. 510.)

When Jane Doe 12 and Garcia spoke over the phone, he told her that the video was going to be a DVD in Australia, and not sold in the United States. (Id. 28:8 – 15.) Garcia also referred her to Taylor Rogers, who told Jane Doe 12 the video went on DVD, she had shot with Defendants, and nobody will ever find out. (Id. 24:4 – 15.) Garcia's and Rodgers' statements significantly influenced her decision to do the video shoots. (Id. 24:16 – 21, 29:8 – 11 [Rodgers "made me feel like they were telling me -- what they were telling me was true, kind of put my doubts at ease, made me feel comfortable with the entire situation.")

Jane Doe 12 eventually flew to San Diego and Garcia and Wolfe picked her up at the airport. (Id. 32:16 – 33:12.) Garcia and Wolfe both repeated the representations that her video would be a DVD in Australia. (Id. 33:13 – 23.)

At the first video shoot, the "solo scene," Wolfe spoke with Jane Doe 12 about the documents. "He just kind of said that this was -- these were just kind of a formality. They are everything we had discussed before about my pay and that it was going to be a DVD and just kind of not super important." (Id. 37:9 – 19.) While she tried, she did not read the documents. "He kind of distracted me, asking me like kind of small talk and random questions. He was kind of rushing me a little bit because he kept on saying they were behind. And it was late at night." (Id. 37:21 – 38:4.)

Wolfe also handed her the verbal script, told her to read it into the camera, not telling her what it was for – and Jane Doe 12 did not think it was a contract. (Id. 38:10 – 17.) Jane Doe 12 then filmed the "solo video" for Wolfe. (Id. 38:23 – 24.)

At the second video shoot, Defendant did not pay Jane Doe 12 the $5,000 as promised—
"They would only be able to pay me 4,000 for the video because I had cellulite on my legs." (*Id.*39:15 – 40:11.) She also did not read the documents, testifying, "Because they did the same thing they did the first time. Isaac and Jonathan asked me questions during it, kind of small talk. Kind of distracted me. Again kind of rushing me because I was supposed to get a flight later that day. (*Id.*40:12 – 19.) Garcia and Wolfe represented the documents "were the same documents as before, just going over pay and everything that we had discussed about what the DVD would be." (Id. 41:6 – 10.) Again, Defendants handed her the verbal script, told her to read it into the camera, not telling her what it was for – and Jane Doe 12 did not think it was a contract. (Id. 41:13 – 21.) Jane Doe 12 then filmed the video with Garcia as the actor. (Id. 42:21 – 43:2.) Garcia also said the videos would not be on the internet. (Id. 32:2 – 9, 40:20 – 41:2.)

Later, Jane Doe 12 learned her video was published online, which surprised her. "I started freaking out. I wondered how this guy that I knew had seen this video or had found this video. I just kind of panicked at that point and just kind of freaked out. All the blood drained from my face." (Id. at 46:8 – 13.) Jane Doe 12 found her video on approximately 20 free pornography sites, including www.Pornhub.com, which also referenced her real name. (Id. at 47:1 – 48:25.) This made her feel "really helpless" and she wanted "to go to a deserted island where no one could find [her]." (Id. at 49:12 – 17.)

While she tried to flag the videos to get them offline, she did not contact Defendants, because "they had a lot of [her] personal information, so [she] was a little afraid of what they could possibly do with that." (Id. at 48:19-24.)

Once Jane Doe 12's video was published, a "fan page" on a website, Tumblr was created. (Id. at 51:24 - 52:5.) The last time she checked www.Pornhub.com, the website reflected her video had around 30 million views, which made her afraid to go outside, feeling everyone had seen her in "a very private manner that [she] never wanted people...to see." (Id. at 62:14 - 63:3.) Jane Doe 12 also saw information about herself, such as her name and links to her social media, on the website www.pornwikileaks.com, which upset her. (Id. at 63:4 - 64:1.)

As to why she believed Garcia and Wolfe, she testified "Because they had told me over and over again that it was going to be a DVD. They told me that I could talk to any references. I believed Taylor and what she said to me because I didn't think another girl would lie to another girl about something like that. And they constantly assured me." (Id. 64:6 – 14.)

She "would have liked to have known what GirlsDoPorn was...would have liked to have known what their true intention and where [her] video was going." (Id. 93:18 – 93:5.) She wished she would have known "where they would be posting it. And [she] would have liked to have known that [her] anonymity was not guaranteed. There are people out there that sole purpose is to find out the names of people in porn videos." (Id.)

Jane Doe 12 was also harassed on social media, text messages and phone calls, receiving messages and friend requests from hundreds of strangers (which continues to this day), with relation to her video with Defendants. (Id. 64:25 – 65:20; 67:16 – 68:8; 72:22 – 25; 80:14 – 25; Ex. 537, 538.) Harassment included statements to her, "Very ugly," "Any GDP still," and "Are you the Girl from GirlsDoPorn?" (Id. 69:12 – 17, 74:2 – 5.) As to distress from this, she said, "Just again it makes me kind of want to disappear and kind of change my name and move to a different country. Just makes me not want to be around people and just kind of a reminder of how betrayed I felt." (Id. 68:10 – 15.) She "felt [her] privacy was invaded and just completely kind of thrown out the window on something that [she] never thought would be all over the Internet for everyone to see and people [she] know to see." (Id. 74:19 – 23.) She even received messages for sexual propositions. (Id. 75:3 – 8.) She was afraid to go outside, and afraid of new people. (Id. 77:4 – 10.)

Strangers also messaged Jane Doe 12's mother online, which terrified Jane Doe 12. (Id. 83:14 – 19; Ex. 593.) Strangers also messaged Jane Doe 12's boyfriends. (Id. 86:24 – 87:2; Ex. 577.)

Jane Doe 12 stopped going to school, has cried hundreds of times, and moved to a town where she did not know anyone. (Id. 87:8 – 88:11.) Her family relationships were damaged, as were her hometown and college relationships. (Id. 89:4 – 23; 90:11 – 22.) She lost weight, lost sleep, and had nightmares about the video. (Id. 90:23 – 91:16.) She is concerned about her career and future relationships with significant others, has already lost some due to the video, and she is concerned the video will impact her ability to have a family of her own someday. (Id. 91:17 – 92:17, 93:18 – 94:6.)

As to her emotional state, she testified:

- A. [...] I kind of became very depressed. I had suicidal thoughts at points of just either swerving out on the road into a tree or a ditch or something. Even at one point Googled, like, what over-the-counter medications that I could take and what were the effects, and I tried to overdose.
- Q. Why were you thinking about killing yourself?
- A. Because my name and everything -- my life got flipped, turned upside down, and my name had been completely dragged through the mud, and I didn't feel like I could recover from anything like that. I didn't know how to recover because everybody in my life that's been important to me has changed their opinion about me pretty much and how they feel about me.

(Id. 89:12 - 90:5.)

Jane Doe 13

In September 2015, Jane Doe 13 was 20 years old entering her final year of college in Florida when she began looking for jobs on Craigslist to help pay for college after her family business fell apart. (9/09/19 Trial Tr. 27:9 – 28:4). In her initial email to Defendants, she wrote, "...my only request is full discretion" because she wanted to have control over where her face or name would be published and how it would be published in an attempt to protect herself. (Id. at 29:15 – 23; Ex. 607.) She received Jonathan's stock email offering $6,000 for two shoots and guaranteeing her name and personal information would not be used. (Ex. 612). She ignored the email, as well as Jonathan's two follow-up emails, because she was not interested in on-screen nudity in an adult video. (Id. at 30:17 – 25; Exs. 617; 618.)

Having applied to a separate Craigslist ad, Jane Doe 13 later received an email from "Mark" at ModelingGigs.com, to which she responded about one month later when "time was…running out a little" and her need for money grew. (9/09/19 Trial Tr. 36:19 – 37:2; Ex. 619 [again emphasizing, "I would like to make sure discretion is the main priority."].) She spoke with Mark on the phone, who spoke with an accent "not fully Australian or fully American" and represented that the video would be published on DVDs exclusively in Australia and that it would never be published anywhere else (Id. at 38:12 – 18, 39:1 – 6.) Jane Doe 13 was not comfortable with flying across the country but said she would reconsider if they were to film in Florida or New York. (Id. at 39:7 – 21).

Jane Doe 13 eventually came into contact with Jonathan, who she later realized had a connection with Mark. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 40:18 – 41:4). In the process of deciding whether to do the shoot, Jane Doe 13 had frequent communication with Jonathan, including a FaceTime call in which she saw that Jonathan was in fact a "real person" and another model prepping for her shoot.

She testified that they made it seem fun and relaxed, and that there was nothing to worry about. (Id. at 42:16-43:1). Prior to the shoot, Jane Doe 13 received text messages from references Cat Wilkens (Id. at 43:4-19; Ex. 627) and Kailyn Wright (Ex. 628). She testified that Ms. Wright's text messages made her feel like she was her friend and that the shoot was both professional and that there was nothing to worry about. (Id. at 44:6-14). Jane Doe 13 ultimately agreed to film a video, which was filmed in New York City at the Grand Hyatt Hotel. (Id. at 41:19-25).

Jane Doe 13 met with videographer Gyi and Garcia at the hotel; both made her feel comfortable. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 46:2-15). However, Garcia became angry at Jane Doe 13 upon realizing she had shown up to the shoot in full makeup, saying that she was wasting their time because they would have to redo her makeup. (Id. at 47:5-12). After her makeup was redone, Jane Doe 13 started to have a gut feeling that something was wrong. (Id. at 47:16-22).

Shortly thereafter, Jane Doe 13 went to the bathroom and got her period. Thinking this was her way out, she walked out of the bathroom and told Garcia she got her period unexpectedly and that she could reschedule. (Id. at 47:25-48:10). Again, Garcia became angry and hostile, complaining that they flew out to New York for this shoot. Garcia then pulled Jane Doe 13 into the bathroom and, without her consent, inserted a sponge into her vagina to block the menstrual bleeding and said, "That's it. We're good to go." It was at this point that Jane Doe 13 didn't think she had the option to leave. (Id. at 48:11-19).

Defendants then asked Jane Doe 13 to undress so they could take nude photos of her to send to the boss per their "protocol." She ultimately found out that she was not adequate enough looking for the boss and that she would not be paid the amount she was promised because she had cellulite and breast reduction scars. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 48:20 - 49:11). She was promised $5,000 but was paid $3,500. (Id. at 49:12 - 16).

After being paid, the Defendants presented Jane Doe 13 with documents that she was rushed to sign. (Id. at 49:17 – 21). Defendants made it seem like the documents were all for production, and that it was just something needed to get the shoot going. (Id. at 49:21 – 24). Jane Doe 13 tried to skim the documents and, in doing so, read the names "BLL Media" and "Clockwork Productions." She asked Garcia what these two companies were, to which he responded, "that's just the production company." (Id. at 50:1-11). Jane Doe 13 did a Google search for "BLL Media" and found a generic modeling site with nothing that stood out to her—no pornographic videos. (Id. at 50:12-23). Once Garcia saw that she was Googling something, he rushed her further, saying, "this is just the basic agreements, everything we spoke about" and reinforced the prior representations of the video never going online and that it would be on DVD in Australia. (Id. at 50:24-51:19). Garcia was holding the documents, flipping through them and telling her where to sign and initial. (Id. at 52:4-19).

After signing the documents, Gyi handed her the script and told her "just read this. It's for the camera." Upon reviewing and reading the document, Jane Doe 13 questioned the portion of the paper that said she was giving her rights to them. Teddy told her that this would be just for the camera, just for the production. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 53:4 - 54:7). She didn't think much of it at the time because Garcia and Gyi continued to appease any doubts she had during the shoot. (Id. at 54:8 - 11). Jane Doe 13 read the script with those assurances in mind and then filmed an interview she was coached through before filming the sexual portion of the video. (Id. at 54:12 - 56:7).

Despite her horrible experience at the shoot, Jane Doe 13 left the hotel thinking that the distribution terms she agreed to with Defendants were still intact, not believing that they would exploit her. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 57:2-15)

On or around January 10, 2016, Jane Doe 13 found out her video was on the internet. One of her best friends initially confronted her, and she fell into such shock that she had to be carried into her apartment. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 59:7 – 15). At the time she found out, she was in front of her school's entire fraternity and sorority community. (Id. at 59:16 – 21). In her apartment, her friends had to stay and watch her because she was repeatedly saying "I'm going to kill myself." (Id. at 60:2 – 6). Jane Doe 13 testified that, after the video was published online, everyone at her school and in her hometown knew—everyone was talking about it and messaging her about it. (Id. at 62:1 – 5). Eventually, Jane Doe 13 felt like she owed her sorority an explanation and went before 150 girls in a room, broke down, and told her story. (Id. at 63:3 – 23).

After her video went public, Jane Doe 13 had to remove herself from all social media because she was getting an influx of harassment and messages to such an extent that she could not handle it anymore. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 66:21 - 67:1). She did not attend the first week of classes after the video was released because she was still coming to terms with its release. She was scared and embarrassed, feeling like she could not go anywhere without ridicule. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 67:21 - 68:8).

Defendants' release of the video had far-reaching effects. Jane Doe 13 received a large amount of harassing messages from strangers on social media. (Exs. 659, 661, 665) She testified that messages such as these were like a stab to the heart that brings her back to the initial trauma of the video shoot with Defendants. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 71:22 – 72:8). Jane Doe 13 testified to seeing her real name and corresponding GDP episode number on PornWikiLeaks.com, which made her feel livid and exposed to a massive invasion of privacy on a public forum where users were determined to rip her and others apart. (Id. at 91:5 – 92:6); Ex. 663). As a direct result of the video, Jane Doe 13 was kicked out of her sorority and off her cheerleading team. (Id. at 94:2 – 5).

The day after she found out her video was online, Jane Doe 13 reached out to GirlsDoPorn, begging for the video's removal. (Ex. 646 [stressing that she was "on the verge of committing suicide because of this awful person who thought it was okay to lie to and exploit a young girl like this."].) No one at the company responded to her email. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 69:6 – 7). She even tried to contact all the phone numbers for the people involved with her shoot, including Jonathan, Garcia, and Gyi. No one answered except for Gyi, who only responded to her pleas for help by saying that he was not at liberty to disclose any information. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 69:15 – 70:7).

Jane Doe 13 took further action to remove her video from the internet without any assistance whatsoever from Defendants. She testified that, when she found a link to her video, she would send it to the "DMCA Defender," whom she contacted to help her take it down from wherever it appeared online. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 75:3 – 8; 76:3 – 22.; Ex. 678.)

She fears losing respect in her industry and being treated differently or even being fired because of the video. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 86:16 - 87:1). She testified that the video release is akin to having a nightmare every night where if she gets a call or text, she thinks it has to do with someone else finding out about the video. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 87:2 - 5). The video has impacted her dating life, even seeing her boyfriend get harassed by people approaching him to disparage Jane Doe 13. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 88:9-17).

Due to the video's release, Jane Doe 13 sought professional help by seeing a psychiatrist. She was having trouble getting out of bed, focusing, and sleeping. She was prescribed Vyvanse. (Trial Tr. 09/09/19 at 84:17 – 11).

The Court finds Jane Doe 13 to be credible.

Jane Doe 14 was 18-years old and living in Calgary when she saw a Craigslist ad for modeling in California that directed her to "BeginModeling.com." (10/15/19 Trial Tr. 16:21 - 17:12.) After submitting the application in July 2014, she received the stock email from Jonathan. (Id. at 17:23 - 25; Ex.684.4 ["None of your personal information will be given out in the video or afterwards, no names etc are used in the video."].) Jane Doe 14 spoke on the phone with Jonathan more than once. (Id. at 19:14 - 20:23.) While on the phone, Jonathan told her that "it was going to be on DVDs and going to be sent overseas and said only, like, men on fishing boats were going to be able to watch it." (Id. at 20:9 - 11.)

After the phone conversation, Jane Doe 14 was still unwilling to do the gig. She wanted more information, so Jonathan sent her an email with the contact information for a reference model. (Id. at 20:12 – 15.) Jane Doe 14 exchanged text messages with the reference model, who shared her positive experience and confirmed that her video never got published on the internet, "just over DVD and, like, sent overseas or to Australia." (10/15/19 Trial Tr. 22:18 – 27; Ex. 686.)

Jonathan also sent Jane Doe 14 photos of different women surrounded by professional equipment, holding money and smiling, and posing next to computers that had the "BeginModeling.com" webpage displayed in the background. (Ex. 692.) The photos in the email made Jane Doe 14 "trust him more". (10/15/19 Trial Tr. 24:27 – 25:6.).

Jonathan (whom she identified as Garcia) and Mike (whom she identified as Pratt) picked up Jane Doe 14 from the airport and drove her to the hotel. (Id. at 25:18 – 27.) The next day, they picked her up and drove her to their apartment. Prior to the shoot, Garcia gave Jane Doe 14 a drink that had vodka because she was nervous and shy and he said the drink "would, like, loosen [her] up." (Id. at 27:18 – 28:9.) Jane Doe 14 did not remember being given any documentation prior to the shooting of the first solo, for which Pratt was the videographer (Id. at 28:10 - 14.) Then, Pratt made her another drink and she shot a second solo with Wolfe. (Id. at 28:20 - 28:26.)

Prior to flying to San Diego, Jane Doe 14 had not been told about a second solo shoot nor had she agreed to do one. (Id. at 28:27 – 29:1.) She had agreed to do photos, one solo scene and the boy/girl scene for $5,000. (Id. at 25:12 – 17.) In total, before filming the boy/girl scene, Jane Doe 14 estimates she had between four and seven drinks over a period of 10 to 12 hours. (10/16/19 Trial Tr. 11:11 – 14.) Jane Doe 14 felt like she needed to accept all the drinks because she was "extremely nervous and uncomfortable in the environment." (Id. at 104:8 – 10.)

When Garcia and Pratt gave Jane Doe 14 the documents to sign, they started asking her questions as she was trying to fill them out. (10/15/19 Trial Tr. 31:2-6.) She was not able to read the paperwork because she kept being distracted with awkward questions (such as favorite sex positions); because she had been drinking; and because they had already told her many times what she would be signing. (Id. at 31:7-15.) They told her that she was "[j]ust giving them, like, the right to make the DVDs and the overseas and, you know, basically that." (Id. at 31:22-27.) After signing, Jonathan told Jane Doe 14 that she needed to read a script into the camera and that "it was basically just to cover their butts" since she had been drinking. (Id. at 32:2-9.)

During the interview, Jane Doe 14 had to refilm portions several times because Pratt did not like her answers. Each time, Pratt would get angry and shout, this would make her uncomfortable and fearful of what he could do. (Id. at 34:25 – 35:8.)

Even though Jane Doe 14's first scene was shot in the morning, the final shoot was not over until 2:00 a.m. (Id. at 36:6 – 8.) While filming the sexual portions of the video, Jane Doe 14 asked to stop because she was in a lot of pain, but this made Pratt angry, so he was screaming and yelling. (Id. at 36:9 – 12; 37:8 – 13.) At one point, she started crying and asked to leave, but Pratt told her that she was not leaving until they finished filming. (Id. at 37:26 – 38:3.)

About one year after filming, Jane Doe 14 learned that her video was online from a friend who told her that people were sending the video around in her hometown. (Id. at 39:8 – 40:4.) She was living in a new city at the time, but she had intended to move back to her hometown where all her friends lived. (Id. at 42:12-17.) Since the video was released, she has not been back to her hometown for fear of being harassed. (Id. at 40:13-18.) Jane Doe 14 has family in her hometown that she has not been able to visit because she is afraid of going back to a place where everyone knows about the video and where she can be harassed. (Id. at 42:21-43:2.)

Jane Doe 14's friend told her that everyone she went to school with had the video and that screenshots had been posted on Instagram. (Id. at 40:24 – 41:1.) After finding out, Jane Doe 14 cried and thought she was going to pass out, but she tried to hide her feelings for fear of her boyfriend finding out. (Id. at 41:8 – 20.) She immediately deleted her social media accounts and changed her phone number for fear of harassment and of people contacting her. (Id. at 43:21 – 44:7; 44:17 – 27.) Jane Doe 14 found her name and episode number along with comments on "WikiLeaks;" this made her feel "pretty devastated." (Id. at 51:16 – 21.)

She hired DMCA Defender to assist her in the process of getting the videos removed. (Id. at 43:3 – 17.) Panakos Law filed a federal lawsuit against Jane Doe 14 for trying to have her video removed. (Id. at 45:19 – 22.)

The release of the video has impacted Jane Doe 14's relationship with her family, friends, and ex-boyfriend. (Id. at 45:23 – 46:2.) She is no longer close with her mother as she feels she has disappointed her. (Id. at 46:3 – 15.) Jane Doe 14's mother found out about the video through a Facebook message. (Id. at 46:17 – 22.) Jane Doe 14's large group of friends from her hometown decreased to only one because most of them have assumed the worst after the release of the video. (Id. at 48:5 – 16.) She feels humiliated and she wishes she could tell her side of the story. (Id. at 49:3 – 8.) Jane Doe 14's relationship with her ex-boyfriend suffered as a result of the release of the video. He struggled to understand, and she is constantly worried that his family will find out. (Id. at 47:8 – 15; 47:26 – 48:4.) She has fears that her coworkers might find out. (Id. at 50:13 – 20.)

Since the release of the video Jane Doe 14 has suffered from debilitating anxiety. (Id. at 49:9-13.) She is uncomfortable in social settings, and testified that when people stare at her, she is always wondering if it's because they saw the video. (Id. at 49:15-18.) Approximately once a month she has horrific night terrors. 54 (Id. at 50.9 - 12.) While she has always been a relatively quiet person, she had not struggled with anxiety or night terrors prior to the release of the video. (Id. at 49:9-11; 50:3-5.) She has not sought out a therapist because she does not know how to talk about what happened to her. (Id. at 52:3-7.)

Jane Doe 14 wishes she would have known that her video would be posted online, and her name would be released prior to flying to San Diego. (Id. at 52:8-12.) Jane Doe 14 joined this lawsuit to get the rights to her video and "to ensure this doesn't keep happening to other women." (Id. at 52:25 - 28.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 14 to be credible.

Jane Doe 15

As an 18-year old who had just begun college, Jane Doe 15 perused Craigslist ads for jobs and found a modeling ad that took her to begin modeling.com. (08/20/19 Trial Tr. 188:9 – 190:4.) In February of 2016, after applying, she received the stock "established Southern California company" email from Jonathan N. (Ex. 719.1.) Jane Doe 15 did not respond to the email, and two days later Jonathan followed up with three offers – one for a boy-girl shoot, another for a solo, and a third for clothed modeling. (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 16:2 – 18. Ex. 720.) Jane Doe 15 responded to this second email because of the offer to do clothed modeling for $300. (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 18:19 – 20.)

After a few back-and-forth emails, Jonathan had a phone call with Jane Doe 15 in which he insisted on shooting a boy-girl adult scene. He stated that he would fly her to San Diego and pay for her hotel to film her having sex; he offered her $5,000 for 30 minutes of sex. He repeatedly stated that the video would end up on DVD in Australia, the UK, and "a few other really remote countries." (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 20:1-13.) He also underscored how pirating DVDs was illegal, and that he could help take the video down if it went online. (8/26/19 Trial Tr. 181:19 – 25.) Although she was only interested in doing clothed modeling, Jane Doe 15 figured $5,000 was a lot of money.

⁵⁴ Jane Doe 14 describes night terrors as follows: "[b]asically I feel like I'm awake but I'm asleep and I feel someone, like, trying to grab onto me and then I force myself awake, but it happens over and over and over again." (10/15/19 Trial Tr. 49:23 – 26.)

At the time she was worried about putting more financial pressure on her mother, who had three kids in college. (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 21:17-24.)

What drew Jane Doe 15 to the offer was Jonathan's representation of distribution. He purported that he had shot "200-plus women," some of whom were "Instagram models and sorority girls," none of whom had "been found out." (Id. 21:1 – 3; 10 – 12.) Jane Doe 15 emphasized the point of distribution in email (Ex. 725) and over the phone (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 25:5 – 10). Jane Doe 15 was still hesitant about going through with the shoot as she did not want her face and name "out there." (Ex. 725.) However, before her phone call covering details with Jonathan ended, he had already sent her contact information for reference models, her flight information, and her hotel reservation. (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 25:19 – 24.) By this time, Jane Doe 15 still was not set on filming a pornographic video. (Id. 27:11 – 18.)

To ease her concerns about safety, Jane Doe 15 texted the reference model Kailyn Wright. Kailyn corroborated Jonathan's representation that the video ended up on DVD to "wealthier countries." (Ex. 745.4) She also purported that nothing would go online. (Ibid.) Jane Doe 15 "really valued her opinion" since these representations came from "another girl who had done it." (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 50:21 – 22.) She went on to text Jonathan that Kailyn "smoothed all [her] worries." (Ex. 744.) As she boarded the plane, Jane Doe 15 believed she was to film 30 minutes of sex for DVD in Australia and the UK for $5,000. (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 69:9 – 14.)

The cameraman Teddy Gyi picked Jane Doe 15 up from the airport in San Diego. As they drove to the hotel, Jane Doe 15 asked Teddy about distribution. He reaffirmed Jonathan's claim that the adult video would not be on the internet and that it would only go on DVD in Australia. He added that "Internet porn is cheap" and that there was more value in a physical DVD. (Id. 73:8 – 16.) They arrived at the hotel, Riva Yousif walked into the room to do her makeup, and then Jonathan (whom Jane Doe 15 identified as Andre Garcia) entered the room. (Id. 79:4 – 18.)

Shortly after walking in, Jonathan shared his marijuana with Jane Doe 15. (Id. 80:15 – 22.) Then, while high, Jane Doe 15 was presented with paperwork. Jonathan and Teddy engendered a sense of urgency; Teddy flipped through a contract, telling her "this is what we talked about, this is no internet there. . . it's going on DVD in Australia. . . no names." (Id. 83:19 – 84:10.) Jane Doe 15 tried reading the contract, but she could not understand it. Moreover, she was still high as she reviewed the paperwork, and Teddy rushed her through signing various pages. (Id. 84:11 - 85:8. 08/26/19 Trial Tr. 180:13 - 21.) When she returned home, Jane Doe 15 texted Jonathan asking for a copy of the contract, but he ignored her request. (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 105:10 - 13.)

After presenting the contracts, Jonathan counted out $3,000 and paid Jane Doe 15. This amount was $2,000 less than what was promised, but Jane Doe 15 felt she was not in a position to challenge the men in the room. (Id. 85:17 - 86:2.) Jonathan disclosed later through text that she was paid less because she was "pale and bruised." (Id. 87:6 - 7.)

Defendants then presented Jane Doe 15 with a short script to read into the camera. Jonathan claimed that the script was "to get levels on the sound" and test the camera. (Id. 87:17 – 23.) Jane Doe 15 believed the script had no legal significance because it had her state she was of sound mind and body, but everyone in the room knew she had smoked marijuana with Jonathan. (Id. 88:18 – 22.)

Next, Jane Doe 15 underwent coaching for an interview about her life and previous sexual encounters. Jonathan and Teddy instructed her to describe her time there as "an awesome experience" and to "sexualize it." (Id. 90:7 – 17; 93:2 – 6.) Jane Doe 15 answered the intimate questions truthfully because she presumed her answers would only be heard on DVD in Australia. (Id. 93:7 – 14.) Jane Doe 15 testified that she would not have answered the questions truthfully had she known her video would be published online. (Id. 93:15 – 18.)

Jane Doe 15 discovered her video online in April of 2016 when a high school acquaintance of hers sent her the link to her video from ImagePost.com. (08/22/19 Trial Tr. 7:1-15.) She was in class at the time when she opened the link. Later in the day, her friend explained that people at the school were disseminating the video and identifying her. (Id. 16:8-18.) Her significant other tried offering support but he was upset about the publication. Her mother and two sisters also discovered the video. Jane Doe 15 testified that the release of the video damaged her family's trust in her. (Id. 23:18-20.)

A day after finding the video, she sent her first email to mike@bll-media.com complaining about the misrepresentations of distribution and of what occurred during the shoot. (Ex. 763.) Jane

Doe 15 tried calling Jonathan's number multiple times, but the calls eventually stopped going through. (08/22/19 Tr. Transcript 37:7 – 16.)

As a result of having her likeness on the internet, Jane Doe 15 endured harassment through social media and texts from strangers that caused emotional distress. She was kicked off her cheerleading team because of the video. (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 70:18.) Her answers during the interview portion of filming have been the subject of strangers' harassing texts. (Id. 95:6 – 12.) She turned to drinking alcohol in order to sleep, which added friction to her relationship with the person she was seeing, (0.8/22/19 Trial Tr. 190.7 - 16.) She testified that she felt depressed, (0.8/26/19 Trial 190.7 - 16.)Tr. 202:25.) She was prescribed sertraline and hydroxyzine, and she still takes both today. (Id. 152.5 - 8.) Jane Doe 15 worried about how she could be a mother now with the video out. (08/22/19 Trial Tr. 16:19 - 23.) Had she known about distribution and the aftermath of the video, Jane Doe 15 testified that she would not have done it. (08/21/19 Trial Tr. 70:8 – 19.)

Jane Doe 16 was 19-years old, living with her parents, and paying for college expenses and rent when she responded to a modeling Craigslist ad in July 2014. (09/24/19 Trial Tr. 8:7-22.) She then exchanged emails with "Mark," who insisted on a phone call to give her more details. Mark represented that the adult video would be distributed on DVD only in New Zealand. He also told Jane Doe 16 that she could bring a friend for support, which was "a deal breaker" for her. (Id. at 16:2 – 24.) She and Mark had subsequent calls wherein Mark reaffirmed many times over that the DVD will be sold on a small island country. She questioned the DVD format since it seemed outdated, but Mark claimed that he knew the niche overseas market. He also explained how DVDs were "secured and protected" and "unable to be copied." Mark told Jane Doe 16 that he could pay her $3,000 for a boy-girl shoot and $2,000 for a solo photoshoot. (Id. at 17:2 – 13; 18:18 – 19:22; 20:6 -- 14.)

Mark put Jane Doe 16 in contact with a reference model who texted her about her experience filming. The model stated that she had a great experience and that she had "plans to work with Mark again." She corroborated Mark's representations of distribution and purported that

Jane Doe 16's "name would be protected." Hearing these claims from another woman encouraged Jane Doe 16 to go through with the plan as it sounded safe. (Id. at 18:2-12.)

Jane Doe 16 and her friend, Courtney, flew to San Diego on August 1, 2014. Mark (whom she identified as Michael Pratt) and Andre Garcia picked them up. They dropped them off at their hotel, and the next day they reconvened to film. Mark and Cliff, the hair and makeup artist, arrived to set up. Jane Doe 16 began feeling nervous, so she asked Mark if she could only do the photo shoot. Mark rebuffed her request, telling her that if she refused to do the video, she would have to reimburse him for the hotels and flights. Jane Doe 16 proceeded with the video. (Id. at 22:2 – 5; 23:23 – 24:18.)

To calm Jane Doe 16's nerves, Mark offered her rum and coke drinks. She did not eat much that day, so after her second or third drink she "was definitely intoxicated." (Id. at 25:4 – 13.) As Defendants were preparing to film, Jane Doe 16 asked again about distribution. Mark reassured her that the DVD would only be in New Zealand, and her name would not be attached. These representations were reiterated multiple times. (Id. at 25:14 – 18; 145:17 – 24.)

Next, Mark and Garcia paid Jane Doe 16 $3,000 and had her sign paperwork. Jane Doe 16 was very intoxicated as she filled out the documents. Defendants claimed the documents were but a formality. They rushed her through it because they "were running out of daytime for the shoot." Due to her alcohol consumption, Jane Doe 16 did not recall the substance of the documents; nor could she recollect signing the documents or reading a script into the camera. She did remember how Mark and Garcia instructed her to act bubbly and excited for an interview. (Id. at 25:24 – 27:16.)

After filming the boy-girl video, Jane Doe 16 and her friend, Courtney, were transported to Mark's apartment. There, Mark paid her $1,200 – despite indicating that he would pay her $2,000 for the photo shoot earlier – and gave her more alcohol. Jane Doe 16 took enough shots to black out. She went through with the photo shoot, falling over as she posed. (Id. at 28:1 – 29:17.)

The day after the video and photoshoot, Jane Doe 16 and her friend, Courtney, flew home. The two women noticed that Mark and Garcia blocked their numbers. (Id. at 29:24-30:3.) Jane Doe 16 and her boyfriend grew suspicious of the ordeal, prompting her to email Mark and ask for information. She did not receive a response. However, she did receive a phone call that played an audio clip of her interview with Mark. (Id. at 30:16-31:4.)

In March of 2015, Jane Doe 16 found her video online when her boyfriend informed her that his friend found her adult film on a website. News of the video spread quickly. Her college classmates found the video and disseminated it. (Ex. 789.) An acquaintance from Jane Doe 16's high school created a website that displayed only her video. She moved to her college town as opposed to moving back in with her parents because people at her church discovered the adult film. She received lewd harassment and solicitations for sex from strangers through Facebook and Instagram. (Ex. 791.) Moreover, Jane Doe 16 discovered her personal information on PornWikiLeaks. Consequently, her father and three sisters faced harassment, with messages emphasizing how Jane Doe 16 was a "porn star." (09/24/19 Trial Tr. 32:20 – 33:2; 39:1 – 7; 45:21 – 46:23; 47:8 – 11.)

With coworkers, college peers, and strangers laughing at her about the video, Jane Doe 16 dropped out of college. She joined the military which helped for a time, but after being discharged for an injury, she plummeted again. Jane Doe 16 "slipped back into being anxious, depressed, and dependent on alcohol." (Id. at 37:6 – 38:25.)

One night, after having an anxiety attack, Jane Doe 16 drank and picked up a DUI. After the citation, she began receiving treatment for her alcoholism and mental health. She underwent inpatient treatment twice, first for a month and again for three months. (Id. at 39:9 – 20.) Jane Doe 16 was prescribed Klonopin, but on one occasion she consumed an entire bottle in an effort of "intentional overdose." (Id. at 41:1 – 42:1.) Her sister took her to a hospital, and after leaving she underwent four months of outpatient treatment.

Today, five years after filming the video, Jane Doe 16 continues to have many concerns about the video. She worries that the video will remain online. She hopes to work in a school, though she fears she will never be able to now that her name is attached to this video. She worries about how her son will navigate school with classmates and their parents discovering her video. She testified that she "need[s] the rights to this video so [she] can move on with [her] life." (Id. at 51:6 – 21.)

Jane Doe 17 was 19-years old in July 2015 when she first came into contact with the Defendants in this matter. She was looking for modeling jobs on Craigslist to have more money in her pocket for college, which led her to Defendants' ad. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 183:2 – 21). Defendants' ad led her to another website, BeginModeling.com, which showed clothed female models. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 185:11 – 14; 186:2 – 6). Shortly thereafter, Jane Doe 17 received a form response email from Jonathan at jobs@beginmodeling.com. (Ex. 810). Jane Doe 17 responded by saying that she would want to do clothed modeling, since that was what she was used to and what she was looking to do on Craigslist. (Id. at 188:9 – 17). She followed up shortly thereafter to express her willingness to do lingerie as another option, but Jonathan made it clear to her that wasn't a priority for him because he was "in the business of making money." (Ex. 811).

A month later, in response to a separate submission by Jane Doe 17 on Craigslist, Jonathan reached out one more time with an offer of $4,000 for film or $1,000 for photo, according to what Jane Doe 17 thought at the time. She understood the $1,000 photo offer to be, if anything, tasteful nudity. It never crossed her mind that this was pornography, nor was it ever mentioned. (Ex. 816; Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 194: 12 – 195:8.)

After the email exchanges, Jane Doe 17 spoke with someone named Stephen on the phone, someone she testified to having a thick Australian accent. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 195:9 – 13; 195:24 – 196:1). At trial, she identified Defendant Wolfe as "Stephen." (Id. at 182:15 – 19). Stephen told her over the phone that she would be taking photos the whole time. Stephen told her he had worked with multiple NFL cheerleaders, Instagram models, and other people like that. This made Jane Doe 17 excited for this opportunity. (Id. at 196:19 – 197:3). At or around the time she spoke to Stephen, Jane Doe 17 received another email from Jonathan with photos of models attached. (Ex. 818.) After seeing Exhibit 818, she still believed that the job was for a photo shoot because she saw images of happy, smiling girls that were fully clothed—nothing indicated to her that this was pornography. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 198:2 – 7).

Besides Stephen, Jane Doe 17 also spoke to a reference named Kailyn. Kailyn told her that the people she worked with were really nice, and that they made her feel comfortable. She did not have any discussions about distribution with Kailyn because she didn't think she had to, since she believed it was just a modeling shoot that was fully clothed or tasteful nudity. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 200:2-24). Nothing about the conversation with Kailyn led Jane Doe 17 to believe that the job would be for pornography. (Id. at 201:7-9.)

Jane Doe 17 met Stephen on the day of the shoot outside of the Omni Hotel in San Diego. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 201:10 – 13.) At the shoot, male model Andre Garcia offered her marijuana, which she initially refused because she didn't want her eyes to be bloodshot for the pictures she would be taking. (Id. at 203:11 – 19.) At some point, Stephen left the room and returned around noon. It was at this time that he casually mentioned shooting pornography by saying what sexual positions would be done. (Id. at 204:12 – 22.) Jane Doe 17 reacted immediately by saying no. Stephen and Garcia immediately explained where this newly revealed pornography video would be going—they represented that the videos would be distributed on DVD overseas in Australia. (Id. at 204:25 – 205:10.) At no time did anyone in the room mention any of their websites. (Id. at 205:18 – 20.) Jane Doe 17 still said no to these new terms, and Stephen became very agitated and said that she was wasting their time and money. (Id. at 205:11 – 17.)

Stephen and Garcia ultimately convinced Jane Doe 17 to film the video. She did so only because she felt scared of what would happen if she tried to leave. She feared having the nude photos the Defendants had her send prior to the shoot disseminated in retaliation. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 205:21 – 206:3). The Defendants offered Jane Doe 17 another $4,000 for filming the video on top of the photo shoot she thought she was supposed to do. She received that payment. (Id. at 206:2 – 8.) Before being convinced to do the video, Jane Doe 17 was given one cranberry vodka, despite being underage at the time. (Id. at 206:9 – 18).

After convincing her to film the video, Stephen provided Jane Doe 17 a stack of papers. He claimed it was a contract and he rushed her through it. Stephen pointed at every paragraph and summarized what each of them said; he specifically said that the film would be overseas in a DVD store in Australia. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 206:21 – 207:7). As she was filling out the documents, Defendants were asking her questions, which she testified as being distracting and not allowing her to read the document. (Id. at 215:16-216:9.) Shortly thereafter, she accepted Garcia's offer of marijuana because she wanted to numb herself. (Id. at 209:1-10.)

After the contracts, Stephen gave a verbal script to Jane Doe 17 to read into the camera which, in part, made her say she was not under the influence of any mind-altering substance. She did not believe this to be true, since she had just smoked and drank a cranberry vodka in Defendants' presence. She read the statement into the camera because they told her to; she thought it was something they needed for their database. She was not concerned about reading her name as part of the script because she didn't think that they would put that part of the video anywhere. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 209:21 – 211:18.) Jane Doe 17 then participated in a coached interview with the Defendants prior to the sexual portion of the video. (Id. at 212:12 – 20; 214:19 – 215:3.) She would never have answered the questions in the interview had she known the video would be published online due to their sensitive nature. (Id. at 216:22 – 217:9.) During the actual filming process, Jane Doe 17 asked to leave the room but was instead told to get air on the balcony. She cried multiple times during the filming and was simply told to go to the bathroom and fix her makeup. (Id. at 222:12 – 21.)

Jane Doe 17 first learned her video was released online in October of 2016. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 217:24 – 218:2.) She was alerted on Instagram to a page that was GirlsDoPorn that featured a clothed photo of herself on a bed. Eventually this led Jane Doe 17 to realize her video was on the GirlsDoPorn.com website with a "Coming Soon" banner on it. (Id. at 218:3 – 19.) Jane Doe 17 testified to this being the worst thing ever because she had to anticipate her video being released online—it took around six days from the time she found out about the video for it to be officially released. (Id. at 219:6 – 19.) In those six intervening days, Jane Doe 17 filed a police report because she wanted to see if there was a way she could take the video down before it came out. (Id. at 219:20 – 24.) Nothing came of the police report, to her knowledge. (Id. at 227:4 – 6.)

Jane Doe 17 endured emotional distress and suffered extensive harassment from people both known and unknown as a result of the video's release. She went home to California from Tucson after finding out about her video. She told her mom everything about her experience with

Defendants; she was really embarrassed. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 220:15 – 24.) Despite returning to Tucson for classes, she was extremely scared to actually walk to class in fear of being recognized. She didn't really even go to class and started failing as a result of the publication of the video. (Id. at 222:22 – 223:5; 224:23 – 25.) Jane Doe 17 even testified that her ex-boyfriend's fraternity played her video during their chapter meeting. She frequently had people approach her at parties to show her the video. She was dubbed the "porno girl." (Id. at 223:24 – 224:9.) She ultimately left her university because of the harassment she was getting and corresponding failing grades. (Id. at 223:6 – 15.) Jane Doe 17 also experienced harassment on social media where she was threatened with having the video exposed to members of her family. (Trial Tr. 09/03/19 at 34:15 – 35:1; Ex. 840.) Strangers posted her video and episode number on her mother's Yelp business page, something that shocked her as her mother and her business had nothing to do with the video. (Trial Tr. 09/03/19 at 36:23 – 37:9; Ex. 844.)

Jane Doe 17 sought out treatment as a result of the emotional distress she suffered because of the video. She saw two therapists and one psychiatrist. She attended several sessions with these specialists. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 225:21 - 226:5.) She began taking a supplement called GABA to address sleep problems caused by anxiousness, which she did not have prior to the video's release. (Id. at 226:8 - 19.)

In an attempt to stop other girls from falling for the same lie she fell into, Jane Doe 17 began posting on Craigslist to explain that the Defendants' photo shoots will actually end up being pornography shoots. (Trial Tr. 08/29/19 at 227:16 – 228:16.) In response to her postings on Craigslist, Defendants—through their counsel, Aaron Sadock—sent Jane Doe 17 a cease and desist letter that included her nude photos threatening her with a lawsuit if she continued making the posts. The letter was addressed to her parents' house. (Id. at 229:2 – 22; Ex. 837.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 17 to be credible.

Jane Doe 18

Jane Doe 18 needed money for college when she found Defendants' ad on Craigslist. (Deposition of Jane Doe 18, March 22, 2019 ["Jane Doe 18 Depo."] at 246:13 – 16.) She was looking for part-time fitness modeling or clothed modeling jobs. (Doe 18 Depo. 90:9-12.) In December 2015, Jane Doe 18 responded to an ad that mentioned "18- to 22-year-old girls photo shoot." (Id. at 188:15-20; 91:10-11.) This was the first time that she became aware of the existence of www.modelinggigs.com (Id. at 90:18-21.) She was 21 years old when she responded to the ad by email. (Id. at 189:23-25.)

After submitting clothed photos, headshots and her contact information, Jane Doe 18 received an email from mark@modelinggigs.com (Id. at 91:22 – 92:13.) After the initial email, Jane Doe 18 and the Defendants exchanged a few emails regarding the clothed photo shoot. (Id. at 94:5 – 7.) The emails also mentioned the option of doing an adult video, however it was not the only option. (Id. at 94:15 – 95:2; 96:13 – 17.) In the days that Jane Doe 18 communicated via email with the Defendants, she went to modelinggigs.com to learn more about the website, and "[t]here were no nude or pornographic images on it. It was all clothed models." (Id. at 93:8 – 10.) She kept communicating with the Defendants because she "believed clothed photo modeling was also an option." (Id. at 97:7 – 10.)

Following the first few emails, Jane Doe 18 had a phone call with a man with an accent. (Id. at 98:19 – 22.) He told Jane Doe 18 that she could either do clothed modeling or a pornographic video, but that she would make more money if she did the pornographic video. (Id. at 98:22 – 99:1.) If she decided to do the video, she would be "promised anonymity. They [the videos] would only be distributed in Australia and South America via DVD. No one would ever find out that [she] had done it. Amongst other things." (Id. at 99:1 – 4.) Defendants insisted on providing Jane Doe 18 with details regarding the pornographic video in case she would warm up to the idea. (Id. at 99:10 – 12.) Jane Doe 18 told the Defendants that she had no desire to do a pornographic video, and she discussed it at length over the phone. (Id. at 95:16 – 19; 99:5 – 8.)

Also over the phone, Jane Doe 18 asked Defendants about the type of clothing, they told her that "they do a lot of male and female clothed photo shoots for multiple clothing companies." (Id. at 100:23 - 101:4.) Jane Doe 18 had asked the Defendants for examples of past photo shoots, and they told her to refer to their website. (Id. at 102:16 - 19.) While on the phone call, Defendants gave Jane Doe 18 the contact information for one of their references. (Id. at 102:13 - 15.)

Jane Doe 18 reached out to the reference, Kat, via FaceTime and text messages. (Id. at 115:13 – 15.) She asked the reference whether "it was safe, if they were shady." (Id. at 115:17 – 18.) The reference woman told Jane Doe 18:

"If I wanted to do a photo shoot it would be wholesome, fun, easy; but I should really consider doing the pornography because it was really fun, she enjoyed it, they're easy to work with, no one would ever know, I would make more money, and I should get out of my comfort zone."

(Id. at 116:1-6.) As she had previously told the Defendants, Jane Doe 18 told the reference that doing a pornography video made her uncomfortable. (Id. at 116:8-9.)

In the email exchange after the phone call, Defendants asked Jane Doe 18 to provide them with nude photos because they wanted to see her body dimensions. (Id. at 106:24 - 107:2.) She was a bit apprehensive at first, but Defendants reassured her that "it would be completely anonymous, no one would ever see them; it was simply to get [her] look." (Id. at 107:10 - 15; 108:3 - 7.) She had spoken with the Defendants multiple times, so she felt comfortable with their reassurances. (Id. at 109:5 - 6.)

The compensation regarding the photo shoot was discussed on a phone call. Jane Doe 18 was told that she would be paid "roughly one to two thousand dollars." (Id. at 106:17-20.) Prior to flying to San Diego, Jane Doe 18 was still under the impression that she would be paid one to two thousand dollars if she did the photoshoot, and $4,500 if she agreed to do a pornography video. (Id. at 116:23-117:1.) Prior to flying to San Diego, Jane Doe 18 had continually told Defendants that she would not do the pornographic video option. (Id. at 117:2-6.) Jane Doe 18 flew to San Diego thinking that she would do a photo shoot that would last "between 30 minutes and an hour and a half." (Id. at 102:8-12.)

Once in San Diego, Jane Doe 18 was picked up at the airport in a black Escalade, "an Asian man was driving. He introduced himself as Teddy." (Id. at 118:10 – 12.) Both, on the car ride and at Garcia's apartment (Garcia introduced himself as Dre), Teddy and Garcia kept using the phrase "photo shoot" (Id. at 120:9 – 14.) Jane Doe 18 kept asking Teddy, Garcia, and the makeup artist questions such as: "[w]here are we going? What time? How long is it going to take? Lots of different things. And they kept brushing off [her] questions, not replying. (Id. at 122:8 – 11.) Before going to the location where Defendants would do the photo shoot, they told Jane Doe 18 that they needed to take a nude picture to make sure that her measurements were right. (Id. at 123:14 – 18.) Jane Doe 18 was very uncomfortable with this request, "Mark was yelling on the phone", but Garcia reassured her that the picture would not go anywhere and that her face would not be on it. (Id. at 123:18 – 124:1.) Eventually Jane Doe 18 took the nude picture because they had reassured her, she was uncomfortable, and she felt outnumbered. (Id. at 124:18 – 125:1.)

On the way to the hotel, "Garcia stopped in an alleyway to pick up marihuana from someone." (Id. at 127:24 – 25.) While in the car, Teddy reassured Jane Doe 18 that they were "just going to go do the photo shoot." (Id. at 128:18 – 24.) Defendants told Jane Doe 18 that they usually filmed in a house on the beach, but that it was currently being remodeled, so they had to do it at the hotel. (Id. at 129:2 – 6.) Once at the hotel room, Garcia told Jane Doe 18 to change, she asked for the clothing, but he said to wear anything, that they were just going to film an interview. (Id. at 130:17 – 22.)

After changing in the bathroom, Jane Doe 18 came out and she saw Teddy and Garcia standing next to the desk and on it they had laid out some paperwork. (Id. at 132:10 – 16.) Jane Doe 18 had to sign the documents without reviewing them because:

Garcia is standing right here. He is the one holding the paper, flipping, telling me, Sign here, sign here, initial here, sign here. Doesn't let me read anything. I said, Okay, what is this? Can I read it? And he goes, It's everything we've already talked about. It's just the release for images. It's just saying we have the right to use your image exactly how we said we would. And I said, Wait. What? My image? I was confused. And I don't particularly enjoy signing things that I haven't read. I don't do that. So I asked them immediately, Can you email me a copy of this for my records? And Garcia said, Yeah, yeah, yeah, of course. And he goes, Do you want me to get the money first? And I was like, What?

(Id. at 132:15 – 133:5.) Jane Doe 18 never got a copy of the documents. (Id. at 133:10 – 11.) She asked the Defendants if she could read the documents before signing them, but they again pressured her, yelled and rushed her. (Id. at 134:21 – 135:1.) Garcia kept telling her that the documents were everything that they had talked about, "you know everything that's in here already." (Id. at 135:2 - 4.) She had talked with the Defendants many times, so she trusted their assurances of what was in the documents. (Id. at 135:4 - 6.) At one point, she tried to grab the documents in order to read them, but Garcia pulled it away from her hands. (Id. at 137:14 – 22.) At that moment, she did not feel that she could leave the room because Defendants were standing over her; they had taken her phone and they had unplugged the phone in the hotel room. (Id. at 137:8-13.)

After the documents were signed, Teddy and Garcia started explaining the video to Jane Doe 18. They told her the same information regarding confidentiality and distribution that they had told her on the phone prior to flying to San Diego. (Id. at 139:13 – 19.) She felt completely trapped after she understood that they wanted her to do the pornographic video. (Id. at 141:9 – 13.) At this point Jane Doe 18 was terrified, she did not know if she was going to be murdered or human trafficked. (Id. at 141:15 – 19.) After wanting to leave and being blocked by Garcia, she was "kind of just waiting to be told what to do, trying to survive and get out of it." (Id. at 143:19 – 22.)

Reading the verbal script, Jane Doe 18 was told to "[j]ust say this into the camera really quick." (Id. at 145:17.) Defendants told her that she needed to read something into the camera, "so that they could get the settings and everything right and make sure that [her] voice was right." (Id. at 149:23 – 150:1.) As soon as Jane Doe 18 finished reading the script, Defendants started giving her drinks and marijuana. (Id. at 145:17 – 20.) Jane Doe 18 had never smoked marijuana prior to that moment; she was given between two and four shots of vodka; and according to the Defendants the alcohol and the drugs were intended to help her not be nervous. (Id. at 145:21 – 146:3; 145:19 – 20.) She did not want to smoke, but Garcia insisted that it would calm her down. (Id. at 152:3 – 4.) Jane Doe 18 testified that that was probably "one of the highest times [she had] ever been in [her] life." (Id. at 146:18 – 19.)

Following the verbal script, Jane Doe 18 was coached to be "flirty and perky, energetic, smiley. They told [her] specific things to say"; if they did not like her answer "they would restart and tell [her] to say something slutty, or, No, we don't like that; say this." (Id. at 144:21 – 145:1.)

Garcia forced Jane Doe 18 to engage in intercourse. (Id. at 171:10-17.) At one point she was bleeding vaginally, and she felt pain due to the angle in which Garcia was pulling her arms, she asked for him to stop and she tried to run out of the hotel room. (Id. at 178:19 – 179:1.) Both Garcia and Teddy blocked the door, then Garcia physically "shoved [her] back into the room towards the bed." (Id. at 179:11 – 20.)

Jane Doe 18 did not feel comfortable calling the police since the Defendants had threatened her to release online what they had filmed so far. (Id. at 182:10-12.) The next day Mark called her and told her that he had cancelled her flight home and that she needed to do a solo shoot. (Id. at 185:6-9.) Defendants had initially told Jane Doe 18 that if she decided to do the pornographic video, she would be paid $4,500, yet she was only paid $3,500. (Id. at 156:7-14.) She was told that she would get the rest of the money the next day when she did a solo. Jane Doe 18 had never been told about a solo nor had she agreed to do one. (Id. at 156:14-19.)

Jane Doe 18 discovered that her video was online in February 2016, "[a] boy from high school sent [her] the link". (Id. at 160:10-16.) After the online release of her video, she was not able to get ahold of the Defendants, "they had deleted all of the numbers or changed the numbers." (Id. at 245:21-24.) A few friends from Jane Doe 18's time at Ameritech College found out about the video. (Id. at 48:2-11.) Upon finding out that it was online, she told her family and friends. (Id. at 161:15-21.)

After the online release of the video, Jane Doe 18 has missed work multiple times, she has had to withdraw from school more than once, and consequently sustained a financial loss of about $30,000. (Id: at 283:1 – 6.) She is afraid of having to use her name. As a result she does not apply for jobs like she used to. (Id: at 283:7 – 12.) She has deleted social media or changed the privacy settings, so that the accounts are extremely private. (Id: at 288:3 – 7.)

Jane Doe 18 has sought medical treatment after discovering that her video was released online. (Id. at 274:16 – 18.) She has been treated for "low blood pressure and migraines as a result of anxiety as a result of the video." (Id. at 280:11 – 12.) After the online release, she was prescribed antidepressants, sleep medication, and Adderall. (Id. at 281:10 – 19.) Later she reached out to a different health care provider for counseling. (Id. at 281:20 – 21.) Jane Doe 18 has been inpatient in a mental facility and has had to acquire an emotional support dog. (Id. at 287:21 – 23.)

Jane Doe 18 visited the emergency room on different occasions for alcohol poisoning and suicidal ideations. (Id. at 281:5-8.) She has also been admitted at a hospital ER and kept inpatient for over 24 hours because of suicidal ideations. (Id. at 280:16-19.)

Some of the symptoms that Jane Doe 18 has experienced as a direct result of shooting the pornographic video include throwing up when overly upset, depression, sadness, hyperventilating, panic attacks, breaking out in urticaria, and hives. (Id. at 42:16 – 43:5; 48:20 – 22.)

To think about her experience with the Defendants gives Jane Doe 18 post-traumatic stress and major depression. She said that "[t]he only reason that [she] joined this trial was to make sure that these guys can't do this to any more girls." (Id. at 286:5-9.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 18 to be credible.

Jane Doe 19

In November 2016 (after this lawsuit had commenced and Defendants appeared), when Jane Doe 19 was 21 years old, was between jobs, and living in Washington, she found an advertisement on Craigslist for modeling, which lead her to Defendants. (9/9/19 Trial Tr. 212:6 – 213:22.) The advertisement did not mention pornography. (Id.) She was on Craigslist looking for jobs because she had bills to pay, including her car payment. (Id.)

After responding to the Craigslist advertisement, "Mike" replied to Jane Doe 19 with a canned email. (Ex. 875.) The email stated to Jane Doe 19 "Photoshoots and other opportunities..." "We have several channels of distribution depending on the level of anonymity you wish to attain..." and "none of your personal information is released...to keep your identity private...." (Id.)

Eventually, "Mike" called Jane Doe 19. She testified, "and when we were on the phone, he said that he had a private collector in Australia, and everything was confidential and discreet. And it was a 30-minute shoot. He just said "shoot." And that it was only to the level that I was comfortable with." (9/9/19 Trial Tr. 214:13 – 22.) At this point, she did not know the video involved sex. (Id. 215:4 – 5.)

The private collector in Australia was important to Jane Doe 19. "It was important to [her] that this was going to be confidential and that it wasn't going to be online." (Id. 215:6-12.) Mike did not mention GirlsDoPorn or internet distribution. (Id. 215:13-16.) Mike gave her reference models to speak with. Jane Doe 19 texted them. They appeared her questions and concerns, and said it was a pleasant experience. (Id. 215:17-216:2.)

Jane Doe 19 "would have liked to know that there was a website that they post this on and repost this on for free people to see, that was girlsdoporn.com. If I knew that that was like actually what they were doing, if I knew there was already a lawsuit out for them, and they had done this to multiple other women..." (9/10/19 Trial Tr. 27:11-20.)

She would have liked to know that other women had already sued the defendants for fraud, and she would not have flown to California or signed any documents, if she had known. (Id. 27:21:28:6.) She believed Defendants because Michael Pratt was "very reassuring that this was just for a private collector on a DVD to Australia. And Andre [Garcia] confirmed that story. Riva [Yousif] confirmed that story. Teddy [Gyi] confirmed that story." (Id. 28:7 – 13.) "So when you hear something over and over again, you believe them." (Id.)

"Mike" bought airfare to fly Jane Doe 19 from Seattle to San Diego. She believed the job was "some sort of like professional studio and that it was just going to be a photo shoot, and it could include nude and up to with someone else, but I did not think that it was going to be sex." (9/9/19 Trial Tr. 216:10-23.)

The shoot was to occur the night Jane Doe 19 flew into San Diego, but it was postponed to the next day. (Id. 218:10 – 219:25.) The next morning, three men and Riva Yousif showed up at Jane Doe 19's hotel room, which scared her. (Id. 220:1 – 10.) Garcia arrived with documents, which Jane Doe 19 signed, after the men told her the shoot was for a "DVD, a private collector on a DVD over to Australia, and everything was going to be confidential. (Id. 220:17 – 221:8.) This reassured Jane Doe 19's concerns and she was rushed signing given her departure flight from San Diego. (Id.) Theodore Gyi also handed her the verbal script, told her to read it into the camera, which she did not think was a contract. (Id. 222:17 – 223:1.)

Defendants then paid her $3,000, not the $4,000 Mike had offered, with Garcia reasoning, "her body was a 10, but face a 7." (Id. 222:2 – 10.) After paying her another $40 for parking, Defendants for the first time told Jane Doe the shoot was sex, and with Garcia. (Id. at 223:9 – 224:1.) Jane Doe 19 then filmed the video with Garcia as the actor. (Id. at 225:8 – 9.)

After returning to Washington, Jane Doe 19 eventually learned her video was on the internet when she received a "blocked email and text messages with a link to [her] video saying, "I found you." (9/10/19 Trial Tr. 12:6 – 13.) The message had link to her video on www.PornHub.com. (Id. 12:14 – 15.) A man she was dating received a message, "I found your girl." (Id. 12:21 – 13:11; Ex. 888.) Her friends and their boyfriends also discovered the video. (Id. 14:5 – 18; Ex. 889.) Jane Doe 19 then found her video on approximately 10 websites, some with an episode number, which she and her friend tried to report to take down. (Id. 15:21 – 16:8.) Jane Doe 19 also reached out to "Mike," testifying:

I called Mike because I was very upset. I felt betrayed that what they had told me wasn't true. And when I called him, he told me that he didn't know who I was and hung up. And I tried calling again and again, and he -- he just stopped answering. And then when I texted him that I was upset and I would get a lawyer, he told me that I was a joke and they have everything on video.

(Id. 16:9 – 18; Ex. 886 [Mike Pratt writing "LOL" and "your [sic] a joke.)

As a result of the video release, Jane Doe 19's video spread by word of mouth in the Seattle area, and she had to break up with her boyfriend, who would blackmail her with it, and pass it around to acquaintances and friends at bars and parties. (Id. 20:2-15.) Jane Doe 19 came across approximately 100 people who had learned of the video, and she eventually had to delete social media. (Id. 20:16-21.) She was harassed on social media with random messages, including propositions for sex from strangers. (Id. 22:24-23:5.)

The video release affected her emotionally:

- Q. And how did the release of the video on the Internet affect you emotionally before you moved to Vegas?
- A. Well, at one point, I drove my car to a cliff, and there was no barrier, you can drive, and I sat there and sat in my car contemplating for a couple of hours listening to music and wondering if maybe the best way to make it all stop was just to not be here.
- Q. What were you thinking of doing on the top of the cliff?
- A. Driving my car off.

(Id. 24:3-13, 26:20-21) ["I have cried in my car when I was going to leave this world."].)

Eventually, Jane Doe 19 had to move from the Seattle area to Las Vegas. "I had to move away from that state. It was where I grew up, and I had a lot of friends, and my family lives there, and I had — my life was ruined, and it was too much to handle, so I thought maybe going to a new state would help me at least try and give myself a fresh start." (Id. 23:19 – 24:2.) She now has an emotional support dog, a psychiatrist diagnosed her with anxiety and depression, she has taken medication, gone to therapy, lost sleep and weight, and cried thousands of times. (Id. 24:16 – 26:24.)

Jane Doe 19 is concerned about the future:

[T]his will haunt me for the rest of my life. That if I have kids, this is what they are going to think of me. That if I start a new job, this is -- they will know about it and confront me. That if I did reactivate, like, my Facebook or something, I would receive countless messages, whether they were supportive or not, it still is horrific to read about and be a part of.

(Id. 26:25 - 27:10.)

Jane Doe 20

In October 2015, 21-year old Jane Doe 20 was a fulltime student in Florida working two jobs to pay all of her expenses by herself. She was living paycheck to paycheck and sought extra money when she sent an application to Modeling Work.com. (09/16/19 Trial Tr. 7:15 – 8:26; 10:19 – 23.) Jane Doe 20 then received an email from mike@modelingwork.com that detailed an offer to shoot 30 minutes of sex. The email purported that there were "several channels of distribution depending on the level of anonymity" desired. (Ex. 904.1 - 2.)

Following a short back-and-forth in email, Jane Doe 20 had a phone call with Mike who explained the video would only be on DVD in Australia. He claimed that the video would not appear in the US or on the internet, and he assured her that she could speak to reference models upon request. Mike also mentioned that Jane Doe 20 would be paid $5,000 for the job. Jane Doe 20 testified that he "was very convincing" over the phone. (09/16/19 Trial Tr. 15:1 – 16; 16:4 – 15.)

Jane Doe 20 had subsequent calls with Mike wherein he showed her his office, employees, and a male actor named Josh. Seeing what looked to be a normal and professional office made Jane Doe 20 feel more comfortable. (Id. at 16:16 – 17:15.)

Another aspect of recruitment that drew Jane Doe 20 in was contacting a reference model. She texted and spoke with Cat Wilkens, who reaffirmed that her videos were not online nor in the US. Jane Doe 20 also followed Cat on Instagram, which further cemented the idea that Defendants ran a legitimate operation that protected the privacy of normal young women. (Id. at 17:27 – 19:4.)

Jane Doe 20 did not make the original flight Mike booked for her because she "ended up getting cold feet." (Id. at 19:21.) Mike, however, remained persistent, continued comforting her, and ultimately convinced her to get on a plane to San Diego. Mike (whom Jane Doe 20 identified as Michael Pratt) picked Jane Doe 20 up from the airport and drove her to the hotel where she would stay for the night. During the car ride, Mike reassured her that the video would not appear online. (Id. at 20:14 – 27.)

The next morning, Mike, Andre Garcia, and a second male actor Josh arrived at the hotel. Jane Doe 20 noticed that they seemed irritated and in a hurry. They took her to another hotel where the shoot would take place. Jane Doe 20 asked Garcia about distribution, and he verified what Mike had claimed about being overseas. (Id. at 27:5 – 10.) She went to take a shower, and Josh joined her without asking; she felt uncomfortable, but she proceeded because she did not know how adult shoots went. After the shower, the videographer and makeup artist entered the room. (Id. at 22:2 – 23:22.)

Garcia disclosed to Jane Doe 20 that they would reduce her pay to $2,500 because Mike did not expect her to have a large tattoo on her back. Jane Doe 20 was shocked by the explanation as her application photos displayed her tattoo clearly. (Ex. 899.) He then surprised her by asserting that she had to shoot with two male actors. Jane Doe 20 felt uncomfortable yet powerless. She "didn't want to get on anybody's nerves," so she went with what the men directed. (09/16/19 Trial Tr. at 24:15 – 26:3.)

Next, Garcia handed Jane Doe 20 documents to sign. He rushed her through signing the paperwork, representing it as "just for tax purposes and stuff [they] had already talked about." (Id. at 26:18 – 19.) Jane Doe 20 did not have time to read the document. Garcia then gave her a script to read into the camera. He purported that this script was to show she "wasn't being held against [her] will." (Id. at 28:7.) After filling out the documents, Jane Doe 20 sat on the bed for an interview wherein she was coached to act flirty and answer personal sexual questions. She was uncomfortable with both the interview and the sexual filming, the latter of which took at least double the time initially stated. (Id. at 29:2 – 22.)

Early in 2016, Jane Doe 20 received Snapchat messages from friends with links to her video online. Her immediate response was to ignore the influx of messages. Soon thereafter, her family, co-workers, and strangers discovered the video. She lost many friends, some of whom sent hurtful messages. (Id. at 30:21 – 32:23.) For example, her now ex-boyfriend sent emails in which he claimed that the pornographic film defined Jane Doe 20. He focused on his own shame and disgust, emphasizing that she made "the most disgusting thing possible." (Ex. 921.)

Jane Doe 20 endured emotional distress as a result of the harassment from friends and strangers. She suffered from extreme anxiety, panic attacks, depression, insomnia, and undereating. (09/16/19 Trial Tr. at 52:26 – 53:3.) On one occasion, Jane Doe 20 underwent a panic attack that sent her to the ER, where physicians prescribed her Lorazepam. Jane Doe 20 continues to experience these symptoms. She now has additional worries concerning her nine-month old child; she worries about his growing up in her hometown where people continue to approach her about her video. She also has concerns about her career and how she can provide for him financially. (Id. at 53:6 – 54:14.)

Jane Doe 20 took some measures to try to remove the video before procuring legal representation. She sent a notice to a porn tube site disseminating her video. She stated that showing her likeness was a violation of privacy. (Ex. 922.) She also emailed Michael Pratt pleading with him to take it down, but he replied, "LOL good one." (Ex. 923.3)

Jane Doe 20 testified that she wished she had been told where the video would end up, that they would short her on payment, and that they would have her film with two men. She joined the lawsuit so that her video could be removed and so that nobody else endures what she went through. (09/16/19 Trial Tr. 54:18-55:7.)

The Court finds Jane Doe 20 to be credible.

In May of 2015, Jane Doe 21 had just been fired from her job. She was 20 years old, transferring to a new school, living with her parents, and she had to pay for her college tuition. (Deposition of Jane Doe 21, May 4, 2019 ["Doe 21 Depo."] at 36:4 – 11; 50:9.) After applying to around 50 jobs through Craigslist with no luck, she received the stock "legitimate adult gig" email from BeginModeling. (Id. at 36:12 – 17; 42:15 – 20.)

Jane Doe 21 spoke with Jonathan on the phone, and she asked about safety, STD testing, and distribution. Jonathan assured her he could provide the health bill, and he purported the video would not be published online. (Id. at 69:24-70:7.)

Jonathan then sent her reference model contact information. Jane Doe 21 felt more comfortable communicating with a woman about the experience. The reference model, Kailyn, texted her that it was a great experience, that Defendants would provide "luxury accommodations," and that the video would not be online. (Id. at 87:4 – 88:4.) Her conversation with the reference model was "the deciding factor in whether or not [the video shoot] was safe." (Id. at 59:10 – 15.)

By the time she was boarding the plane, Jane Doe 21 was told she would fly from Newark, New Jersey to San Diego, California to film a sex video. (Id. 94:25 – 95:3.) She was under the impression the video would be for a "small overseas audience on DVD." She believed she would be paid $3,000 for 30 minutes of filming. (Id. at 71:15 – 72:22.)

Jonathan (whom she identified as Andre Garcia) picked Jane Doe 21 up from the airport and checked her into a hotel. He walked her into the room, then told her his boss needed more pictures. He instructed Jane Doe 21 to strip, making her feel "scared and vulnerable," and later that night he forced her to have sex with him. (Id. at 95:9 – 11; 97:15 – 98:13.) The next day, after getting her makeup and nails done at a shopping center, Jane Doe 21 returned to her hotel for the shoot. (Id. at 102:2 – 25.)

At the hotel, Jane Doe 21 met with the videographer, Matthew Wolfe, and Jonathan. Wolfe set up for filming while she had her tattoo covered up.⁵⁵ Jane Doe 21 asked several times for STD test results, but her request was denied repeatedly. (Id. at 105:3 – 106:3.) Next, Wolfe and Jonathan handed Jane Doe 21 documents and stood over her shoulder to rush her aggressively through paperwork. They told her to hurry because they were starting late. At the same time, Wolfe and Jonathan asked Jane Doe 21 for forms of identification. In this flurry, with two men she did not know between her and the door of the room, Jane Doe 21 had no time to read what she signed. Wolfe purported that the contract was to ensure she did not "run off and become a porn star after filming." (Id. at 107:20 – 108:22.) Given the constant reassurances by Wolfe and Jonathan, Jane Doe 21 believed the contracts entailed what their verbal agreement was. (Id. at 120:7 – 12.)

Defendants also provided Jane Doe 21 with a script to read on camera. Jane Doe 21 was scared about being in the room, so she read through it quickly. Based on Defendants' representations in the room, she believed the paper was but a formality. Although the script read that she was to film voluntarily, Jane Doe 21 felt she was pressured into doing so. She claimed she had no escape, and she did as Matthew Wolfe told her. (Id. at 132:19 – 133:25.) Jane Doe 21 proceeded to film, and she was paid $3,000. (Ex. 961.)

When filming concluded, Jane Doe 21 smoked the marijuana Jonathan offered her to numb herself. She then cried herself to sleep. (Doe 21 Depo. 142:12-18.) The next day, she was kicked out of the hotel onto the street. Unsure of where to go, she texted Jonathan asking what to do since she had no way home. Jonathan picked her up and brought her to his apartment, where Wolfe was. Jonathan then drove her to the airport, and she flew home. (Id. at 143:12-145:5.)

Upon returning home but before the video was released, Jane Doe 21 experienced depression and she was withdrawn from others. (Id. at 148:2 – 7.) In or around June of 2015, Jane Doe 21 discovered her video online when multiple people messaged and called her about it. (Id. at 150:9 – 12.) She was receiving messages across all platforms – Facebook, email, Twitter, text messages. All of her friends found out, as did her siblings, family, and fiancé. (Id. at 152:8 – 153:8.) Jane Doe 21 testified that she lost all but two friends. (Id. at 166:9 – 11.) She felt she could not go out in public out of fear that someone would recognize her from the video. Her classmates at her new school also found her video, which in turn compelled Jane Doe 21 to miss classes so she would not draw attention to herself. (Id. at 154:23 – 5; 157:8 – 24.)

Jane Doe 21 had not only her personal information and social media profiles posted around YouTube and PornWikiLeaks, but also her family's information. Exhibit 966 catalogues various threads across multiple websites posting links and personal information of Jane Doe 21, her family members, and even her mother's company page. Michael Pratt's fake Facebook profile Ann Fairchild also contacted Jane Doe 21's mother multiple times, though she never responded. (Ex. 963.)

Because of her emotional distress from the video's release, Jane Doe 21 required extensive medical treatment. She lost 20 pounds in the course of two months following the online publication, so she began seeing a nutritionist. (Doe 21 Depo. 160:7 – 18.) She also began seeing a doctor who diagnosed her with "plenty of psychological issues" and with anemia; furthermore, her "organs were on the verge of failure." (Id. at 163:4 – 22.) Before the video's release, Jane Doe 21 had no eating problems. After the video, however, she struggled to get out of bed, and the doctor told her that her anemia was due to her poor diet. Jane Doe 21 continues to have an eating disorder today, four years after the video. (Id. at 162:23 – 163:22.) She also continues to see a therapist, who diagnosed her with complex PTSD and prescribed her sertraline, an antidepressant. (Id. at 169:22 – 170:3; 172:13 – 18.) Jane Doe 21 testified that her relationship with her parents is still not the same and it never will be. (Id. at 210:9 – 10.)

In January 2015, Jane Doe 22 responded to a Craigslist advertisement for modeling with the headline "Females Escape the Snow and Make 5K". (10/22/19 Jane Doe 22 Depo. 132:1 – 5.) She didn't know what the ad was going to entail, she was just focused on the $5000 payment. (Id. at 133:4 – 10; 133:13 – 17.) In conversations with defendants, Jane Doe 22 was told the video would be on DVD, distributed only in Australia and New Zealand, not in the United States. (Id. at 152:15 – 20.) This information was very important to her because had Jane Doe 22 known the video would be released online, she would not have done it. (Id. at 155:9 – 12.)

Before coming to San Diego, Jane Doe 22 had communicated with defendants and they had informed her it would be an adult shoot. At some point thereafter, she realized it was going to be a pornographic video. (Id. at 144:2-20.) Jane Doe 22 recalls that she discussed her concerns with them over the phone and not in emails. Her emails were short and to the point. (Id. at $185\ 12-24$.)

The number one reason Jane Doe 22 was willing to do a pornographic video was money. She needed money. This was the only reason she did the video. (Id. at 162:15-20, 257:24-25.) Jane Doe 22 needed money because she was in college, had to pay for her apartment, didn't have a car, was unable to obtain a job without a car and could not rely on friends or family for money. (Id. at 162:15-8.)

Jane Doe admittedly contacted defendants to do a subsequent video shoot because she had a lot of money stolen from her placing her in financial straits. Thus, she made a second trip to San Diego where she shot another video. (Id. at 183:11 – 184:2.)

Jane Doe 22's concerns about distribution of the pornographic video were addressed by defendants telling her the video would only be released on DVD in Australia and New Zealand, so that ruled out other forms of distribution in other places. (Id. at 147:24 – 148:4, 153:3 – 7.) After speaking with the defendants, she committed to doing the video because of what they told her. (Id. at 169:7 – 11.) Defendants told Jane Doe 22 that the video was not going to be distributed in the United States and that it would only be distributed in Australia and New Zealand on DVD. Based upon that she felt her friends and family would not be going to Australia to buy pornography. (Id. at 152:11 – 20.) Had Jane Doe 22 known the video would be released online she would not have done the pornographic shoot. (Id. at 154:9 – 12; 155:25 – 156:3.)

The Defendants gave Jane Doe 22 information about references that she should contact and photos of other girls who appeared safe and smiling. (Id. at 152:4 – 7.) Before coming to San Diego, Jane Doe 22 called the references she had been provided by defendants. In the calls she was told not to worry about STDs because protection was being used. She was also told by the references that they had never seen anything online of themselves. They also reinforced the belief that the DVD would only be distributed in New Zealand and Australia. (Id. at 160:11 – 161:6.) At no time before shooting the video did Jane Doe 22 have any inkling that it would be released on the internet. (Id. at 154:12 – 15.)

Prior to shooting the video, defendants gave Jane Doe 22 documents that she signed. They didn't say review it. They said sign this. She did not review them thoroughly. She read a little bit but didn't get far because they were rushing along. (Id. 189: 1-20.) Jane Doe 22 recalls she was not given time to read the documents and was told that they were going to outline it for her, so she should just fill out the bottom now. (Id. 201:8 – 17.) Jane Doe 22 did not ask defendants to show her in any of the contracts that she signed where it said the videos would only be distributed on DVD in Australia or New Zealand, because they had programmed it in her head that they had a plan for them. She trusted that they wouldn't tell her not to read just to hurry up and sign it. (Id. at 217:4 – 16.) She specifically recalls she did not ask about distribution before signing the documents in the hotel room because she had already been told multiple times that the video would only be distributed in New Zealand or Australia on a DVD. (Id. at 213:13 – 20.) Jane Doe 22 was relying on the defendants to relate truthful information to her about distribution. (Id. at 214:13 – 16; 214:19 – 23; 214:25 – 215:7.)

Jane Doe 22 was not concerned about the words in the script that she read on camera because she trusted that the defendants were going to do what they said they would do with the footage. She just knew that they were going to put it on DVD in Australia. The fact the statement didn't say "BLL will only use this footage for DVD in Australia" didn't raise a red flag because she already had that in mind from what the defendants had told her. (Id. at 244:24 – 245:14; 245:15 – 16; 245:20 – 246:4; 246:6 – 22; 247:2 – 6; 248:7 – 14; 249:12 – 250:23.)

Jane Doe 22 recalls learning that her video was online in August 2015. She can't recall exactly how she learned about it but remembers receiving harassing messages thereafter. (Id. at 284:2 – 12.) She has been approached by people from her high school about having done a pornographic video and her ex-boyfriend would blackmail her by threatening to send the link to the video to everybody that they knew. (Id. at 193:19-22; 194:19-195:2.) She no longer has any of the messages she received because she deleted them out of shame and didn't want anyone to be able to see the message and find out something about them. (Id. at 26:20-26:5, 26:8, 26:11-19.)

Jane Doe 22 recalls communications via a Facebook post with someone named Ann Fairchild in which she was informed about Girls Do Porn and that there was a lawsuit. (Id. at 25:2 – 4; 25:13 – 26:1.)

Prior to 2015, Jane Doe had been treated by her family doctor for anxiety. He prescribed Lexapro for her. (Id. at 114:5-10; 115:9-14.) She only took Lexapro for a matter of months and was not actively treating at the time of the video shoot. (Id. at 115:17-25.) At some point following shooting of the video, Jane Doe 22 sought treatment for anxiety and depression. She cannot recall the name of the psychologist. (Id. at 116:4-16.) The reasons she saw a psychologist stem from the emotional distress she experienced in shooting the video. She's lost relationships, has a son whose father is unknown, feels hopeless about her future because people that she cares about have called her vile names, such as "whore" and "slut," telling her that she will never be anything more than that. She feels this was very damaging to her self-esteem causing her to go into depression and have anxiety attacks. She thinks she would still be in school, maybe not be a single parent and would be on a whole different path in life. She wouldn't be on the career path that she's currently on. In sum and substance, she feels the pomographic video shoots have ruined her life. (Id. at 116:4-16; 309:3-310:2.)

Jane Doe 22 attended college at Indiana University, South Bend, but dropped out before learning her videos were posted online. (Id. at 61:8 – 18.)

Currently, Jane Doe 22 is employed at a place called Cheetahs where she has worked as an entertainer since September 2018. (Id. at 97:8-18.) Previously, she worked as an entertainer at an establishment called Flashers commencing in September 2017. She left when it closed in 2018. (Id. at 102:10-18.) Before working at Flashers, she worked at Lippert Components as a customer service representative. Her duties involved order entry, taking phone calls and parts knowledge. She ceased working there in roughly September 2016. (Id. at 104:20-23; 105:7-21; 106:1-6.) Jane Doe 22 quit this job because she was in a bad place. She was distressed with people knowing about the videos. (Id. at 106:7-15.)

v. Defendants Use Shell Entities to Obfuscate their Corporate Relationships and Hide Assets

Defendants have constructed a complicated network of entities, transferred assets overseas, and kept scant corporate records. None of the Defendants could really explain the corporate structure; both Pratt and Wolfe pled ignorance on basic subjects that most small business owners or managers would know. Plaintiffs offered sufficient evidence to show that the various Defendant businesses and additional related entities operate together as essentially one unit.

1. Defendants Use Six Entities to Operate GirlsDoPorn.com

When Pratt first launched GirlsDoPorn.com, he did so through two entities: Clockwork Productions, Inc. and Bubblegum Films, Inc. These two original entities were later replaced by the BLL Media, Inc. enterprise. Wolfe was produced as the PMQ witness for all topics relating to the entities that run GirlsDoPorn, yet he lacked basic information and no one else was produced to explain the corporate structure.

Clockwork Productions, Inc. was incorporated by Kevin Holloway on November 29, 2006 in Nevada. (Ex. 1600.1 – 4.) Plaintiffs assert that Holloway started Clockwork Productions on Pratt's behalf due to Pratt's immigration status at the time; ⁵⁶ Defendants have not offered an alternative explanation. Clockwork Production's corporate filings list Holloway as president, secretary, treasurer, and director as of February 19, 2007. (Ex. 1600.1 – 4.) As of June 15, 2009, Pratt is listed as president, secretary, and director, yet Pratt claims to have no recollection of holding those positions. (Ex. 1660.5; Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 295:20 – 296:19.) Wiederhold was also listed as a director of Clockwork Productions as of that date. (Ex. 1660.8.) Holloway later replaced Pratt as the president, secretary, treasurer, and director of Clockwork Productions in 2014. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 303:19 – 304:16.)

Although Clockwork Productions was supposedly dissolved in 2013 (10/17/19 Trial Tr. 164:10 – 20), Defendants continued to list Clockwork Productions as the contracting party on ⁵⁶ (Wiederhold Depo. 335:15 – 23 ["[Q.] Why were you signing anything for Clockwork Productions in your mind?

[[]A.] At the time Michael asked me to sign it so he could start a processing account. He wasn't an American at the time and I was and he needed an American to create an account."].)

several Plaintiffs' Model/Talent Releases. (See, e.g., Exs. 34; 297.) Defendants were unable to explain.⁵⁷ (Pratt Depo. Vol. II, 436:15 – 441:5; 10/3/19 Trial Tr. 112:21 – 113:3.)

Bubblegum Films, Inc. was incorporated in Vanuatu on December 11, 2006. (Ex. 1377; Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 243:12 – 19.) The ownership of Bubblegum Films is uncertain. Pratt's verified discovery responses state unequivocally that he was the "sole owner" of Bubblegum Films. (Ex. $1377.)^{58}$

Bubblegum Films held the rights to the videos filmed for GirlsDoPorn and GirlsDoToys before those rights were transferred to Oh Well Media and Sidle Media, respectively, on November 6, 2016. (Exs. 3282; 3283.) Pratt conceded that he was the sole director of Bubblegum Films when all of its assets (the entire library of videos filmed for GDP and GDT) were assigned to other entities. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I 267:25 – 268:6.)⁵⁹

BLL Media, Inc., incorporated in California in 2013, currently produces the videos that appear on GirlsDoPorn.com. Pratt wholly owns BLL Media, Inc. indirectly through BLL Media Holdings, LLC. BLL Media, Inc. is managed by Pratt, employs all of the individuals who run the business, and holds most of the assets used in running GirlsDoPorn.com. "Clockwork Productions, Inc., and the services it provided were replaced and picked up by BLL Media, Inc., after it was incorporated." (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 114:10 - 17.)

⁵⁷ When asked about Clockwork Productions' relationship with BLL Media, Inc. and why Clockwork Productions appears on these documents, Pratt said he "would just be guessing." (Pratt Depo. Vol. II, 436:15 – 441:5.) When asked the same question at trial, Wolfe claimed that "there are a couple of contracts that were - - had errors on them, but they were since fixed or transferred, or there was a transfer agreement for them as well." (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 112:21 – 113:3.)

⁵⁹ In a DMCA take-down request submitted to MindGeek on April 25, 2016, "Jordan Powers," identifying himself as the "CEO of BUBBLEGUM FILMS / GIRLSDOPORN.COM." claims that Bubblegum Films "own[s] the exclusive copyrights" of the content on GirlsDoPorn.com. (Ex. 7006) [signature line on page 2 directs MindGeek to "DMCA@MOMPOV.COM"].)

BLL Media Holdings, LLC was formed in Nevada on February 5, 2013 and is wholly owned by Pratt. (Ex. 1168.) This entity apparently exists solely to hold BLL Media, Inc. and other assets.

Defendants created three new entities to operate GirlsDoPorn.com. The Court finds, that the purpose of creating these entities was to obfuscate Defendants' corporate status and relationships and to evade accountability for Defendants' wrongdoing.

The three entities are as follows:

(1) UHD Productions LLC is a Wyoming entity Defendants formed as the "new company for production." (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 115:27 – 116:6.) Yet UHD Productions has never had any employees. (Id. at 117:8 – 10.) Both Wolfe and Pratt claim to be unaware of who owns UHD Productions. (Id. at 116:23 – 26; Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 50:4 – 10.)

UHD Productions purports to be the contracting party on numerous Plaintiffs' documents. (JD 8 [Ex. 349] and JD 19 [Ex. 882].) According to Wolfe, Defendants began listing UHD Productions on their model contracts because "when the lawsuit hit, that prevented us from completing those things. But it was - - UHD was the production arm of the company." (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 109:20 – 110:1.) The UHD Productions, LLC name would not have been recognized. When asked whether UHD Productions operated out of the same physical office as BLL Media, Wolfe equivocated.⁶⁰

(2) EG Publications is a corporation that, according to Pratt, "just does our payroll, payroll for the company." (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 41:2 – 12.) According to Wolfe, EG Publications "was supposed to be kind of like an admin company," providing services for BLL Media, Inc. (10/3/19) Trial Tr. 114:19 - 115:2.) Yet EG Publications does not have any employees. (Id. at 117:5 - 7.) Despite being the PMQ for the issue, Wolfe claims he does not know who owns this entity and has no knowledge of the corporate structure. (Id. at 115:3-25, 117:1-4.)

⁶⁰ Wolfe responded, "I don't know technically where it would have operated out of, but some of these companies were set up when we were trying to fix things and errors like this, and then the lawsuit happened, and we didn't get time to finish all that, so it never really came to be." (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 116:7 – 20.)

Wolfe testified that EG Publications holds bank accounts where the money processed from GirlsDoPorn.com subscription sales is deposited. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 80:12-21.) The only evidence in the record indicates that EG Publications is wholly owned by BLL Media Holdings, LLC. (See Pratt Depo. Vol. III at 84:12-23 [discussing the assets he listed in his bankruptcy filing].)

(3) Oh Well Media Limited, a Vanuatu entity formed on September 4, 2015, is the final piece of the puzzle. (Ex. 3232.22 – 24 [minutes of first meeting referencing date of incorporation].) The ownership of this entity was disputed at trial. As of September 4, 2015, corporate documents show Pratt is the sole shareholder of Oh Well Media. (Ex. 3232.22 – 24 [minutes of first meeting showing resolution to transfer all shares of the company to Pratt].) Plaintiffs offered a share certificate and a Register of Members showing Pratt as sole shareholder. (Ex. 3232.25 – 27.) Pratt disputes that he owns Oh Well Media and claims that Kevin Holloway is the true owner. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 270:5 – 271:24.)

Defendants transferred ownership of all valuable assets related to GirlsDoPorn from Bubblegum Films and BLL Media, Inc. (two entities that Pratt owns) to Oh Well Media (an entity supposedly owned by Holloway). On November 6, 2015, an "Assignment of Assets" is signed purporting to transfer ownership of the rights of the videos Defendants produced for GDP, and the domain name GirlsDoPorn.com from Bubblegum Films to Oh Well Media Ltd. (Ex. 3282.)

BLL Media, Inc. also transferred video rights to Oh Well Media. Defendants produced one Assignment of Assets dated October 1, 2014. (Ex. 3320.1 – 5.) This transfer is dubious on its face. First, Oh Well Media did not exist at that time and would not be formed for nearly a year. Second, this assignment purports to transfer the rights to at least five videos that were shot in 2015. (Ex. 3320.4.)

The more fundamental problem is that the record contains no evidence that consideration was paid to the assignors, which means that Pratt has purportedly transferred his life's work from an entity he owned to an entity that he did not own without receiving anything in return. Pratt contends that he received a written licensing agreement, but failed to produce it at trial. (Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 99:5 - 12.)

⁶¹ Pratt claims that he does not own Oh Well Media, but he also uses the entity interchangeably with himself and with his companies, BLL Media, Inc. and BLL Media Holdings, LLC. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 60:21-61:25, 57:3-10 [specifying that when he says they produce content for "ourselves," he means for Oh Well Media].) He is unsure whether BLL Media or Oh Well Media owns the GirlsDoPorn.com domain. (Id. at 60:21-61:4.) He is unsure whether he is recruiting models on behalf of both BLL Media and Oh Well Media (Id. at 64:2-14.)

Pratt claims that he believes Kevin Holloway owns Oh Well Media. 62 (Id. at 62:7 – 13.) He testified that he has never had contact with anyone at Oh Well Media because Wolfe handles those communications, but that if he did, it would be with Kevin Holloway. (Id. at 57:11 - 58:7.) Pratt stated that Oh Well Media operates out of Vanuatu but that he produces all the content for that entity. (Id. at 64:18-65:15.) He claims that no one from Oh Well Media contacts him requesting he produce content: "We just take it upon ourselves. We know what we're doing." (Id. at 65:22 – 66:2.) Pratt states that a contract exists between Oh Well Media and BLL Media giving ownership of the videos to Oh Well Media and that he signed on behalf of BLL Media but does not know who signed on behalf of Oh Well Media. (Id. at 66:4 – 24 ["guessing" that Holloway would be the signatory].)

Pratt testified that he does not know either why Bubblegum Films transferred the rights to all of the videos to Oh Well Media and Sidle Media or what assets Bubblegum Films received in return for assigning the video rights. (Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 133:25 – 136:9.)

2. Defendants Use Five Entities to Operate GirlsDoToys.com

M1M Media, Inc. is a California company owned by Pratt and Wolfe 50/50 set up for the purpose of operating the website GirlsDoToys.com. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 202:9 – 204:4; Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 39:9 - 40:10 [testifying he and Wolfe have a joint partnership called M1M Media, Inc. or M1M Media, LLC, but does not know which].)

Merro Media, Inc. is 100% owned by Merro Media Holdings, LLC (Ex. 1123.) Wolfe is Sole Director, Chairperson, Chief Executive Officer and President, Chief Financial Officer, and Secretary. [Ex. 1111].) Wolfe claims to provide consulting services to BLL Media, Inc. through Merro Media, Inc. yet he is unaware of any written agreements between those entities regarding those services. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 127:4-10.)

Merro Media Holdings, LLC, which is solely owned by Wolfe, is a holding company that owns Merro Media, Inc. (Ex. 1058; 1075; 1529.)

Hayst Holdings, Limited is a New Zealand entity through which Wolfe provides "technical" services to BLL Media.

Sidle Media Limited is a Vanuatu entity which owns the domain name GirlsDoToys.com and holds the rights to the videos Defendants produced for GirlsDoToys. Wolfe claims he does not own Sidle Media and does not know who does. (10/7/19 Trial Tr. 38:6 – 7; 10/3/19 Trial Tr. 106:3 – 18.) Pratt claims he does not own Sidle Media. (Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 75:12 – 16.)

According to the share certificates in evidence, Sidle Media is owned by Oh Well Media and Torque Asset Management in equal parts. (Ex. 1673.125 – 126.) And, as already explained, Pratt owns Oh Well Media. Wolfe owns Torque Asset Management. (Ex. 1673.136.)

Bubblegum Films appears to have transferred rights in GDT videos to Sidle Media on November 6, 2015. (Ex. 3283.) BLL Media also transferred assets to Sidle Media. (Ex. 3320.6 – 10 [Assignment of Assets dated Oct. 20, 2015].)

There is no evidence that any consideration was provided in these transactions, nor any evidence showing a legitimate reason for the transfer.⁶³ While Wolfe agreed that he and Pratt indirectly own the entity that holds the rights to the girlsdotoys.com domain, M1M Media, that that the video would only be released in foreign countries, not the United States." (11/7/19 Trial Tr. 100:24 – 101:2; 103:7 – 8.) As in the recruiting process for GirlsDoPorn and GirlsDoToys, Wiederhold never mentioned the website MomPOV.com (Id. at 103:25–104:1) and told Ms. Jeffrey that the video would not be released online. (Id. at 103:11 – 13.)

As in the shoots for GirlsDoPorn, Wiederhold rushed Ms. Jeffrey to sign documents quickly, at the last minute, just prior to starting the shoot. (Id. at 102:23 – 24.) Wiederhold represented to Ms. Jeffrey that she would receive $1,500 for doing a single video, but after the video was finished, he informed her that she was expected to do a second video to earn the $1,500. (Id. at 101:17–102:5; 104:25–105:14; 105:4–19; 106: 5–13; 107:6 – 108:10.) Finally, when Ms. Jeffrey discovered the video was online, she contacted Wiederhold, begging him to remove it. (Id. at 112:4–15.) Like Pratt, Wolfe, and Garcia, his response was, "Sorry, there's nothing I can do" and hung up on her. (Id. at 112:24–113:2.)

The Court concludes that MomPOV's business and recruiting practices are indicative of a common modus operandi between MomPOV and Girls Do Porn. The Court finds that they involve common ownership and personnel and constitute a single business enterprise.

b. Domi Publications, LLC and BLL Media, Inc. were Commingled Until Very Recently

Many of the assets used in the operation of Defendants' three pornographic websites are commingled or were commingled during the relevant time period. Though Domi has attempted to separate out the assets related to the operations of MomPOV.com (which was launched in 2011 and existed under the Bubblegum Films/BLL Media umbrella for several years) in an effort to claim that it is entirely separate from GirlsDoPorn and GirlsDoToys, most of this effort came long after Domi was formed on February 20, 2015. (Ex. 1528.) It is not until 2018 that most of the assets related to MomPOV were actually severed from those of the rest of the enterprise.

The MOMPOV.COM trademark was originally registered by BLL Media Holdings, LLC on July 29, 2014. (Ex. 5001.9.) It was not until January 27, 2018 (1.5 years after this lawsuit began) that the trademark was transferred to Domi Publications. (Ex. 5001.3.)

According to the GoDaddy records in evidence, the MomPOV.com domain was first held by Wiederhold's personal account starting April 13, 2010.⁶⁴ (Ex. 1744.1–2.) Records show the domain in Pratt's BLL Media account in January 2013. (See Ex. 1744.98.) Pratt's account renewed its ownership for this domain on April 23, 2015. (Ex. 1744.1011.) On April 25, 2017, Weiderhold created a new account in his own name but using "domipublications" as the username. (Ex. 1744.541–542.) On February 7, 2018, the domain was finally transferred from Pratt's account into the account Wiederhold created for "domipublications.com." (Ex. 1744.547; 1744.693.)

The only account that the record shows was segregated in a timely manner after Domi was formed is the CCBill account for credit card payment processing. The payments for subscriptions to MomPOV were processed through the same CCBill account until March 31, 2015 when Wiederhold created a separate account for Domi. (Ex. 5004.2; see also Ex. 1511.113:3 – 9 [previously, MomPOV and GirlsDoPorn each had a sub-account in the CCBill account owned by Pratt].)

Ms. Moser testified that at the BLL Media offices, credit cards for different companies were "strewn around" and that she recalls holding a debit card for Domi Publications at one time. (Id. at 18:3-19:9.)

Defendants have joint defense agreement and have asserted a common interest privilege. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 31:24 – 28.) And, all Defendants were jointly represented by the same law firm in this lawsuit until October 19, 2016, with managing agents of each entity presumably consenting to the joint representations. (ROA No. 52.)

Most of the entities list the same address on documentation, which is not a place of operation but just a P.O. Box. (See, e.g., Pratt Depo. Vol. 1, 41:22 – 42:13 [EG Publications lists 113 West G Street, Suite 123, San Diego, California as its address. But Pratt explains, "[t]hat's just our P.O. Box. I mean it is probably the mailing address, but we didn't operate out of there." Instead, the entity "probably" operated out of 1620 Fifth Avenue, Suite 675, San Diego, California].

⁶⁴ The account also holds or held many domains clearly related to GirlsDoPorn, such as REALGIRLSDOPORN.COM, GIRLSDOPORNPICS.COM, GDPBLOG.COM, GIRLSDOPORNFREE.COM, and GDPGIFS.COM (both before and after Domi Publications came into existence). (Ex. 1744.1–15.)

As late as 2017, both GirlsDoPorn and MomPOV listed the same Custodian of Records—BUBBLEGUMFILMS INC in Vanuatu—on their websites in compliance with 18 U.S.C. § 2257. (Ex. 365.2 [GirlsDoPorn.com]; Ex. 1573 [MomPOV.com].).

Until Wiederhold moved to Las Vegas in 2014, MomPOV was run out of the same offices as GirlsDoPorn. Approximately 100 of MomPOV.com's videos were shot in San Diego. (Wiederhold Depo. 368:21 – 370:7; Ex. 1511.369 – 1511.371.)

Based on this evidence, the Court determines that MomPOV and Domi were substantially intertwined with Defendants' various GDP entities as part of a common pornography enterprise.

c. Domi Publications, LLC is a Continuation of the Entity that Previously Operated MomPOV.com

The issue of who "owned" MomPOV at any given time was contested at trial. The position taken by Defendants at trial was essentially that, prior to the formation of Domi, MomPOV was owned by an informal "joint partnership" between Pratt and Wiederhold that was never reduced to writing or formalized in any way. (Wiederhold Depo. 41:1–20; Wolfe Depo. as PMQ of BLL Media, Inc., Vol. II, 311:17 – 312:20.)

However, much of the other evidence discussed above indicates that MomPOV was, for all intents and purposes, owned and controlled by Pratt's BLL Media/Bubblegum Films/Clockwork Productions enterprise. (see Wolfe Depo. Vol. II, 311:17 – 312:21 [Wolfe, as PMQ for BLL Media, Inc. (and all other entities aside from Domi) testifying that "MomPOV may have been under BLL Media"].)

The Court need not decide precisely who owned MomPOV prior to the formation of Domi Publications because the Court finds that all Defendants, including Domi Publications, are alter egos of each other and otherwise jointly and severally liable for all harms suffered by Plaintiffs. Even if the transfer of assets from the purported joint venture was categorized as a sale of assets, the evidence indicates that Domi was a mere continuation of the existing enterprise to produce videos for and to market and sell subscriptions to MomPOV.com. The joint venture did not receive any consideration for the transfers of its assets. Notably, many of these transfers did not occur until three years after Domi was incorporated and well after this lawsuit was filed. This includes the transfer of the MomPOV trademark and domain name to Domi Publications in 2018.

Whether Pratt's ownership stake in MomPOV prior to Domi was as an individual or as one half of a "joint partnership" is of no moment because Pratt has always been at the center of the joint venture and undisputedly was entitled to 50% of the profits generated by MomPOV at all times.

Douglas Wiederhold is not a defendant in this case. The Court finds that Wiederhold's conduct as an employee of Defendant Bubblegum Films, Clockwork Productions, Inc., and Defendant BLL Media (from 2007 to 2015) and his conduct as 50% owner and primary manager of Defendant Domi Publications (from 2015 to the present) is evidence of alter ego among all Defendants.

> d. Defendants Use Affiliate Marketing to Cross Advertise for the Benefit of All of Pratt's Websites

Defendants employ "affiliate marketing" services offered by CCBill, Defendants' credit card payment processor, to advertise for and increase web-traffic to their subscription websites. By participating in CCBill's affiliate program, Defendants pay a commission to third parties each time an internet user purchases a subscription on one of Defendants' websites after following a link from that third party's affiliate site.⁶⁵ When CCBill processes a subscription fee that originated from an affiliate site, CCBill sends half of the fee to the affiliate site and half to Defendants' account.66 It is undisputed that affiliate advertising increases traffic to Defendants' websites and the number of subscriptions sold. 67

27 28 66 (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 78:12-79:2; Vol. II, 397:12-24; Vol. III, 130:9-132;8.)

65 (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 187-189 [Wolfe describing "the affiliate marketing model"].)

⁶⁷ When asked about why Domi had not attempted to remove a link that said "MomPOV" on an affiliate site, Wiederhold stated, "I'll take all the links I can get. [] Q: You'll take all the links you can get why? A. It's traffic. Q. Okay and how does that benefit Domi Publications? A. More traffic, more sales." (Wiederhold Depo. 261:6-12.)

Typically, affiliate websites contain pictures or video clips of Defendants' content, including images and videos of the Plaintiffs.⁶⁸ Defendants permit affiliate sites to partially display their content provided they include links to Defendants' websites.⁶⁹ Simply put, Defendants pay hundreds of thousands of dollars in commissions each year to affiliate sites for advertising and directing internet traffic to Defendants' websites in order to increase subscription sales.⁷⁰

While Wolfe, Wiederhold, and Walters⁷¹ all testified that they "couldn't control" their affiliates, the Court is not persuaded.⁷² Defendants can remove an affiliate from its affiliate

Pratt estimated that 300-500 affiliates had signed up to promote GirlsDoPorn.com over the years. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 77:13-17.)

⁶⁸ (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 189:14-18 ["Q. Okay. But the purpose of the affiliate marketing model is that users can go see three to five-minute clips of videos that then act as advertisement for the subscription site? [Wolfe]. As a summary, I believe so, yeah."].)

Pefendants' expert, Lawrence Walters, Esq., testified that "pay sites have no ability generally to know even who their affiliates are or what particular websites are being used to promote the pay sites[.]" (Walters Depo. 84:1-4.) This statement, however, is contrary to the testimony of Wiederhold and Wolfe. (See infra notes 15 – 20.) The statement is also undermined by Walters' further testimony that pay sites "have no incentive to identify the promotional tools that are being used by affiliates; that they are focused on revenue generation and on traffic. And in the absence of something like a Complaint or some indicia of fraud or something unusual with the revenue that's being sent to the pay site, that there would - - based on industry standards - - be no reason for pay sites to monitor or control or even know about the activities of the third-party affiliates." (Walters Depo. 83:21-84:13.) While the Court does not doubt that members of the industry typically make little to no effort to exercise any control over affiliates, the evidence does not support a finding that a pay site is unable to do so.

⁷² (See Wiederhold Depo. 346:15-17 ["There's like a separate affiliate report and then spectrum updates, sales, check amounts."]; 348:6-12 ["Q: On the separate affiliate report that we are discussing, does it provide the amount of money that CCBill has paid out to those separate affiliates? A: I believe so."]; 356:14-15 ["As pertaining to traffic incoming to MomPOV.com, that I am able to look up the analytics."]; 227:25-228:2 ["There's internal analytics, we can see the stats or sales generated by outside parties and [CCBill] pay them and they pay us what's left over."].) Defendants received regular reports from CCBill showing revenues generated by subscriptions. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 85:4-22.) CCBill tracks the URL that links the subscriber to GirlsDoPorn.com for each subscription sold, so one could, for example, determine how many purchases stemmed from any particular video on Pornhub. (Pratt Depo. Vol. II, 424:2-25:22.)

program through CCBill, thereby eliminating any incentive for the affiliate to continue advertising for Defendants.⁷³ Defendants have de-affiliated from such websites in the past.⁷⁴ Defendants can and have used DMCA takedown requests to stop third party websites from using their content. ⁷⁵ Finally, Defendants can enforce their ownership rights against an affiliate by suing for trademark or copyright infringement for use of material owned by Defendants. The fact is, Defendants choose not to exercise control over their affiliates because the affiliates are providing a valuable service by directing web traffic to Defendants' websites.⁷⁶

Some of the affiliate sites displaying Plaintiffs' images link to GirlsDoPorn.com, some link to MomPOV.com, and some cross-advertise by linking to both websites. (See Exs. 1525 [Girls-Do-Porn.com]; 1746 [Imagepost.com].) One site, Girls-Do-Porn.com, was a dedicated affiliate site for GirlsDoPorn.com in that it exclusively shows images of GirlsDoPorn models, including all of the Plaintiffs with the exception of Jane Does 4 and 8. (Ex. 1525.) Both Pratt and Wolfe were aware of this affiliate site. (Pratt Depo. Vol. [Dec. 6, 2018] 212:14 – 18; 10/7/19 Trial Tr. 87:23 – 25; 102:22 – 103:6.)⁷⁷ Girls-Do-Porn.com contained links to GirlsDoPorn as well as other pornographic websites, including a link that says "MomPOV" (Ex. 1525), which links to MomPOV.net—a dedicated affiliate site for MomPOV.com containing content from, advertisements for, and links to ⁷³ (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 191:19-25 ["Q. If one of these registered affiliates used GirlsDoPorn content on its affiliate website and then directed traffic to some other porn site, would BLL Media send a DMCA request, telling them to stop using the content that BLL Media has the right to? [Wolfe]. I believe so, and we'd probably delete your affiliate account too."]; 196:23-197:4 ["Q. But BLL Media had the ability to close those accounts? [Wolfe]: By either BLL Media or CCBILL, correct."].)

⁷⁴ "Q. To your knowledge, as the PMQ of BLL Media and its DMCA processes, has BLL Media, Inc., ever had a complaint that it sent to a third-party affiliate website for the way it was using its content? [...] [A]: I believe there has been, but I can't recall of anything specific. But I believe so. There's definitely been affiliate accounts closed, but I don't recall the reason." (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 195:26-196:13.)

⁷⁵ Wolfe testified, "If somebody - - if anybody took our content and put a link to a different website on our content, then yes, we would DMCA them." (10/7/19 Trial Tr. 101:27-102:8; see also Ex. 5002.954-963 [DMCA takedown requests].)

⁷⁶ "Q. And in discussing this person's use of MomPov.net, you and Mike determined that it was beneficial to Domi Publications so you would allow him to continue to do it? [...] A. It was [...] sending us traffic, so as long as it was helping us... it was something we were willing to let go for the time being. [...] Q. Because it generated subscribers for Domi Publications? A. Yes." (Wiederhold Depo. 237:14-238:2.)

MomPOV.com, along with a link to GirlsDoPorn.com. (Ex. 1532.) Wiederhold testified that he was aware of MomPOV.net and even considered taking action against it but decided not to do so because it directed traffic to MomPOV.com and therefore provided a net benefit.⁷⁸

At trial, no documentation related to Defendants' Affiliate Program with CCBill was produced,⁷⁹ so there was no evidence to show how much of Defendants' revenue is derived from a particular Affiliate. Pratt testified that the affiliate Forum.DoPorn generated approximately $5,000 in sales per week and received $2,500 per week in affiliate fees. (Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 127:5 – 9.)

4. Defendants' Managers and Employees Provide Services for All Three Websites and Transactions are Not Arms-Length

Pratt supervises and manages every aspect of the production, publication, and advertising of videos for GirlsDoPorn.com since the website launched in 2007. (Pratt Depo. Vol. II, 51:4 – 52:19.) Pratt has also co-managed all operations related to GirlsDoToys.com. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 202:9 – 203:18.) Pratt was involved in the operation of MomPOV when it first launched in 2010 and Pratt paid all production costs for MomPOV until 2014. (Ex. 1511.52:6 – 9.) Now, although Pratt draws a salary from Domi, he provides no services to Domi. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 254:3 – 255:5; Vol. III, 35:18 – 36:6.)

Wolfe began providing services to Pratt in 2011. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 9:6 – 9.) He provides BLL Media, Inc. with "consulting services" through Merro Media and "marketing" services through Hayst Holdings. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 25:13 – 26:2.) He handles various aspects of business operations and payroll for Defendants. (Pratt Depo. Vol. I, 52:20 – 53:4, 234:13 – 235:15.) Wolfe

⁷⁸ When asked about MomPOV.net, Weiderhold stated, "... the first time I found out about it I wasn't too happy and I did consult Mike about it." Mike's take was, "As long as they're sending us traffic, it's a win-win." (Wiederhold Depo. 234:1-9.)

MomPOV.com at a given time and what percentage of the revenue came from a particular affiliate (or affiliates in general) but has not done so. (Wiederhold Depo. 305:14-306:3 ["Q. Does CCBill have a portal that you can access to see how many transactions that it's done for your – your website? A. Yes. Q. It has a running ledger of all the transactions? A. Yes. Q. Does it also provide a breakdown of when an affiliate payment is being made with regard to a transaction that's made? [objection] A. I believe all the analytics outlines pretty much all of the transactions and where they go and who they came from."].)

co-managed the operations of GirlsDoToys.com. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 202:9 – 203:18.) Wolfe was produced as the PMQ for BLL Media's operations. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 88:1 – 7.)

The record indicates that Wolfe has provided numerous services for Domi Publications or MomPOV.com. (Wolfe Depo. Vol. II, 150:1 – 151:20 [Wolfe testifying that he helped troubleshoot issues with the MomPOV.com website].) Wiederhold testified that Wolfe provided administrative services, including handling billing issues, for MomPOV.com "off and on from the beginning" and that Domi has never paid him for any of those services. Wiederhold testified "if it's Michael's responsibility and he didn't want to do it, he would just have Matt do it."

Garcia is the male performer and casting director for GirlsDoPorn. (Pratt Depo. Vol. II,

Wiederhold worked with Pratt to produce videos for GirlsDoPorn.com since the site launched until early 2012. (Ex. 1511.50–51.) He was an employee on BLL Media, Inc.'s payroll until July 2015. (Ex. 1677.446.) Wiederhold was listed as a "Director" for Clockwork Productions, Inc. (Ex. 1660.8) and signed a CCBill contract on behalf of that entity. (Ex. 1511.441.) Wiederhold and Pratt began producing content for MomPOV in 2010, they built the website together, and then the website launched in 2011. Wiederhold runs the majority of the day-to-day operations for MomPOV.

Moser worked for BLL Media as an administrative assistant starting in March 2015. (9/20/19 Trial Tr. 61:14 – 19.) She organized contracts, receipts, and expenses, and performed QuickBooks and payroll. (Id. at 62:24 – 63:4.) She testified that she recalls doing some work for Domi Publications for which she was not separately paid. (9/23/19 Trial Tr. 175:16 – 176:5 [she sent Wiederhold a bill but never followed up because "Matt said to let it go."].) Ms. Moser also testified that when Wolfe created for her a diagram of all Defendants' relevant entities, he included Domi Publications. (9/20/19 Trial Tr. 103:16 – 24.)

Gyi worked for BLL Media from November 2015 through April or May 2017 as a camera operator shooting videos for GirlsDoPorn and GirlsDoToys. (8/29/19 Trial Tr. 73:10 – 22.) He recalls creating a highlight reel for MomPOV.com and uploading it to the various tube sites. (Id. at evidence in the record to establish that consideration was given. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 26:24 – 27:9.)

What this all means can be distilled as follows: Defendants ran a web of interrelated entities without observing corporate separation or formalities and with Pratt and a handful of individuals under him running the show as a common enterprise. Assets and employees were interchangeable and shuffled between the entities without consideration.

5. The Record Shows Pratt's Intent to Use the Entities to Escape Liability and Protect his Assets

Defendants have provided no valid business-related explanation for their transfers of valuable assets to entities in located in Vanuatu in the face of evidence suggesting that the assets were transferred in order to place them beyond the reach of any creditors. The Court is not persuaded by Defendants' claim that these transfers were effectuated to fix "mistakes" in the "corporate structure" and that "this is how it was supposed to be all along."

Wolfe conceded that he wired funds from BLL Media to Vanuatu using his company Hayst Holdings. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 66:6 - 67:16.) These payments were made to Melanesian Business Executive Corporate Services (MBECS) (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 39:17 – 41:2), yet Wolfe claims he does not know anyone who works there and does not know whether he emailed with anyone. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 41:3 - 42:11.)⁸⁰

Wolfe claims these payments are pursuant to the license agreement between BLL Media and Oh Well Media—the license agreement was not produced at trial. (10/2/19 Trial Tr. 64:3 – 66:15.) Plaintiffs, on the other hand, assert that these payments were made to Melanesian Business Corporate Services to keep the Vanuatu entities open. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 96:24 – 97:3; 104:16 – 19.)

That Defendants' web of offshore entities was created to escape liability is bolstered by a laundry list of other actions. Pratt sold his house and his car to ensure, in his words, "the models won't get a dime." (09/23/19 Trial Tr. at 60:15-19 [Moser also testified that Pratt asked her to])destroy documents for the same purpose].)

Pratt filed bankruptcy in January 2019. (09/23/19 Trial Tr. at 65:13 – 18) Pratt admitted in his third deposition that his bankruptcy schedules stated—under penalty of periury—that all of his companies had a net worth of zero, (Pratt Depo. Vol. III, 83:24 – 84:23 (BLL Media, Inc., EG Publications, and M1M Media have no reasonable value]; 108:10 – 109:10 [Domi has a value of $0].) Pratt voluntarily dismissed the bankruptcy approximately one month after filing.

Through counsel, Pratt was served with a notice to appear. Yet when Plaintiffs sought to call him to testify, Pratt's counsel announced that he had left the country around the beginning of trial but counsel did not know his whereabouts. Wolfe testified that Pratt was "on holiday" but also did not know his location. (10/01/19 Trial Tr. at 209:19 – 211:16.) In light of Pratt's failure to appear, this Court issued an arrest warrant, but he never appeared.

According to Wolfe's testimony and Defendants' counsel, Pratt, presumably after he left the country, transferred his interest in Domi Publications, At trial, Defendants produced neither an agreement evidencing this transfer nor evidence of consideration Pratt received.

III. LEGAL AUTHORITIES AND FINDINGS

A. Defendants are Liable for Fraud or Deceit

California law permits a person injured by fraud to seek damages: "One who willfully deceives another with intent to induce him to alter his position to his injury or risk, is liable for any damage which he thereby suffers." (Civ. Code § 1709.) The California Civil Code identifies four species of fraud or deceit that can form the basis of a cause of action:

1. The suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true; 2. The assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true; 3. The suppression of a fact, by one who is bound to disclose it, or who gives information of other facts which are likely to mislead for want of communication of that fact; or,

4. A promise, made without any intention of performing it.

(Civ. Code § 1710.) Plaintiffs assert four causes of action that sound in fraud or deceit: Intentional Misrepresentation (First Cause of Action); Fraudulent Concealment (Second Cause of Action);

False Promise (Third Cause of Action); and Negligent Misrepresentation (Fourth Cause of Action).

The Court finds Defendants are liable on each of these claims.

i. Defendants Misrepresented Material Facts

An action for deceit can be based upon "[t]he suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who does not believe it to be true; or [t]he assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true[.]" (Civ. Code § 1710, subd. (1), (2).)

"The fact represented or suppressed, allegedly constituting fraud, is deemed material if it relates to a matter of substance and directly affects the purpose of the party deceived in entering into the contract." (Thomas v. Hawkins (1950) 96 Cal.App.2d 377.) "What the parties deem material will be accepted by the courts as such." (Ashburn v. Miller (1958) 161 Cal.App.2d 71, 79 citing Rest. of Torts, § 538, p. 86; Prosser on Torts (2d Ed.), p. 555.) "A misrepresentation is judged to be material if a reasonable man would attach importance to its existence or nonexistence in determining his choice of action in the transaction in question." (Engalla v. Permanente Med. Grp., Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 977.)

Here, as set forth above, there is ample evidence that Defendants and their agents deliberately misrepresented material facts to each Plaintiff, namely: (a) that her video would not be posted on the internet or made available in the United States; (b) that it would only be sold on DVD in limited overseas venues (such as direct sale to a private collector in Australia); (c) that her name and personal information would be protected; and (d) that Defendants had never had an issue with models' videos or identities coming to light—it simply had never happened.

Defendants clearly knew that these representations were false. Defendants were also plainly aware that the misrepresented facts were material: most prospective models, including the Plaintiffs here, specifically expressed their concerns about distribution. In fact, Defendants' entire recruitment model and efforts, from the initial advertisement through filming and post-production, were designed to assuage these concerns through false information and deception. Accordingly, the Court concludes that Defendants' conduct was intentional.

ii. Defendants Concealed Material Facts

"The suppression of a fact, by one who is bound to disclose it, or who gives information of other facts which are likely to mislead for want of communication of that fact" constitutes actual fraud. (Civ. Code § 1710, subd. (3); 5 Witkin, Cal. Procedure (4th ed. 1997) Pleading, § 678.) The trial record establishes that Defendants did not disclose the following facts to Plaintiffs:

- (1) that Defendants own the subscription websites GirlsDoPorn.com and GirlsDoToys.com, which have more than 15,000 subscribers, and that the videos are posted on these sites;
- (2) that Defendants have always only published videos online (never on a DVD);
- (3) that Defendants use affiliate marketing and other advertising strategies to maximize public exposure and viewership of their videos and increase traffic to their websites;
- (4) that Defendants routinely publish 5- to 7-minute clips of their videos on popular free websites such as Pornhub.com, YouPorn.com, and XVideo.com;
- (5) that numerous websites host forums on which anonymous users identify women who film pornographic videos, and then find and post their names, personal information, pictures, and social medial links;
- (6) that many women who have filmed a video with Defendants have been identified on these websites and that there are multiple running lists of Defendants' models' names linked to the episode numbers of their videos;
- (7) that many women who filmed with Defendants later complained about being harassed after their videos were released online, including their videos being sent directly to their family and friends;
- (8) that Defendants routinely decline to take any action to protect the names and personal information of their models, have no intention of doing so, and indeed directly profit from disseminating the models' identities to their relations, friends, and to the public;
- (9) that the agreed-upon amount of pay for filming a video was subject to change at Defendants' sole discretion upon a model's arrival in San Diego, and may be reduced by hundreds or thousands of dollars; and
- (10) that Plaintiffs' faces would be clearly visible during the video, but that the male actor's face would never appear in the video.

An affirmative duty to disclose may arise under several circumstances. Such duty can arise "when the defendant had exclusive knowledge of material facts not known to the plaintiff [and] when the defendant actively conceals a material fact from the plaintiff. . . ." (LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 336 [quoting Heliotis v. Schuman (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 646, 651].)⁸¹ "[A] disparity in knowledge may impose an affirmative duty of disclosure" on the party

Section 551(2) of the Restatement (Second) of Torts, provides: "(2) One party to a business transaction is under a duty to exercise reasonable care to disclose to the other before the transaction is consummated... (e) facts basic to the transaction, if he knows that the other is about to enter into it under a mistake as to them, and that the other, because of the relationship between them, the customs of the trade or other objective circumstances, would reasonably expect a disclosure of those facts."

with superior knowledge. (Butcher v. Truck Ins. Exch. (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 1442, 1464-65.)82 Moreover, a party which undertakes to disclose or provide information cannot do so in a selective, self-serving manner: It must disclose enough information so that its representations are accurate and not misleading.

Defendants' affirmative duty to disclose these facts arises due to Defendants' far superior and exclusive knowledge of the adult entertainment industry and their own business strategies and practices. Defendants knew that Plaintiffs were young (Defendants recruit and only consider women between ages 18 and 22) and had no experience in the adult entertainment industry (it is Defendants' practice to only hire women who have never appeared in a pornographic video before). At the time they were recruited by Defendants, Plaintiffs could not have known which websites Defendants own and operate because Defendants maintained a business policy and practice of never disclosing that information. Plaintiffs could not have known that Defendants intended to publish and aggressively market the video on dozens of websites in an effort to maximize viewership because Defendants told Plaintiffs an entirely different story and hired reference women to confirm the cover story. Plaintiffs all testified that, prior to filming, they had never heard of PornWikiLeaks and had no idea that such websites existed and targeted women who filmed videos with Defendants. Defendants were aware of these websites and knew exactly what occurred on them. Defendants were aware of their superior knowledge with respect to the Plaintiffs and deliberately exploited that disparity to the Plaintiffs' detriment.

An affirmative duty to disclose also arises "when the defendant makes partial representations but also suppresses some material facts." (LiMandri, 52 Cal.App.4th at p. 336.) "One who is asked for or volunteers information must be truthful, and the telling of a half-truth calculated to deceive is fraud." (Cicone v. URS Corp. (1996) 183 Cal.App.3d at 194, 201; see also Paper Savers, Inc. v. Nacsa (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1090, 1104 [collecting cases] ["the extent of an insurance agent's duty depends on the nature of the interaction between the agent and the insured and the representations the agent made regarding coverage when discussing the policy."]; Fanucci v. Allstate Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal. 2009) 638 F. Supp. 2d 1125, 1143 [reasonable reliance may be found where the insured specifically told insurance agent that he wanted an umbrella policy and the agent advised the insured on which policy to buy, holding himself out as having special knowledge [this is despite the insured being an attorney and despite the policy being relatively clear].)

The Court finds that Defendants owed an affirmative duty based on their own actions and representations in their interactions with Plaintiffs. By volunteering detailed information about their distribution process and channels and the availability of the video, Defendants assumed an obligation to tell the truth. Defendants could not conceal material information that would undermine these representations and expose them as false and misleading. In answering Plaintiffs' questions about distribution and who would be able to see the video, they had to respond truthfully.

As each Plaintiff stated in her trial testimony, the facts that Defendants concealed were material and would have changed her decision if she had known the truth. Defendants knew that these facts would be important to Plaintiffs because of their business model and scheme to solicit first-time models who would never "do porn" again; most prospective recruits, including the Plaintiffs here, posed the same basic set of questions and concerns relating to whether the videos could be discovered. In addition, most women asked these very questions, or, alternatively, Defendants had received enough complaints from prior models to know that information about distribution, marketing, model identification, and harassment were critical to the women targeted by their scheme. Defendants intentionally withheld and actively concealed such information in order to obtain Plaintiffs consent to film a pornographic video. The Court therefore finds that Defendants are liable for fraudulent concealment.

iii. Defendants Made False Promises

"Promissory fraud' is a subspecies of an action for fraud and deceit. A promise to do something necessarily implies the intention to perform; hence, where a promise is made without such intention, there is an implied misrepresentation of fact that may be actionable fraud." (Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 638 [citing Union Flower Market, Ltd. v. Southern California Flower Market, Inc. (1938) 10 Cal.2d 671, 676, 76 P.2d 503; Civ.Code, § 1710, subd. (4); 5 Witkin, Summary of Cal.Law, § 685, pp. 786–87].)

Detrimental reliance on a false promise is shown when the misrepresentations were made at a time when the promisor "had no coercive power over" the promisee and the promisee "was free to decline the offered position." (Lazar, 12 Cal. 4th at p. 642 ["Rykoff used misrepresentations to induce Lazar to change employment, a result Rykoff presumably could not have achieved truthfully (because Lazar had required assurances the Rykoff position would be secure and would involve significant increases in pay)."].)

Defendants made at least three types of false promises here.

First, Defendants falsely promised Plaintiffs that Defendants would not put their videos online despite having every intention to do so. Indeed, Wolfe testified that Defendants' only method of distributing pornographic videos was online and that Defendants had never distributed the videos anywhere other than the internet, by DVD or otherwise. Wolfe also testified that Defendants publish clips of each video on free websites and use internet affiliate marketing to spread the video to as many people as possible. Each Plaintiff testified that she would not have made the video if she had known that the Defendants intended to publish the video online and intended to heavily market the video to maximize the number of viewers.

Second, Defendants promised they would protect Plaintiffs' identities, personal information, and privacy. In fact, Defendants had no intention to do so and did just the opposite. Instead, Defendants were aware of and profited handsomely from the internet forums in which anonymous users post the name, personal information, and social media links of every single model whose video was published on GirlsDoPorn.com. The evidence at trial showed that Pratt owned PornWikiLeaks.com from November 2015 until August 2016 and that the lists of GDP model names posted on the site were actively maintained during this time.

Defendants further knew that people frequently posted models' names in the comments to the videos published on Defendants' Pornhub channel but Defendants did not take any action to delete those comments. The fact that the documents Defendants give to women to sign ostensibly provide the right to "exploit my name real or fictitious" further demonstrates that Defendants have no intention to honor their promises to protect women's privacy. Defendants (but not Plaintiffs) knew full well that there is substantial money to be made in leaking models' real names and identities. The evidence supports a conclusion that Defendants directly participated in doing so in order to increase website traffic, or at a minimum, knowingly and deliberately disregarded their promises to ensure privacy and anonymity because such leaks enhanced profitability. Plaintiffs testified that if they had known their real names would have appeared on internet forums, they would not have filmed the videos.

Third, Defendants promised to pay each Plaintiff a particular amount in order to entice her to film a video. Several Plaintiffs did not reply to Defendants' first email and only responded after Defendants increased their offers. The women expected to be paid what they have been promised; Defendants do not inform them that their pay may be subject to change.

In reality, Defendants have no intention of honoring their promises regarding pay.

Defendants' practice—undisclosed to their models—is to grade each woman's appearance after she arrives in the hotel room and state an excuse (a supposed physical flaw) to underpay her. This is not only humiliating but routinely results in women being paid less than the minimum amount they were willing to accept in order to agree to fly to San Diego and film the video.

Defendants, in essence, pledge whatever sum they think they need to in order to lure a recruit to San Diego. In most cases, they already know that they will not actually pay the full amount. For example, Defendants offered Jane Doe 6 a total of $7,000 for one shoot but paid her much less. The evidence shows that Defendants never paid any model more than $6,000 for a single shoot, making it unlikely that they ever meant to do so for Jane Doe 6.83 Defendants' promises to pay specific fixed sums to models, including Plaintiffs, were false.

Each of these promises was made to induce Plaintiffs to agree to participate in a pornographic video and to overcome any objections they might have. Each of the promises were made at a time when the Plaintiff was free to decline the offer—prior to her arrival in San Diego to shoot the video. Each Plaintiff testified that she would not have filmed the video if Defendants had not made these false promises. The Court finds that Defendants are liable for the damages these false promises caused to each Plaintiff.

^{$\}frac{83}{3}$ Similarly, Jane Doe A, a third-party model, testified that she was promised $10,000 to do two shoots-$6,000 for a boy-girl video and $4,000 for a solo video with sex toys. Jane Doe A testified that she would not have agreed to come to San Diego for less than $10,000. Yet, at the time they were recruiting her, Defendants had already shut down the website on which solo videos were published (GDT) and were no longer filming such videos. Defendants therefore paid her only $6,000—for the boy-girl video. The extra $4,000 was needed to induce Jane Doe A to agree, but was not paid—nor was it ever meant to be.

iv. Plaintiffs Reasonably Relied on Defendants' Misrepresentations, Non-Disclosures, and False Promises

In determining whether Plaintiffs' reliance on Defendants' various representations was reasonable, the Court must take into consideration their intelligence, knowledge, education, and experience. (Broberg v. The Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 912, 921–22.) For example: "Exceptionally gullible or ignorant people have been permitted to recover from defendants who took advantage of them in circumstances where persons of normal intelligence would not have been misled. [...] 'No rogue should enjoy his ill-gotten plunder for the simple reason that his victim is by chance a fool." (Boeken v. Philip Morris, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1667 [citing Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal.2d 409, 414-15].) "What would constitute fraud in a given instance might not be fraudulent when exercised toward another person. The test of the representation is its actual effect on the particular mind" (Blankenheim v. E. F. Hutton & Co. (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1475.)

Generally, "[a] plaintiff will be denied recovery only if his conduct is manifestly unreasonable in the light of his own intelligence or information. It must appear that he put faith in representations that were 'preposterous' or 'shown by facts within his observation to be so patently and obviously false that he must have closed his eyes to avoid discovery of the truth.' [Citation.] Even in case of a mere negligent misrepresentation, a plaintiff is not barred unless his conduct, in the light of his own information and intelligence, is preposterous and irrational. [Citation.]"

(OCM Principal Opportunities Fund, L.P. v. CIBC World Markets Corp. (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 835, 865; Public Employees' Retirement System v. Moody's Investors Service, Inc. (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 643, 673.)

"Negligence on the part of the plaintiff in failing to discover the falsity of a statement is no defense when the misrepresentation was intentional rather than negligent. [Citations] As a general general rule negligence of the plaintiff is no defense to an intentional tort. [Citation] The fact that an investigation would have revealed the falsity of the misrepresentation will not alone bar his recovery. . ." (Seeger, 18 Cal.2d at 414-15 [emphasis added].) As Professor Williston eloquently stated many years ago:

[I]f a party has fraudulently misrepresented a document's contents or induced the other party to refrain from reading the document, courts will allow a remedy, choosing not to permit a positively fraudulent party to prosper because of the stupidity or credulity of the defrauded party, subject only to the rights of innocent third parties. In short, the law should not give any assistance to a knave, a scoundrel or a con artist who preys upon the less alert or more naive members of society.

(Williston on Contracts (4th ed. 2012) § 69:35, pp. 37-39.)

Here, each Plaintiff testified that she asked for and received numerous assurances that the videos would not be available online and would only be sold in foreign countries. Defendants made these representations repeatedly, including on the phone before agreeing to do the shoot and in person on the day of the shoot—and Plaintiffs had no specific reason to question their veracity. (See Orozco v. WPV San Jose, LLC (2019) 36 Cal. App. 5th 375, 391 [finding that plaintiff justifiably relied on defendant's misrepresentations when plaintiff specifically asked and was expressly assured numerous times, including the day of signing, that no competing businesses were being considered for tenancy in the shopping center]; Fanucci v. Allstate Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal. 2009) 638 F. Supp. 2d 1125, 1143 [a court could find reasonable reliance when the insured specifically told insurance agent that he wanted an umbrella policy and the agent advised him on which policy to buy].)

The Court concludes that Plaintiffs' reliance was reasonable under the circumstances.

First, the Court considers Plaintiffs' characteristics. The Court finds that Plaintiffs—like GDP models in general—are typically young, undereducated, and inexperienced in life; they have no experience or knowledge of the porn industry. They are unable to seek advice or guidance from others because they do not want anyone else to know what they are doing. Defendants specifically sought out women with these characteristics and exploited them.

Second, the Court considers Defendants' conduct and the nature of their representations. Defendants developed a well-honed approach, over several years, designed to convey indicia of reliability and overcome models' objections and concerns. Defendants provide a consistent story reinforced by the use of "reference" models. Their misrepresentations are highly specific (e.g. DVDs are sold to collectors in Australia) and they are usually able to provide a plausible and satisfactory answer to any question. Defendants falsely assure women that they have never had a problem with disclosure of models' videos or identities—a matter particularly within Defendants' knowledge. Moreover, everything appears polished and professional, which enhances Defendants' credibility. All in all, Defendants do not come across as a questionable fly-by-night operation but an established, high-end enterprise that does everything in a classy way (luxury cars and hotels, sophisticated equipment) and has hundreds of references to back up their assertions. Unfortunately, what Plaintiffs understandably mistook for integrity was all crafted to create a false veneer and merely represented the trappings of the success of Defendants' longstanding fraud.

v. Defendants' Deceit was a Substantial Factor in Causing Plaintiffs' Emotional Distress and the Court Awards Monetary Damages

Based on the foregoing, the Court finds Defendants liable for fraud and awards damages accordingly. Fraud victims are entitled to compensatory damages, as well as the profits and ill-gotten gains that the defendants gained by their wrongful conduct. As Civil Code § 1709 makes clear, Defendants are liable for any damage their deceit has caused to Plaintiffs.

1. Plaintiffs are Entitled to Emotional Distress Damages

"That general damages for mental pain and suffering are recoverable in a tort action of deceit is established by the cases." (Sprague v. Frank J. Sanders Lincoln Mercury, Inc. (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 412, 417.) Here, the bulk of Plaintiffs' damages comes from the significant emotional distress that they endured as a result of Defendants publishing their videos online. The Court has considered each Plaintiff's individual experience, as established by their testimony at trial and any documentary evidence presented.

The Court took into account that each Plaintiff expresses herself differently and has learned to cope with this experience in different ways. The Court weighed the physical manifestations of emotional distress, whether they be tangible impacts on the Plaintiff's life (e.g., dropping out of school, changing career path, injury to close personal relationships) or physical symptoms of emotional distress (e.g., depression, anxiety, isolation, sleeplessness, etc.).

Defendants argue that most of Plaintiffs' emotional distress stems from their "regret" of filming the pornographic film as opposed to the particular channel of distribution. The Court disagrees. Although several Plaintiffs testified that they experienced emotional distress as a result of the filming, each and every Plaintiff testified that her distress skyrocketed when the video was released online. The Court does not award damages for pain or distress caused by the filming of the video itself. The Court has considered such distress to the extent that it impacted the severity of emotional distress caused by the release of the video online.

Defendants understandably focus on preexisting mental health problems and other aggravating or contributing factors of Plaintiffs' distress. Plaintiffs need only show that the fraud was a substantial factor of their emotional distress. (Manderville v. PCG&S Grp., Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1498.) "A substantial factor in causing harm is a factor that a reasonable person would consider to have contributed to the harm. It must be more than a remote or trivial factor. It does not have to be the only cause of the harm." (CACI 430.) The Court finds that Defendants' release of the video online was a substantial factor in causing each of the emotional distress-related facts contained in the Court's findings for each Plaintiff.

In accordance with the California Civil Jury Instruction Number 3905A, the Court considered past and future mental suffering, loss of enjoyment of life, inconvenience, grief, anxiety, humiliation, and emotional distress in deciding a reasonable amount based on the evidence. The Court finds that Plaintiffs are reasonably certain to continue to suffer, at a minimum, the anxiety and embarrassment that each Plaintiff discussed in testimony.

2. Plaintiffs are Entitled to Damages and Ill-Gotten Gains from the Fraud

"One who willfully deceives another with intent to induce him to alter his position to his injury or risk, is liable for any damage which he thereby suffers." (Civ. Code § 1709.) For the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, the measure of damages, except where otherwise expressly provided by this Code, is the amount which will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby...." (Civ. Code § 3333.)

(Motschenbacher v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1974) 498 F.2d 821, 825-826 (applying Calif. law).) Likeness is a property right. (Lugosi v. Universal Pictures (1979) 25 Cal.3d 813, 818-819; citing Civ. Code § 654 ["property" is the ownership of a thing to the exclusion of others].)

Plaintiffs are entitled to receive the difference in value between what they gave to defendant and what they received. (Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1226, 1240.) And under section 3343, emotional distress damages may still be included, because the section expressly leaves open any other "legal or equitable remedies to which a [defrauded] person may be entitled." (Sprague at 417-418, citing Civ. Code 3343(b)(2); and Stout v. Turney 22 Cal.3d 718, 729-730 ["nothing in section 3343 requires plaintiff show "out-of-pocket" loss. The statute awards damage for "out-of-pocket" loss together with any additional damage.... If a plaintiff shows no traditional "out-of-pocket" loss, that component of the award is zero. If, however, he goes on to show consequential or additional damage, the amount which he so demonstrates is recoverable."].)

The Parties stipulated that Defendants received a total of $1,025,831.50 in profits from the use of the twenty-two Plaintiffs' videos. Thus, it is undisputed that Defendants derived $46,628.70 from the use of each Plaintiff's video(s).

B. Defendants' Putative Contracts Do not Vitiate Plaintiffs' Reasonable Reliance: The Documents are Invalid and Unenforceable as they were Secured by Fraud and are Otherwise Tainted by Illegality

As an integral part of Defendants' scheme, Defendants required each Plaintiff and model to sign documents at the moment shooting was about to begin. While Defendants rely on the documents to claim that Plaintiffs released all rights to the videos and consented to unlimited publication and use of the videos online, the documents are unenforceable for several reasons.

First, on their four corners alone, the documents are not valid, enforceable contracts: they contain vague, incomprehensible language and are missing material terms. Second, the fraud, intimidation, and coercion that Defendants used to obtain Plaintiffs' signatures render the

Here, as explained in Section III.A., supra, Defendants misrepresented and concealed material facts and made false promises regarding, among other things, where the video would be published, in order to induce Plaintiffs to travel to San Diego and engage in sexual intercourse on camera. Once Plaintiffs arrived in San Diego, they were given no option but to proceed with what they had started. 85 Defendants also misrepresented and concealed the contents of the documents themselves in order to induce Plaintiffs to sign them. Thus, the Court finds Plaintiffs' apparent consent to the documents is not real or free because it was, with respect to each Plaintiff, obtained by actual fraud.

Despite ample evidence of fraud, Defendants argue that the Court should enforce the documents' broad and perpetual release against Plaintiffs because Plaintiffs signed the documents without taking the time to read them. But Defendants did not provide Plaintiffs sufficient time to review the documents, imploring that they were behind schedule and filming needed to begin immediately. At the same time, to secure their signatures, Defendants misrepresented the nature and terms of the documents in a manner consistent with previous representations and assurances. "The general rule in California is that even in the absence of a fiduciary relationship plaintiff's failure to read a contract is excusable where reliance is placed on the misrepresentations of the other party." (Rosenthal v. Great W. Fin. Sec. Corp. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 394 [citation omitted].) "[A] defendant who had misrepresented the facts should not generally be heard, in an action for 'equitable relief,' which recites that all conditions and representations are embodied therein will not prevent plaintiff from introducing parol evidence that sale was induced by fraudl; Morris v. Harbor Boat Building Co. (1952) 112 Cal.App.2d 882, 888 ["it was never intended that the parol evidence rule should be used as a shield to prevent the proof of fraud ... even though the contract recites that all conditions and representations are embodied therein"]; Oak Industries, Inc. v. Foxboro Co. (S.D.Cal. 1984) 596 F.Supp, 601, 607 [under California law, extrinsic evidence is admissible to prove fraud in the inducement notwithstanding a contract provision that no representations have been made other than those stated in the agreementl.)

to assert the plaintiff's reliance on his misrepresentations was negligent, at least in the absence of facts making the plaintiff's conduct 'preposterous or irrational.'" (Id. at 422.)

For instance, a release of claims, "regardless of how comprehensively worded," is not binding if the releaser's misapprehension "as to the nature or scope of the release" was caused by the other party's misconduct and "not due to his own neglect." (Casey v. Proctor (1963) 59 Cal.2d 97, 103, 28 Cal.Rptr. 307; see also Frusetta v. Hauben, (1990), 217 Cal.App.3d at p. 557, 266 Cal.Rptr. 62 [release "may be rendered void on the grounds of fraud or misrepresentation regarding the nature of the claim covered by the release so long as the releasor's failure to learn the nature of the terms was not attributable to his own negligence."]; 86 Gardner v. Rubin* (1957) 149 Cal.App.2d 368, 372 [negotiable instrument not enforceable even by holder in due course where executed through fraud and "in the absence of negligence on the part of the maker"]; Ramirez v. Superior Court* (1980) 103 Cal.App.3d 746, 756, n. 3 ["no agreement exists unless the parties signing the document act voluntarily and are aware of the nature of the document and have turned their attention to its provisions or reasonably should have turned their attention to its provisions"].)

Although it is true that Plaintiffs did not fully read the documents before signing them, this was due not to Plaintiffs' negligence but to Defendants' intentional misconduct. Further, Plaintiffs had no reasonable opportunity to learn that Defendants' misrepresentations were false.

Plaintiffs' Failure to Read and Understand the Documents is Attributable to Defendants' Misconduct and Not to Any Culpable Negligence on Plaintiffs' Part

The evidence at trial revealed a consistent pattern of Defendants presenting the documents to the Plaintiffs only minutes before the start of the pornographic video shoot, having never mentioned prior to that moment that there would be contracts to sign. When presenting the documents, Defendants briefly describe their content in a manner echoing or consistent with prior misrepresentations—sometimes broadly (e.g., "This just says what we've already talked about" or "you don't need to read it; it just says what we already agreed to") or, in some cases, more specifically (e.g., "These documents just give us permission to put your video on DVDs and sell them in Australia," "this confirms that we won't post the video online or release your name," or "this just says that you're over eighteen and we aren't forcing you to do this."). Plaintiffs testified that they felt they did not need to read the documents before signing because Defendants had repeatedly provided explicit assurances—backed by plausible details—of the term that was of substantial concern to them: where the video would be distributed and who would see it. Nothing surrounding the presentation and execution of the putative contracts was sufficient to unring the bell of these repeated misrepresentations; rather, Defendants sought to reinforce them.

⁸⁶ In Frusetta, the court found that an alleged representation by an insurance adjuster that a $250 check was only a partial payment when the adjuster knew that plaintiff's medical bills far exceeded that amount, if true, could be sufficient to void the "release of all claims" that the plaintiff signed without reading because such an act would support a finding of bad faith, fraud or overreaching by the adjuster.

According to the California Supreme Court, "any actual concealment" or "any affirmative misrepresentation regarding the existence or meaning" of the material term at issue strongly supports a finding that a party's failure to read a contract in reliance on its adversary's assurances that the party need not read the agreement was reasonable. (Rosenthal, 14 Cal. 4th at p. 426.) In Rosenthal, unlike here, the plaintiffs did not claim any misrepresentation or concealment related to the term at issue—an arbitration clause; nor did they claim any other sort of "misconduct" by the defendants that interfered with their opportunity to read the documents. (Ibid.)⁸⁸ In contrast, here, the term at issue is the scope of distribution of the video, and the trial record shows that Defendants had made affirmative misrepresentations to Plaintiffs that the videos would only be sold on DVD through isolated overseas channels and never placed online.

In addition to misrepresenting the contents of the documents, Defendants did not give the Plaintiffs a fair opportunity to read the documents, telling them that the shoot was behind schedule and had to get going. When a Plaintiff asked for time to read the documents or inquired about their contents, Defendants became ill-tempered and told them that there was no time, that they already knew what the agreement was, and that they could review the documents after the shoot. A few

Plaintiffs testified that Defendants conducted the on-camera interview while they completed the documents, distracting the women with personal questions, including everything from small talk to highly-sensitive inquiries about their sexual history and preferences.

Several Plaintiffs had, at Defendants' suggestion, consumed alcohol and/or marijuana shortly before being presented with the documents to sign. These actions by Defendants constitute the type of "misconduct" contemplated in Casey v. Proctor, supra, which, this Court finds, deprived Plaintiffs of a reasonable opportunity to read the documents before signing. (See also Rosenthal, 14 Cal. 4th at p. 423, n. 12, [evidence that a party "actually took some action or said something to hurry or pressure" the signing party would support argument that failure to read contract before signing was reasonable].)

 Defendants' Obscurant Drafting Made It Impossible for Plaintiffs to Discover that Defendants' Oral Representations were False

Finally, the contents of the documents themselves interfered significantly with Plaintiffs' ability to "discover the real terms of the contract." The documents that Defendants provide for models to sign are vague and confusing. An average person would not be able to understand the nature and scope of the terms. Indeed, it is difficult for anyone but a trained lawyer undertaking a close reading to decipher the subject matter, parties, and intended terms of the so-called agreements. (Cf. Rosenthal, 14 Cal. 4th at 426 [plaintiff could have easily learned of the existence and meaning of arbitration agreement by simply reading the one-page agreement because the arbitration clause was "in bold print in the center of the page's right column of text," "include[ed] a brief explanation of the meaning of arbitration," and there was "immediately above the signature line, a bold-print reminder that 'this agreement contains a predispute arbitration clause..."].)

And, even if Plaintiffs could understand these terms, nothing in the documents is "patently at odds" with Defendants' oral representations. The documents do not disclose Defendants' intention to publish the videos online; nor do they provide the name of Defendants' popular subscription website or Defendants' plan to publish clips of the videos on highly trafficked free pornography websites. When a defendant's oral representations are not "patently at odds with the express provisions of the written contract," a plaintiff cannot necessarily be expected to discover the falsity of those statements. (Orozco, 36 Cal. App. 5th 375, 391; see also Dias v. Nationwide Life Ins. Co. (E.D. Cal. 2010) 700 F. Supp. 2d 1204, 1217 ["When the misrepresentations are not inconsistent with the terms of an insurance policy, reliance on the misrepresentations may still be 'justifiable."].)

In Orozco, for example, the plaintiff specifically inquired as to whether competing businesses were being considered as tenants and was repeatedly assured—including on the day of signing the lease—that they were not. The court accordingly held that the plaintiff "would not have discovered the misrepresentations by reading the lease." Even though the lease contained an integration clause as well as a general disclaimer disavowing any "representation or warranty as to current occupancy or future occupancy of any particular tenant," it "did not even mention" the competing hotdog vendor. (Orozco, 36 Cal. App. 5th at 392-93.) Similarly, here, the documents' generic, boilerplate terms do not supplant and undo Defendants' concrete and repeated promises. Defendants could not cover specific express misrepresentations—that the videos would never be placed online and that the models' identities would be secured—with standard legalese.

Having reviewed the putative contracts at issue, the Court finds that the Defendants drafted the documents with the specific intent of misleading Plaintiffs of their scheme and obscuring the true nature of what they intended to do with the videos. It is not surprising that Defendants' documents do not clearly inform the model of Defendants' heavy online presence; as every Plaintiff testified, she never would have agreed to participate had she known the truth. Defendants are fully aware of this fact and rely on deception and coercion to obtain models' consent.

Duick v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. is another analogous case. Defendants there drew plaintiff in by soliciting her to take an online personality test. This was all a ruse designed to gather her personal information—which was then used to make her the target and butt of an elaborate prank as part of an advertising campaign for a particular Toyota vehicle model. The court found the terms and conditions of the personality evaluation, which Toyota claimed constituted plaintiff's consent to participate in the prank, were void in their entirety:

(1) defendants were the drafters and creators of the relevant Web pages, including the full text of the terms and conditions; (2) by drafting and presenting the terms and conditions as they did, including the use of the phrase "Personality Evaluation," defendants misrepresented and concealed (whether intentionally or not) the true nature of the conduct to which Duick was to be subjected; and (3) Duick was not negligent in failing to understand the true nature of the conduct to which she was to be subjected, because no reasonable person in her position would have understood it.

(Duick v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (2011) 198 Cal. App. 4th 1316, 1322 ["We have read the terms and conditions in their entirety, and we conclude that, as written, they could not have alerted a reasonable reader in Duick's position to the true nature of what defendants proposed to do to her . . . [b]ecause of their vagueness and opacity (such as unexplained references to an 'interactive experience' and a 'digital experience')[.]"].) As in Duick, Defendants drew Plaintiffs in under false pretenses. And, the documents they presented for Plaintiffs to sign are so vague and opaque that they do not alert a reasonable reader in Plaintiffs' position to what Defendants actually proposed to do to them: here, to widely disseminate the videos online and to market them through tactics including propagation of Plaintiffs' identities within their communities. Plaintiffs did not freely and knowingly consent to this—it was their nightmare scenario—and could not have done so merely by reading the documents. As in Duick, the documents are unenforceable.

3. Plaintiffs are entitled to the same relief under a fraud in the inducement theory.

While distinct as legal concepts, there is no clear line in this case between fraud in the inducement and fraud in the execution of a contract. Rather, Defendants engaged in a single, unbroken scheme and course of conduct in which they drew Plaintiffs in by fraudulent misrepresentations and maintained that fraud through the execution of the documents—including by mispresenting the nature and content of the agreement itself. Any difference between these legal doctrines is, therefore, inconsequential as a practical matter. Viewed through either lens, Plaintiffs' purported consent is legally ineffective, and the putative contracts cannot therefore be enforced.

To the extent that any Plaintiffs' contract is properly deemed voidable rather than void, the Court finds that filing this lawsuit seeking to invalidate the contracts for all purposes met the notice and restoration requirement for rescission. (Civ. Code § 1691 ["When notice of rescission has not otherwise been given or an offer to restore the benefits received under the contract has not otherwise been made, the service of a pleading in an action or proceeding that seeks relief based on rescission shall be deemed to be such notice or offer or both."].)⁸⁹ Furthermore, the Court exercises its equitable power to set aside and decline to enforce the contracts based on its finding that Plaintiffs' assent was procured by fraud. (E.g., Persson v. Smart Inventions, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 1154 ["[T]here is no support for, and we reject out of hand, the notion that a court has no equitable power to set aside a provision of a contract procured by fraud."].) Failing to do so would improperly reward the Defendants for their conduct.⁹⁰

ii. The Documents Signed by Plaintiffs are Unenforceable Due to Procedural and Substantive Unconscionability

"If the court as a matter of law finds the contract or any clause of the contract to have been unconscionable at the time it was made the court may refuse to enforce the contract" (Civ. Code § 1670.5(a).) "Courts have long had the authority to set aside unconscionable or illegal

⁸⁹ Civil Code § 1693 contemplates the scenario presented here and provides the following instructions:

When relief based upon rescission is claimed in an action or proceeding, such relief shall not be denied because of delay in giving notice of rescission unless such delay has been substantially prejudicial to the other party.

A party who has received benefits by reason of a contract that is subject to rescission and who in an action or proceeding seeks relief based upon rescission shall not be denied relief because of a delay in restoring or in tendering restoration of such benefits before judgment unless such delay has been substantially prejudicial to the other party; but the court may make a tender of restoration a condition of its judgment.

been rescinded, the court may grant any party to the action any other relief to which he may be entitled under the circumstances...." (Civ. Code § 1692.) "Rescission and restoration are required only under equitable principles and to prevent the taking of unfair advantage. Restoration is not required unless the ends of justice require it." (Persson, 125 Cal. App. 4th at 1155 [citation omitted].) Here, the ends of justice make strict adherence to such concepts inequitable and unnecessary. Plaintiffs do not receive any unfair advantage from retaining the relatively-modest sums they received to shoot the videos, and it would be unjust to require them to tender back these monies. This would be in effect accepting and enforcing Defendants' version of the agreements—i.e., that they have only paid the models in order to publish their videos online—procured by deceit. The Court cannot accept that Plaintiffs' services—provided under the agreed terms as they were led to understand them—are worth nothing, and will not take a detour to determine their "true" value. They are certainly worth no less (and possibly considerably more) than what the parties agreed to.

contractual provisions, for example, while enforcing the remainder of a contract." (Persson, 125 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 1153.) Section 1670.5 "codified the principle that a court can refuse to enforce an unconscionable provision in a contract." (Id. at 1153–54.)

"Unconscionability has generally been recognized to include an absence of meaningful choice on the part of one of the parties together with contract terms which are unreasonably favorable to the other party." (Grand Prospect Partners v. Ross Dress for Less, Inc. (2015) 232 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 1346 [quoting Williams v. Walker-Thomas Furniture Co. (D.C.Cir.1965) 121 U.S. App.D.C. 315].) Establishing unconscionability requires showing both a procedural and a substantive element, though these two elements are evaluated on a sliding scale and therefore need not be present to the same degree. (Id. at 1346–47 [citing Pinnacle Museum Tower Assn. v. Pinnacle Market Development (US), LLC (2012) 55 Cal.4th 223, 246].)

1. The Documents Are Procedurally Unconscionable

Procedural unconscionability can be established by showing either oppression or surprise. (Id. at 1347.) Oppression generally involves a contract of adhesion—"a standardized contract, which, imposed and drafted by the party of superior bargaining strength, relegates to the subscribing party only the opportunity to adhere to the contract or reject it." (The McCaffrey Grp., Inc. v. Superior Court (2014) 224 Cal. App. 4th 1330, 1349, 169 Cal. Rptr. 3d 766, 781 [quoting Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 83, 113–114, 99 Cal.Rptr.2d 745, 6 P.3d 669].) Oppression can be established "by the totality of the circumstances surrounding the negotiation and formation of the contract. . . ." (Grand Prospect Partners, L.P., supra, 232 Cal. App. 4th at p. 1348.)

[Relevant circumstances] include, but are not limited to (1) the amount of time the party is given to consider the proposed contract; (2) the amount and type of pressure exerted on the party to sign the proposed contract; (3) the length of the proposed contract and the length and complexity of the challenged provision; (4) the education and experience of the party; and (5) whether the party's review of the proposed contract was aided by an attorney.

(Ibid. [noting that pressure can come from "a stronger party using high-pressure tactics, coercion or threats short of duress [, or] surrounding circumstances such as market conditions and factors affecting timing."].)

Surprise, on the other hand "typically involves a provision 'hidden' within the prolixity of a printed form contract drafted by the party having superior bargaining strength." (The McCaffrey Grp., 224 Cal. App. 4th at p. 1349 [citation omitted].) If the challenged term is not hidden, surprise can exist if the term "is otherwise beyond the reasonable expectation of the weaker party." (Morris v. Redwood Empire Bancorp (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1305, 1321.)

The evidence at trial revealed that Defendants' contracting practices are tainted by procedural unconscionability. Defendants' documents, standardized forms drafted by Defendants and/or their attorneys, were presented to Plaintiffs to sign immediately without any opportunity for negotiation. To say that Defendants occupied a position of superior bargaining strength understates the reality of the circumstances at the moment that Plaintiffs were made to sign the documents: a model is alone in a hotel room being cajoled and rushed to sign by two strange men who not only control the reservations for her flight home but also could easily overpower her physically. That the agreement is not subject to negotiation is evidenced by those instances in which Defendants unilaterally decided to pay a Plaintiff less than what was initially promised to her in order to obtain her agreement to travel to San Diego. While some Plaintiffs were too frightened or intimidated to speak out, those who did question this decision met with Defendants' absolute refusal to pay what was promised. In examining Defendants' documents and the trial record, the Court finds all the markers of an unconscionable contract of adhesion.

Defendants' use of surprise independently supports the finding of procedural unconscionability. Plaintiffs are young and have no experience in the adult entertainment industry. (Cf. A & MProduce Co. v. FMC Corp. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 473, 489 [unfair surprise and procedural unconscionability more difficult for experienced businessmen to establish].) The Model/Talent Release uses a small font and dense legalese to obscure the important terms therein. Rather than clearly stating that the video will be published online, on Defendants' website and dozens of others, the Document contains a few vague, general clauses that purport to give Defendants unfettered rights over the video. After receiving numerous assurances and promises that the video will not be published online and will have only a limited distribution on DVD in foreign countries, these oblique references are insufficient to overcome Plaintiffs' existing understanding—an understanding borne of Defendants' own express representations. In this context, the Court finds that the documents are ambiguous and fail to meaningfully disclose Defendants' ability and intention to publish the pornographic videos on their websites and popular free websites. This is particularly so because Defendants deliberately recruit and target women who are young and inexperienced, have not completed a college (and, in some cases, high school) education, and are unacquainted with the pornography industry.

Defendants point to a sentence in the IC Agreement to show that Plaintiffs should have realized that Defendants intended to publish the video on the internet. However, this sentence is buried in Paragraph 7 on the bottom of the second page in a section called "Model Representations and Warranties." (Cf. Morris, 128 Cal. App. 4th at p. 1321 [when the challenged contract provision is preceded by a clear heading in large type drawing a reader's attention and requiring the party's initials may refute a claim of surprise].) In light of Defendants' many specific representations about their distribution mechanisms, business model, and overall intentions, no reasonable person in Plaintiffs' shoes would have located and discerned this term, let alone understood it to encompass what Defendants actually intended to do with the video: put it on the internet and allow it to be directed to models' friends and family. (See A & M Produce Co., 135 Cal. App. 3d at p. 490 [noting that "one suspects that the length, complexity and obtuseness of most form contracts may be due at least in part to the seller's preference that the buyer will be dissuaded from reading that to which he is supposedly agreeing."].) Here, Defendants bolstered the obscurant language of the document by encouraging Plaintiffs to rely on specific, clear oral representations.

Accordingly, the Court finds that Defendants' documents are procedurally unconscionable.

2. The Documents are Substantively Unconscionable

"[T]he substantive element [of unconscionability] is concerned with the fairness of the agreement's actual terms and assesses whether they are overly harsh or one-sided." (Grand Prospect Partners, 232 Cal. App. 4th at p. 1347; 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1213 [Substantive unconscionability "traditionally involves contract terms that are so one-sided as to 'shock the conscience,' or that impose harsh or oppressive terms."].)

In determining whether a provision is substantively unconscionable, courts are permitted and even encouraged to look outside the four-corners of the contract. For example, in deciding whether a price term is unconscionable, "courts look to the basis and justification for the price"—factors almost always outside the written agreement, including "the market price"; "the cost of the goods to the seller"; "the inconvenience imposed on the seller"; and "the true value of the product or service." (Perdue v. Crocker Nat'l Bank (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 913, 926–27, 702 P.2d 503, 512.)

Due to the high level of procedural unconscionability, even a low level of substantive unconscionability is sufficient to render the putative contracts unenforceable. Here, the documents Plaintiffs signed are written entirely for the benefit of Defendants and, under the relevant circumstances, are overly harsh and oppressive. Not a single provision in the documents inures to Plaintiffs' benefit or places any limitation on Defendants. Instead, the documents—under the view advanced by Defendants—purport to permit Defendants to do anything they wish with the videos and to "exploit" models' actual names. Each Plaintiff testified that privacy was her primary concern and that if she had understood the true meaning of the documents (and Defendants' true intentions), she never would have signed the documents or agreed to do the video.

A number of terms are particularly unconscionable. For example, the agreements purport to absolve Defendants of liability for how they use the videos in the future—even though Plaintiffs are unaware of Defendants' fraud and deceit and are unable to anticipate Defendants' undisclosed intentions to use the videos in a manner directly counter to their express representations. Such exculpatory clauses immunizing stronger parties for prospective unlawful conduct—particularly of an intentional nature—are illegal and void as contrary to public policy (See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 1668 [prohibiting exculpatory contracts that exempt anyone from responsibility for fraud, willful acts, or violations of law]; Three Crown Apartments v. PNC Bank (N.D. Cal. Oct. 26, 2012) No. C-12-03579, 2012 WL 5338054, at *6 ["[i]t is now settled... that... 'a party [cannot] contract away liability for his fraudulent or intentional acts or for his negligent violations of statutory law...

Thus, the release... does not prohibit Plaintiff's claims based on subsequent conduct that either intentionally or unintentionally violates state law."] [citations omitted].)⁹¹

The Court's evaluation of the documents' substance must include an acknowledgment of the highly sensitive subject matter at issue (pornographic videos depicting Plaintiffs engaging in sexual activity) and the privacy interests at stake for each of the Plaintiffs. The Court may also consider the relevant circumstances contributing to the fairness of the documents—that Defendants held themselves out to be a company that produces pornographic videos to sell on DVDs in foreign countries and promised never to publish the videos online. In light of these facts, the Court finds that the one-sided, broad, blanket releases set forth in the documents are overly harsh and oppressive.

Based on the strong evidence of procedural unconscionability and the inherent unfairness of the documents, the Court finds as a matter of law that the documents are unconscionable and declines to enforce them as a result.

iii. The Documents Signed by Some Under-Age Plaintiffs are Void for Illegality

Defendants cannot enforce contracts against Jane Does 4, 5, 12, 14, 16, and 17, because each of these women was under the legal drinking age when Defendants furnished alcohol to her, in violation of California law, shortly prior to presenting her with legal documents to sign. (Bus. & Prof. Code § 25658(a) ["... every person who sells, furnishes, gives, or causes to be sold, furnished, or given away any alcoholic beverage to any person under 21 years of age is guilty of a misdemeanor."].) This Court cannot enforce a putative contract under which the weaker party's "consent" was procured through illegal means.

iv. The Documents (and Verbal Script) are too Vague and Indefinite to Constitute Enforceable Contracts

Even aside from fraud, unconscionability, and illegality, the putative agreements suffer from intractable formation issues. They are too ill-formed to enable the required meeting of the minds needed to form a contract. Plaintiffs were placed on insufficient notice of what they were purporting to agree to.

1. The Witten Agreements are Uncertain, Vague, and Indefinite

Terms of a contract must be sufficiently definite in all particulars essential to its enforcement. (Magna Development Co. v. Reed (1964) 228 Cal.App.2d 230; Maganallez v. Hilltop Lending Corp. (N.D. Cal. 2007) 505 F. Supp.2d 594, 601-603.) As the Fourth District Court of Appeal, Presiding Justice Judith McConnell, has opined:

In order for acceptance of a proposal to result in the formation of a contract, the proposal "must be sufficiently definite, or must call for such definite terms in the acceptance, that the performance promised is reasonably certain." [Citation.] A proposal "cannot be accepted so as to form a contract unless the terms of the contract are reasonably certain. [¶]... The terms of a contract are reasonably certain if they provide a basis for determining the existence of a breach and for giving an appropriate remedy." [Citations.] If, by contrast, a supposed "contract" does not provide a basis for determining what obligations the parties have agreed to, and hence does not make possible a determination of whether those agreed obligations have been breached, there is no contract.

(Bowers v. Raymond J. Lucia Companies, Inc., (2012) 206 Cal.App.4th 724, 734 [citations omitted].) "Where a contract is so uncertain and indefinite that the intention of the parties in material particulars cannot be ascertained, the contract is void and unenforceable." (Amaral v. Cintas Corp. No. 2 (2008) 163 Cal.App.4th 1157, 1192.) "Whether a contract is certain enough to be enforced is a question of law for the court." (Patel v. Liebermensch (2008) 45 Cal.4th 344, 348 fn. 1.)

Here, in the 1-page "Model Talent Release" document, the Court finds the following terms indefinite and not reasonably certain: "Producer: Clockwork Productions, Inc [sic] on behalf of BLL Media Inc.," "Appearance," "Program," and "Employer." (See, e.g., Jane Doe No. 1 Agreement, ¶¶ 1-8, Trial Exhib. 36.)⁹² The names and capacities of contracting parties are material, especially in a case like the present, where Defendants own/operate a plethora of entities, foreign and domestic, which has changed over the years. The phrase "on behalf of" is vague and the Defendants did not clarify this at trial. In fact, Defendant Wolfe testified he does not understand it.

Further, there is no basis for determining either party's contractual performance: the Plaintiffs' required contractual performance (including in the "Appearance" and/or "Program") is undefined, as is the other party's performance—most notably, the material term of price paid to the model—is missing entirely from the agreement. This is consistent with the Court's findings that Defendants did not intend to honor their payment promises but arbitrarily made up what they wanted to pay on the spot.

In the 8-page document, "Model/Talent Release and Independent Contractor Agreement", the Court finds the following terms indefinite and not reasonably certain: "Adult Content," and "other online Website." (See, e.g., Jane Doe No. 1 Agreement, at Recitals, ¶¶ 1-10, Trial Exhib. 25.)

Moreover, as with the one-page version, there is no basis for determining either party's contractual performance. The Plaintiffs' required contractual performance (the "Adult Content") is undefined. Again, Defendants' performance—most notably, the material term of price paid to the model—is missing entirely from the agreement. (Id. pg. 2, 8.)

The Court has read the agreements in full and finds them all uncertain, vague, and indefinite. The agreements provide no basis for determining what obligations the parties have agreed to; accordingly, the Court finds the agreements are not enforceable as a matter of law.

2. The Verbal Scripts are Uncertain, Vague, and Indefinite

To the extent Defendants allege that the "verbal scripts" are independent, enforceable contracts, they also suffer from critical flaws. These scripts do not reflect bilateral agreements—with promises, consideration, and obligations on each side. Rather, Defendants unilaterally required models to recite the scripts verbatim before filming began. Defendants did not read or ascribe to a counter-script or representation in which they agreed to anything.

docur that the According 206 (

Examining the scripts on their face, they are plagued by similar problems as the written documents. In various material particulars, the intention of the parties cannot be ascertained, such that the Court can determine the parties' obligations and if and when they have been breached. Accordingly, the Court finds that the verbal scripts do not constitute enforceable contracts. (Bowers, 206 Cal.App.4th at 734; Patel, 45 Cal.4th at 348 n. 1.)

For these reasons, in addition to those set forth in the prior sections, the Court finds that the verbal release is not enforceable as a matter of law. The Court has already found, above, that recitation of the script is not a meaningful manifestation of a model's assent to have her video posted online and disseminated throughout her community.

C. Defendants are Liable for Misappropriation of Likeness

The civil causes of action for misappropriation of likeness are derived from the "right to publicity," which can be defined as "the legally protected interest a person has to control the commercial exploitation of his name, photograph or likeness"; this interest finds its roots in an individual's right to privacy as well as his or her property rights. (Eastwood v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 409, 419; see also Lugosi v. Universal Pictures (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 813, 833-34.) In California, both common law and statute provide a remedy for the unauthorized commercial exploitation of a person's identity.

The elements of a common law cause of action for misappropriation are: "(1) the defendant's use of the plaintiff's identity; (2) the appropriation of plaintiff's name or likeness to defendant's advantage, commercially or otherwise; (3) lack of consent; and (4) resulting injury." (Eastwood, 149 Cal. App. 3d at 417 [citing Prosser, Law of Torts (4th ed. 1971) § 117, pp. 804–807; Witkin, Cal. Procedure (2d ed. 1971) Pleading, § 606, p. 2244].)

A statutory claim entails a similar showing. Civil Code § 3344(a) provides in relevant part:

Any person who knowingly uses another's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness, in any manner, on or in products, merchandise, or goods, or for purposes of advertising or selling, or soliciting purchases of, products, merchandise, goods or services, without such person's prior consent, [...] shall be liable for any damages sustained by the person or persons injured as a result thereof.

See also Newcombe v. Adolf Coors Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 686, 692 [distilling the statutory cause of action down to three elements: "(1) a 'knowing' use; (2) for purposes of advertising, and (3) a direct connection between the use and the commercial purpose."].)⁹³

i. Knowing Use of Likenesses in Products or for Advertising

Section 3344 imposes liability for knowing use of another's likeness, in any manner, either in products or for advertising purposes. The Court notes at the outset that three separate manners of "use" are present in this case. First, Plaintiffs' likenesses appeared in Defendants' products (i.e., Plaintiffs' full-length pornographic videos), which were sold to subscribers for a monthly fee.

Second, Defendants posted photographs and sample video clips of Plaintiffs on the publicly-available homepage of Defendants' subscription websites and on the GirlsDoPorn channel on numerous free sites. The purpose and effect of this use was to advertise for Defendants' paid websites and entice viewers to purchase a subscription.

Third, Defendants participated in an affiliate marketing program knowing that the affiliates websites used Plaintiffs' videos and images to drive internet traffic to Defendants' website in the same way as Defendants' own posts on tube sites did. Defendants paid commissions to the affiliates for their marketing services, creating an incentive for affiliates to continue posting Plaintiffs' images.

The non-Domi Defendants do not dispute that they knowingly and intentionally sold access to Plaintiffs' videos in the members-only section of their websites or that they received subscription payments as a result. The non-Domi Defendants also do not dispute that Pratt posted Plaintiffs' images on the public-facing homepage to entice viewers to purchase a subscription to see the full-length videos. Defendants also admit that they posted Plaintiffs' images and video clips on the

GirlsDoPorn channels on numerous free "tube" sites to advertise for and drive traffic to their websites. These uses clearly satisfy the requirements of the common law and the statute.

In addition, Defendants' willing participation in an affiliate marketing program also constitutes a knowing use for the purposes of advertising. This finding applies to Domi as well as the other Defendants. The Court disagrees with Defendants' argument that they cannot be held liable for the content on affiliate websites. The evidence meets the applicable liability standard.

First, Defendants affirmatively chose to participate in CCBill's affiliate program. Second, affiliate advertising is not free. Defendants pay a large commission for affiliate sites to advertise their websites, typically using their content. Third, Defendants can control or at least influence their affiliates. They can easily remove any affiliate from the CCBill program for any reason at any time, eliminating the incentive for that affiliate to continue advertising for Defendant. Defendants can also initiate DMCA takedown requests against any affiliate for the use of their content but choose not to. By electing to take no action, Defendants ratified the affiliates' use of Plaintiffs' likenesses and profited from doing so. It is well-settled that one can be liable for harm caused by the tortious act of another if he:

(a) orders or induces the conduct, if he knows or should know of circumstances that would make the conduct tortious if it were his own, or (b) conducts an activity with the aid of the other and is negligent in employing him, or (c) permits the other to act . . . with his instrumentalities, knowing or having reason to know that the other is acting or will act tortiously, or (d) controls, or has a duty to use care to control, the conduct of the other, who is likely to do harm if not controlled, and fails to exercise care in the control . . .

The Court is not persuaded by Defendants argument that they have a lot of affiliates, and that it would be burdensome to monitor the content of each one. One cannot endeavor, successfully, to generate a far-reaching advertising campaign—which involve the use of Plaintiffs' likenesses in highly-sensitive pornographic content—and then bemoan the consequences of the enterprise. The Court finds a recent Second Circuit opinion persuasive on this point. That court held a defendant company liable for the wrongful acts of its affiliates because the defendant company knew about those acts but, instead of taking action to stop them, sat back and reaped the benefits. (Fed. Trade Comm'n v. LeadClick Media, LLC (2d Cir. 2016) 838 F.3d 158, 168 ["[W]e hold that under the FTC Act, a defendant may be held liable for engaging in deceptive practices or acts if, with knowledge of the deception, it either directly participates in a deceptive scheme or has the authority to control the deceptive content at issue."].)⁹⁴

In determining whether the "use" element is satisfied by participation in the affiliate program, the Court examines several factors: who created the content at issue, who posted the content at issue, whether Plaintiffs' images were used in the advertisement, and what was being promoted in the advertisement. (See Cross v. Facebook, Inc. (2017) 14 Cal. App. 5th 190, 209–10, review denied.)

Here, the facts differ dramatically from those in Cross. First, Defendants themselves created the content containing Plaintiffs' images and knew its use on the internet was unauthorized. Second, in this case, the affiliate site is, itself, an advertisement for Defendants' websites; that is its purpose. Third, the advertisements at issue actually contain Plaintiffs' images and links to Defendants' websites, driving traffic and thus, subscription sales. Thus, the fact that a third party directly posted the content is not dispositive.

In Cross, an internet provider such as Facebook did nothing more than operate a platform (i.e., provide a space for others to post content) and run advertisements next to the content; it had no knowledge that the use of the images within the third-party content was unauthorized. In the present case, on the other hand, Defendants—including Domi—took affirmative measures to use Plaintiffs' images and videos, knowing that the use was unauthorized. Here, Plaintiffs' images were created by and under the supervision of Defendant Pratt (50% owner of Domi) and then posted on affiliate sites for the benefit of one or more of Pratt's companies. Because Pratt's knowledge of GDP's deceptive business practices is imputed to Domi, Domi's solicitation of affiliates known to use GDP's content to advertise for MomPOV.com establishes Domi's use of Plaintiffs' likenesses.

⁹⁴ See also Falcon Foto v. Domain Mgmt. Servs., (C.D. Cal. Nov. 29, 2010) No. CV 10-6469 CAS JCX, 2010 WL 4916645, at *4 (denying motion to dismiss misappropriation claim: "As clearly alleged in the FAC, Defendant also uses Mr. Sizemore's name, image and persona to advertise and entice potential customers to become members of Defendant's Domains and affiliate marketing program.")

ii. Lack of Consent

The other elements of these claims are also met. Defendants distributed Plaintiffs videos and images online despite having first-hand knowledge that such distribution was unauthorized. The signed documents do not relieve Defendants of liability for misappropriation for the reasons stated above. (See Restatement (First) of Torts § 892, comment (d) [consent is a valid defense to tort actions only when the consent is "unaffected by fraud"]; Lightbourne v. Printroom Inc. (C.D. Cal. 2015) 122 F. Supp. 3d 942, 946 (signed writing permitting use of likeness can be undermined by facts that "would somehow vitiate his express legal consent"].)

Defendants knew that the Plaintiffs did not consent to their video being posted online on any website because Plaintiffs made it eminently clear that they would only agree to do the shoots if the videos were not going to be released online. Obviously, Defendants were aware of the lies they told these women and knew (or should have known) that such lies negated any apparent consent. Moreover, it is beyond peradventure that Defendants were aware that the twenty-two Plaintiffs in this action claimed that they did not consent when the women complained to them or, at the latest, when Plaintiffs filed this suit. But, Defendants kept Plaintiffs' videos on their own websites.

iii. Commercial Benefit

"[The next] requisite element[] of a common law right to publicity claim is that defendant appropriated plaintiff's name 'to defendant's advantage, commercially or otherwise.' Similarly, Civil Code section 3344, subdivision (a) requires that the name be used 'for purposes of advertising or selling.'" (Cross, 14 Cal. App. 5th at p. 210.) The affiliate marketing program clearly satisfies this element as well.

By signing up for CCBill's Affiliate Program and paying the affiliates to post Plaintiffs' images and video clips on third-party sites, Defendants received a commercial benefit from affiliate advertising. (Newcombe, 157 F.3d at 693 ["[plaintiff's] likeness was certainly used to Coors' and Belding's commercial advantage as the drawing which resembled [the plaintiff] was a central figure in the advertisement and the purpose of the advertisement was to attract attention."].) Based on the evidence at trial (the testimony of Wolfe, Pratt, Wiederhold, and documents introduced by

iv. Damages

"[U]nder section 3344(a), an injured party may recover either the amount of damages specified in the statute or actual damages, whichever is greater, as well as profits from the unauthorized use." (Orthopedic Sys., Inc. v. Schlein (2011) 202 Cal. App. 4th 529, 547, 135 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200, 213.) "Injury to a plaintiff's right of publicity is not limited to present or future economic loss, but 'may induce humiliation, embarrassment, and mental distress." (Abdul-Jabbar v. Gen. Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 85 F.3d 407, 416; CACI 1821.)

Here, Plaintiffs' evidence of damages is strong. The content at issue does not consist of runof-the-mill likenesses but hardcore pornographic videos and still images extracted from those videos. Plaintiffs have provided extensive testimony and evidence about how their lives have been affected and destroyed by the unauthorized publication and dissemination of this content via the internet. The Court finds Plaintiffs' accounts to be consistent, credible, and compelling—warranting significant damages.

Plaintiffs are also entitled to recover the profits Defendants' received from the unauthorized use. The parties stipulated that Plaintiffs' videos generated $1,025,831.50 in profits for Defendants. None of this revenue was generated by an authorized use of Plaintiffs' videos as Defendants only earned money from posting the videos online.

"Section 3344 provides for minimum damages of $750, even if no actual damages are proven." (KNB Enterprises v. Matthews (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 362, 367; Civ. Code § 3344(a).) The misappropriation statute "can be read to presume that a person whose name, photograph, or likeness is used by another for commercial purposes without their consent is 'injured as a result thereof." (Fraley v. Facebook, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2011) 830 F. Supp. 2d 785, 806.) At least two courts have held, "after surveying California court decisions, that 'courts generally presume that the fourth element of the applicable test has been established if there is sufficient evidence to prove the first three elements." (Id. at 806-07 [quoting Del Amo v. Baccash (C.D. Cal. Sept. 16, 2008) No. 07–663–PSG, 2008 WL 4414514, at *61.)

Here, because it is difficult to establish the specific harm Plaintiffs endured as a result of defendants' use of their likenesses, the Court will presume injury as allowed by Section 3344 and impose the statutory penalty of $750 per Plaintiff.

D. Defendants Violated Business & Professions Code § 17200

"Unfair competition" includes any "unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice and [also includes any] unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising." (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200.)

Whether conduct is a "business practice" within Section 17200 is a question of fact dependent on the circumstances of each case. The test is probably less exacting than that required by Evidence Code § 1105 to prove a business custom or habit. (Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal.App.3d 408, 416.) A "practice" may be found based on nothing more than "a pattern of behavior pursued as a business practice." (People v. Casa Blanca Convalescent Homes, Inc. (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 509, 527.) Section 17200 even covers single acts of misconduct. (Klein v. Earth Elements, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 965, 969.)

"Unlawful, unfair or fraudulent" act or practice is framed in the disjunctive. So, business conduct that is not "unlawful" or "fraudulent" may nonetheless be prohibited as "unfair." (Cel-Tech Communications, Inc. v. Los Angeles Cellular Telephone Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 163, 180.)

A business practice is not immune from Section 17200 merely because it has become customary or habitual either for the defendant or the defendant's industry. (Casa Blanca, 159 Cal.App.3d at 527.)

Section 17200 "was intentionally framed in its broad, sweeping language, precisely to enable judicial tribunals to deal the innumerable new schemes which the fertility of man's invention would contrive." (Cel-Tech, 20 Cal.4th at 180.) Unfair business practices may "run the gamut of human ingenuity and chicanery," and courts construe Section 17000 accordingly. (Id.) The overriding purpose and priority of Section 17200 is the protection of the unwary from being duped by the unscrupulous. (Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal.3d 800, 808.) Section 17200 and its remedies are cumulative to the remedies of all other laws. (Wang v. Massey Chevrolet (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 856.)

i. Defendants Violated Section 17200's Prohibition on Unlawful Business Practices

The violation of virtually any law – civil, criminal, federal, state, municipal, statutory, regulatory or court made – is a violation of the "unlawful" prong of Section 17200. (Saunders v. Superior Court (1997) 27 Cal.App.4th 832, 838-839.)

Here, the Court's findings that Defendants are liable to Plaintiffs for fraud (including intentional misrepresentation, concealment, and false promise), for misappropriation of likeness (common law and Civ. Code § 3344), and fraudulent transfer support a further finding that Defendants violated Section 17200's prohibition on unlawful business practices. The Court finds that all Plaintiffs suffered an injury-in-fact caused by the Defendants' unlawful conduct.

ii. Defendants Violated Section 17200's Prohibition on UnfairBusiness Practices

(Drum v. San Fernando Valley Bar Ass'n (2010) 182 Cal.App.4th 247, 256-257.)

One test, as noted by the Fourth District, is whether the alleged business practice "is immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially injurious to consumers and requires the court to weigh the utility of the defendant's conduct against the gravity of the harm to the alleged victim." (See Bardin v. Daimlerchrysler Corp. (2006) 136 Cal.App.4th 1255.)

Here, the Court's earlier findings that Defendants are liable to Plaintiffs for fraud (including intentional misrepresentation, concealment, and false promise) and for misappropriation of likeness (common law and Civ. Code § 3344) support a further finding that Defendants violated Section 17200's prohibition on unfair business practices. The Court finds that all Plaintiffs suffered an injury-in-fact caused by the Defendants' conduct.

iii. Defendants Violated Section 17200's Prohibition on Fraudulent Business Practices

A business practice is "fraudulent" within the meaning of Section 17200 if "members of the public are likely to be deceived." (Committee on Children's Television v. General Foods Corp. (1983) 35 Cal.3d 197, 211.)

Under Section 17200, a business practice may be "fraudulent" without the plaintiff proving intent, as in common law fraud, requiring the proof of intent, scienter, actual reliance, or damage. Actual deception is not required. All that is required is proof that "members of the public are likely to be deceived." (Schnall v. Hertz Corp. (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 1144, 1167.)

A "fraudulent" business practice can include a deceptive manner in which otherwise lawful contract terms are presented, advertised, or marketed. (See People v. Dollar Rent-A-Car Systems, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 119 [car rental company engaged in deceptive acts in the manner in which its sales force described the collision damage waiver to customers]; Podolsky v. First Healthcare Corp. (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 632, 649 [nursing home engaged in deceptive acts when it presented "third party guarantee" agreements to families of patients, misleading them into thinking their signatures were required as a condition to admitting their loved ones to the facility].)

Here, the Court's earlier findings that Defendants are liable to Plaintiffs for fraud (including intentional misrepresentation, concealment, and false promise) and for misappropriation of likeness (common law and Civ. Code § 3344), as well as the Court's finding all Plaintiffs suffered an injury-in-fact caused by the Defendants' conduct, support a further finding that Defendants violated Section 17200's prohibition on fraudulent business practices.

iv. All Defendants are Liable for the Section 17200 Violations

Section 17200 authorizes direct liability on any "person" engaged in prohibited conduct, which includes "natural persons, corporations, firms, partnerships, joint stock companies, associations and other organizations of persons." (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17201, 17203.)

In addition to direct liability, vicarious liability principles apply to violations:

1. Corporate officers may be subject to liability for the Section 17200 violations of their corporations, especially with knowledge and involvement in the subject as may be achieved." (Jayhill Corp., 9 Cal.3d at 286 [trial court has inherent power to order Defendants make restitution to those defrauded].) Restitution does not require "individualized proof of deception, reliance, and injury if necessary to prevent the use or employment of an unfair practice." (West v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal.4th 1254.) Restitution may consist of "money or property that defendants took directly from plaintiff." (Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1146-1147.)

vi. The Court Awards Declaratory Relief in the Form of Voiding the Purported Model Release Agreements

The Court may award declaratory relief in a Section 17200 action. (AICCO, Inc. v. Insurance Co. of North America (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 579, 590.)

vii. The Court Orders a Permanent and Mandatory Injunction against Defendants

Section 17204 permits injunctions by "any person acting for the interests of itself...or the general public." (Herr v. Nestle U.S.A., Inc. (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 779, 789.) The Legislature "intended ... to permit courts to enjoin ongoing wrongful business conduct in whatever context such activity might occur." (Committee on Children's Television, Inc., 35 Cal.3d at 210.) In exercising this mandate, courts can protect the public's right to be protected from fraud and deceit and may enter injunctive relief on that basis alone. (People ex rel. Mosk v. National Research Co. of Calif. (1962) 201 Cal.App.2d 765, 771.)

Mandatory injunctions are permissible under Section 17200 to make up for past misleading statements and conduct. (Consumers Union of U.S., Inc. v. Alta-Dena Certified Dairy (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 963, 972-974.) The mandatory injunction requiring an affirmative disclosure to cure deceptive advertising practices is authorized under Section 17200. (Id. [court of appeal affirmed trial court's order of injunction that required a dairy guilty of false advertising to place a warning on all of its advertisements and products for the next 10 years].)

This is because "an injunction against future violations might have some deterrent effect, [but] it is only a partial remedy since it does not correct the consequences of past conduct." (Id. at 973.) An "order which commands a party only to go and sin no more simply allows every violator a free bite at the apple." (Id. [internal cites omitted].)

The Ninth Circuit has similarly ordered mandatory injunctions requiring an insurer to rewrite its insurance policy to conform to law. (Chabner v. United of Omaha Life Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 225 Fed.3d 1042, 1053.) And, in Federal Trade Commission cases, courts have frequently approved of mandatory or corrective disclosures. (See, e.g., Grolier, Inc. v. FTC (9th Cir. 1983) 699 Fed.2d 983, 987.)

Here, based on the above findings (including the testimony of Defendant Wolfe and Jane Doe A, which established Defendants were continuing this conduct even through the time of trial and that Defendants' scheme continued to target other members of the public both in California and nationwide), the Court orders an injunction, infra.

E. Defendants' are Liable for Fraudulent Transfer

The Court finds that Defendants' transfers of video rights, funds, and other assets to Oh Well Media, Ltd. and Sidle Media, Ltd. ("the Vanuatu entities") were fraudulent and are therefore voidable under the Uniform Voidable Transactions Act (UVTA) (Civ. Code, § 3439, et seq.)

Notably, these assets are the fruits of Defendants' fraudulent activity which is the subject of this action, including their tortious conduct towards Plaintiffs themselves.

The purpose of the UVTA "undoubtedly is to prevent debtors from placing property which legitimately should be available for the satisfaction of demands of creditors beyond [creditors'] reach." (Tatung Co., Ltd. v. Shu Tze Hsu (C.D. Cal. 2016) 217 F. Supp. 3d 1138, 1186, citing Borgfeldt v. Curry (1914) 25 Cal. App. 624.) Here, the Court voids Defendants' transfer of assets to the Vanuatu entities to prevent them from placing anything of value beyond Plaintiffs' reach.

A transfer is voidable as to a creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made, 95 if the debtor made the transfer as follows:

⁹⁵ Plaintiffs are creditors within the meaning Civil Code section 3439.01(c) even though their claims have not yet been reduced to judgment. A "claim" is merely "a right to payment, whether or not reduced to judgment, [...] contingent, [...] or disputed[.]" (Civ. Code § 3439.01, subd. (b).) "Certainly, for purposes of the Uniform

-172-[PROPOSED] STATEMENT OF DECISION

i. Defendants Transferred Assets to Vanuatu with the Intent to Hinder, Delay, or Defraud the Plaintiffs in this Action and Without Receiving Reasonably Equivalent Value

Evidence of Defendants' intent to hinder, delay, or defraud the Plaintiff-creditors by transferring their assets to Vanuatu entities is persuasive.

Regarding ownership of the Vanuatu entities, the evidence indicates that, as discussed above, they are owned either by Pratt and Wolfe or by insiders and agents acting on Defendants' behalf and under their control: that Pratt himself owns or controls Oh Well Media and that Pratt and Wolfe co-own and control Sidle. Consequently, the transfers at issue are the functional equivalent of taking the assets out of one pocket and putting them in the other because the transfers do not divest Defendants of possession of the assets.

While the transfers themselves were not concealed, many details and information surrounding them are not in evidence. There is no explanation why these transactions occurred, who Charles Pane is and why he is signing as a director, or what Bubblegum Films and BLL Media received in return. One agreement was backdated. Pane did not appear. The purported licensing agreement never materialized. Defendants' position that the transfers were part of an effort to "fix mistakes in the corporate structure" and that Oh Well Media and Sidle Media (which did not exist prior to September 2015) were "meant to have the rights all along" is not convincing. What is persuasive to the Court is that these are not legitimate sales or transfers to true third parties but a way of moving and hiding assets to avoid creditors. There is a lack of information and documentary evidence of the transfers in this case.

The Court finds these transfers were made while Defendants were under the threat of being sued for their fraudulent practices. The transfers occurred after Defendants had operated their scheme for eight years and received dozens of complaints from models claiming to be defrauded. Defendants were under the constant threat that one or more of these models would take legal action. As Defendants themselves maintained at trial, they saw the prospect of lawsuits coming. The Court finds that transferring their assets off-shore was one of the protective measures they took to ensure that any model who sued would have nothing to recover.

The record indicates that the assets conveyed in these transfers constituted a significant portion of Defendants' assets. Pratt admitted in his third deposition that, in January 2019, his bankruptcy schedules stated—under penalty of perjury—that all of his companies had a net worth of zero. This was because the value had been transferred to the Vanautu entities, leaving ostensibly empty shells in the United States. Consequently, the Court finds that the transfers at issue left Defendants with little to their names.

There is little in the record showing that Defendants received any consideration for either of the transfers. Defendants asserted that they benefited in the form of a written licensing agreement, but such never materialized.

In addition, the Court considers Pratt's own statements about his plan to ensure that "the models won't get a dime" to be compelling evidence of his intent. ⁹⁷ Pratt followed up by absconding before or during trial, ignoring a notice to appear and an arrest warrant issued by this Court. These are strong indicia of his intent to escape liability and his intent regarding the transfers.

At the time of the transfers, Defendants had deliberately defrauded many women as part of a longstanding scheme; they were faced with complaints of fraud from dozens of models, who experienced devastating consequences and harm. It was merely a matter of time before the models began to take legal action. Defendants also were aware that the injuries and damages caused by their distribution practices—including dissemination of models' videos and identities in their communities—were highly substantial on an individual level and massive in the aggregate.

Defendants took deliberate steps to avert the eventuality of a large judgment against them.

One measure was compelling women to sign the documents. But Defendants could not have reasonably believed that signatures obtained on documents were airtight in the face of allegations of fraud. Thus, in accordance with Pratt's determination that "the models won't get a dime," Defendants funneled their assets to Vanautu where they believed models could not get them.

Based on the foregoing, the Court finds that Defendants' transferred their assets to entities located on the island of Vanuatu, with the intent to hinder, delay or defraud the Plaintiffs. The transfers were fraudulent transactions under Civil Code section 3439.04(a) and are therefore voidable by Plaintiffs.

F. Defendants are Jointly and Severally Liable to Plaintiffs⁹⁸

The Court finds Defendants jointly and severally liable on the grounds Defendants are: (i) in a single business enterprise/alter egos and (ii) partners/joint venturers.

Defendants are Jointly and Severally Liable as a Single Business Enterprise

Under the alter ego doctrine, a court may disregard the corporate form and hold one corporation liable for the debts of an affiliated corporation. (Toho-Towa Co., Ltd v. Morgan Creek Productions, Inc. (2013) 217 Cal.App.4th 1096, 1109, citing Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1220, 1249.) If corporations are a "single business enterprise," the Court may pierce the corporate veil. (Toho-Towa, supra, 217 Cal.App.4th at 1107.) "[This] 'single-business-enterprise' theory is an equitable doctrine applied to reflect partnershiptype liability principles...." (Id. at 1108.)

The "single business enterprise" doctrine depends on the facts and circumstances of each case, but some factors that tend to establish it are: (1) a common venture; (2) common ownership; (3) common addresses and locations; (4) common management and employees; (5) common legal counsel; (6) common assets and resources; and (7) no arms-length transactions. (Las Palmas Associates, supra, 235 Cal.App.3d at 1249 – 1250; Pan Pacific Sash & Door Co. v. Greendale Park, Inc. (1958) 166 Cal.App.2d 652, 658 – 660; Toho-Towa, supra, 217 Cal.App.4th at 1108–09; O'Donnell v. Weintraub (1968) 260 Cal.App.2d 352, 358.)

Here, the substantial evidence presented at trial (as well as Defendants' failure to explain such evidence) supports a finding of a single business enterprise during the relevant time period among all defendants:

(1) Common Venture

Based on the findings above, the Court finds a common venture among all Defendants.

The Court recognizes Domi Publications, LLC appealed two anti-SLAPP motions and there is a stay with respect to the Jane Doe Nos. 15-22 complaints against Domi Publications, LLC only. Therefore, these findings, as to Domi Publications, LLC only, are limited to Jane Doe Nos. 1-14's complaint.

Based on the findings above, the Court finds common ownership among all Defendants.

(3) Common Addresses and Locations

Based on the findings above, the Court finds common addresses and locations among all

(4) Common Management and Employees

Based on the findings above, the Court finds common management and employees among

The Court finds common legal counsel among the Defendants. Domi and all defendants have a joint defense agreement and have asserted a common interest privilege. [10/3/19 Trial Tr. at 31:24-28).] Panakos Law, APLC (current counsel for Pratt, Wolfe, Garcia, BLL Media, Inc. BLL Media Holdings, LLC, EG Publications, Inc., Merro Media Holdings, LLC, and Merro Media, Inc.) previously represented Domi Publications, LLC in this action. Further, Panakos Law, APLC (BLL Media, Inc. and Pratt's counsel) incorporated Domi. (7/17/18 Wiederhold Depo. 278:4-9.)

Based on the findings above, the Court finds a lack of arm's length transactions among all

(8) Failure to Find a Single Business Enterprise Would Result in an Injustice

Finally, as single business enterprise is a species of alter ego-type liability, the trial further elicited evidence supporting the second prong of alter ego (i.e., that failure to find the Defendants as

Valorie Moser testified Pratt sold his Lamborghini and Rancho Santa Fe house to avoid collection in this lawsuit. Pratt said he was doing this, so "The models weren't going to get a dime." (9/29/19 Trial Transcript, pg. 10-11, 60.) Ms. Moser also testified as to Pratt's intentions for leaving the country ["to avoid paying the models in this case"] and filing bankruptcy ["as soon as I bankrupt the business, they are fucked"]. (Id. at 63, 65.)

In his bankruptcy petition, Pratt declared under oath that he is personally insolvent. Pratt also declared, under oath, that, with regard to his entities (including defendants BLL Media, Inc., BLL Media Holdings, LLC, EG Publications, Inc., and Domi Publications, LLC), the "[a]ssets are exceeded by liabilities, thus not worth anything. Company has no resaleable value."

Wolfe confirmed defendants shut down their website, www.GirlsDoToys.com, during the litigation. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 43.)

Wolfe testified that Pratt left the country, through Tijuana, Mexico, right before or during trial. (10/1/19 Trial Tr., pg. 210-11.) As Pratt ignored Plaintiffs' Notice to Appear with documents, the Court granted Plaintiffs' application for an arrest warrant.

Pratt transferred his 50% interest in Domi, and there is no evidence in the record to establish that consideration was given. (10/3/19 Trial Tr. 26:24-27:9.)

ii. Defendants are Jointly and Severally Liable as Partners and Joint Venturers

Partners and joint venturers are both liable for the torts committed by other partners/joint venturers committed within the scope of the partnership/joint venture. (See, CACI 3711 and 3712.)

The distinction between joint ventures and partnerships is not sharply drawn. A joint venture usually involves a single business transaction, whereas a partnership may involve 'a continuing business for an indefinite or fixed period of time.' Yet a joint venture may be of longer duration and greater complexity than a partnership. From a legal standpoint, both relationships are virtually the same. Accordingly, the courts freely apply partnership law to joint ventures when appropriate.

(Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 Cal.3d 476, 482.) "The incidents of a joint venture are in all important respects the same as those of a partnership. One such incident of partnership is that all partners are jointly and severally liable for partnership obligations, irrespective of their individual partnership interests. Because joint and several liability arises from the partnership or joint venture, Civil Code section 1431.2 [Proposition 51] [providing for an assessment of comparative fault

Wolfe hung up the phone on complaining models in the same fashion as Pratt. -178-[PROPOSED] STATEMENT OF DECISION

"In an action for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, where it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, the plaintiff, in addition to the actual damages, may recover damages for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant." (Civ. Code § 3294(a).) The public purpose of punitive damages is to punish wrongdoing and deter future misconduct by either the defendant or other potential wrongdoers. (Bardis v. Oates (2004) 119 Cal.App.4th 1; Textron Financial Corp. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 1061.)

"Malice" for punitive damages purposes means "conduct which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others." (Civ. Code § 3294 (c)(1).)
"Oppression" for purposes of a punitives award means "despicable conduct that subjects a person to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights." (Civ. Code § 3294 (c)(2).)
"Fraud" for purposes of a punitives award means "an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of thereby depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury."
(Civ. Code § 3294(c)(3).)

"Clear and convincing" evidence for punitive damages means a "high probability." (CACI 201; Broadman v. Commission on Judicial Performance (1998) 18 Cal.4th 1079, 1090.)

Here at trial, clear and convincing evidence established defendants acted with the requisite oppression, fraud, and/or malice. Considering all of the facts found in this Proposed Statement of Decision, including Defendants' calculated steps and mechanism to defraud models, Defendants' failure to change their fraudulent conduct despite pleas from prior models (including suicidal threats), Defendants' posting (and/or allowing) model and family personal contact information, Defendants' harassing models (e.g., Jane Doe 1 at her law school), Defendant's attempting to pay/intimidate witnesses, and Defendants' paying third parties to harass Plaintiffs' counsel, the Court finds Defendants' actions meet each of the "malice, oppression or fraud" standards. (Civ. Code § 3294(c).)

ii. In Determining the Amount of Punitive Damages, the Court Considered Defendants' Reprehensible Actions over Many Years, and Defendants' Obfuscation Regarding Their Net Worth

Under California law, the measure or amount of punitive damages is not subject to any "per se" standards. The trier of fact has broad discretion in assessing an appropriate amount and will be reversed only for an "excessive" award where it appears that discretion was exercised with "passion or prejudice." (Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 908, 114 CR 622; Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910; CACI Nos. 3942, 3949.)

"[T]he calculation of punitive damages does not involve strict adherence to a rigid formula but instead involves 'a fluid process of adding or subtracting depending on the nature of the acts and the effect on the parties and the worth of the defendants." (Gagnon v. Continental Cas. Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 1604; Rufo v. Simpson (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 573, 623-624.) The more reprehensible the act, the greater the appropriate "punishment." (Id.) Repeated misconduct is more reprehensible than an isolated instance of wrongdoing; thus, a recidivist may be punished more severely than a first-time offender. (Lopez v. Watchtower Bible & Tract Soc. of N.Y., Inc. (2016) 246 Cal.App.4th 566, 592.) This is especially true where defendant was motivated by monetary gain and in fact reaped substantial profits from the conduct in question. (Johnson v. Ford Motor Co. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1191, 1207.)

Evidence of "net worth" is not essential to upholding a punitive damages award.

Profitability of the misconduct of the defendant is also a sufficient basis for awarding punitive damages. (Cummings Med. Corp. v. Occupational Med. Corp. (1992) 10 Cal.App.4th 1291, 1298.)

Where defendant makes little effort to refute plaintiff's evidence regarding defendant's wealth and engages in conduct intentionally designed to conceal assets or give testimony that is evasive, nonresponsive or false, the trier of fact has wide latitude (per Evid.Code § 413) to draw inferences from the evidence unfavorable to defendant. (County of San Bernardino v. Walsh (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 533, 546-547; Green v. Laibco, LLC (2011) 192 Cal.App.4th 441, 449-454.)

Here, the Court found the evidence at trial established the Defendants' actions, which were repeated over many years (and despite pleas and complaints to stop), were reprehensible.

Pratt was served with a notice to appear at trial and to provide financial records through 2019. Pratt failed to appear and the Court ordered an arrest warrant be issued. The Court also finds Pratt to be less than credible and forthcoming in responding to some financial condition questions regarding him and his entities in his Civil Code Section 3295 deposition.

Expert Robert Taylor testified that the present value of the future cash flow of BLL Media, Inc. from their inventory of 200 videos was $4,672,194; further, the parties stipulated that the profits generated from use of the plaintiffs' names and likenesses total $1,025,831.50. Due to Pratt's obfuscation, Mr. Taylor's testimony was based on incomplete financial records provided to him from Pratt and BLL Media. Mr. Taylor did not have complete financial records from the defendants for 2019, particularly because Pratt refused to appear at trial and produce the records. Accordingly, Mr. Taylor testified that he had concerns that his analysis was not as accurate as it could be because he did not have up-to-date records to review and analyze.

The Court finds for Plaintiffs on the alter ego theory as to all Defendants. As stated above, all Defendants operate as a single business enterprise and a joint venture. Defendants engaged in fraudulent transfers of their assets to the Vanuatu entities in order to conceal those assets. The Court finds that the Defendants have not been forthcoming in discovery regarding their financial condition leaving little evidence before the Court about the value of the transferred assets or any other assets owned or controlled by the Defendants. The intent to obfuscate and avoid financial responsibility is manifested by Pratt's statement, "the models won't get a dime."

H. Damages and Remedies

The Court awards damages and orders equitable relief as follows:

a. The Court Awards Economic and Non-Economic Damages

As the Court found liability on all remaining causes of action, supra, Plaintiffs are entitled to recover economic and noneconomic damages arising out of Defendants' unauthorized use of Plaintiffs' videos. The Parties stipulated that Defendants received a total of $1,025,831.50 in profits from the use of the twenty-two Plaintiffs' videos. Thus, it is undisputed that Defendants derived $46,628.70 from the use of each Plaintiff's video(s).

Defendants must obtain a model's explicit, unambiguous consent in order to use her name

- Defendants are prohibited from using, publishing, licensing or distributing Plaintiffs' images, likenesses, videos or copyrights. Defendants must remove Plaintiffs' images, likenesses, or videos produced by them from the internet sites owned or controlled by Defendants. Defendants must take active steps to have such images, likenesses and videos removed from circulation and to safeguard Plaintiffs' privacy.
- Defendants are prohibited from using or disseminating Plaintiffs' names or personal information in connection with their images, likenesses or videos and must take active steps to have such information removed from circulation and to safeguard Plaintiffs' privacy.

2. Restitution

Based on the findings herein, the Court orders Defendants to return to Plaintiffs all of Plaintiffs' property they took, including images, likenesses, videos, and/or copyrights.

Avoidance of Transfers 3.

Based on the findings herein, the Court voids all purported transfers of Plaintiffs' images, likenesses, videos, and/or copyrights to the Vanuatu entities.

4. Declaratory Relief

Based on the findings herein, the Court voids and renders unenforceable all purported model releases and other agreements between Plaintiffs and Defendants. Court finds that Plaintiffs hold all rights, title, and interest in images, likenesses, and videos featuring Plaintiffs produced by Defendants.

c. The Court Awards Punitive Damages

The Court, having found by clear and convincing evidence the Defendants engaged in malice, oppression, or fraud, supra, awards each Plaintiff the sum of $150,000 against all Defendants, jointly and severally.

CONCLUSION

The Court therefore finds in favor of Plaintiffs in the aggregate amounts of $9,475,831.50 in compensatory damages and $3,300,000 in punitive damages against all Defendants, jointly and severally, plus the additional relief stated.
